U. S. CONSIDERING CANCELING OCEAN MAIL CONTRACTS

Administration Checking Disclosures on Subsidies —Problem of Emergency Service May Deter Action

PRIVATE LINES MAKE OFFERS FOR AIR MAIL

They May Supply Equipment Instead of Army Pending New Awards by Postoffice Department.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — The Government tonight was considering matching its wholesale cancellation of airmail contracts with some similar action on the ocean mail contracts.

Even while it was perfecting the organization of an army-mail flying unit to tide over until new air contracts could be let, administration and congressional leaders were quietly checking over the reports of the long inquiry into ocean mail subsidies.

Officials were disinclined openly to discuss the merchant marine phase of the mail subsidy, but indicated definite attention was being given it.

The Senate Committee which recently reported information on which the airmail contract cancellations were based has compiled a huge mass of information from months of investigation on ocean mail.

Chairman Black of the committee recently said "the record discloses that the huge subsidies paid by the Government to build up a merchant marine have been diverted from the channel and have been largely spent in high salaries, extravagant expense accounts, highly paid lobbyists and huge dividends."

Information following the general nature of this comment has been made available to the administration.

Possible Complications.

The problems which might arise from any general cancellation of ocean mail contracts, it was pointed out, however, would be somewhat more difficult than those in the air mail contract cancellation. In the latter instance, the Postoffice Department had completed within 24 hours of the cancellation a complete skeleton plan for the Army to fly the mail.

In the instance of ocean mail contracts, the distance and volume of the mail would immediately preclude use ow planes to any extent. However, it was pointed out that here again the War Department, as well as the Navy Department, could be of assistance, the War Department pinch-hitting with troop transports which are constantly in operation and the Navy with ships of varying size and speed.

It was noted, however, that the cost of operation of these carriers would be vastly greater than those of airplanes substituting for private carriers of mail.

Overseas Air Mail.

The administration today disclosed that it was giving serious consideration to action on airmail contracts involving carriers to foreign countries, primarily to Carribean Islands, Central and South America.

While Army planes could be substituted in those services until new contracts were made, postal authorities were confronted with technicalities arising out of treaties with other nations. The use of aircraft belonging to the fighting branch of the Government was one of these complications.

In a press conference during the day, Harllee Branch, Assistant Postmaster General in Charge of Airmail, emphasized throughout an hour of talking the idea that the use of the Army planes for domestic airmail was intended only as a temporary measure.

While he worked out the details of the Army operations in a long conference with Major General Benjamin Foulois, Chief of the Air Corps, and Eugene Vidal, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for aviation, the discussions all were understood to be predicated on the pinch-hitting plan.

Private Offers Considered.

There arose, in fact, the possibility that no Army plane ever would take off with a load of mail.

It was pointed out—and given substance by officers of the lines themselves—that independent private lines could carry the mail until the long process of advertising for,

Roosevelt's Failure to Indorse Specific Stock Market Bill Opens Way for Compromise

Fight Will Be to Substitute Commerce Department's Plan for Fletcher-Rayburn Measure —Prof. Frankfurter Influenced Latter.

DOUBT OF VALIDITY OF NRA EXPRESSED BY FEDERAL JUDGE

Court at Chicago Denies Government Plea for Writ Against Alleged Oil Code Violator.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Federal Judge John P. Barnes in a decision today said he had doubts as to the constitutionality of the National Recovery Act and added that if the act was valid there was no limit as to the powers Congress might delegate to the President.

Judge Barnes' views were included in his decision denying the Government's plea for a temporary injunction to restrain an oil company from an alleged violation of Rule 17 of Article 5 of the petroleum code. It prohibits the giving away of premiums with the sale of gasoline.

Judge Barnes held in effect that there is no justification under the Constitution for such a code. The alleged violations in the case before him affected only intra-state commerce, he held.

In his opinion, Judge Barnes reviewed the Minnesota mortgage foreclosure case, and the Houston E. and W. Railway case, as it relates to the powers of regulating commerce.

Judge Barnes said that while he did not feel justified in declaring the Recovery Act invalid, "it seems to the Court that Congress, in this (NRA) act, has been so indefinite in its pronouncement of the legislative policy that the principle of constitutional law which we are considering has ceased to have any effect in national affairs.

"If the Congress may constitutionally delegate power as it has delegated it in the National Industrial Recovery Act, it is difficult to see why the Congress may not, in an act, declare that its policy is to provide for the general welfare of all the people and that, accordingly, the President may promulgate such rules and regulations, having the effect of law, as will in his discretion best provide for the welfare of all the people, and when that happens constitutionally constitutional government, as we know it will cease to exist."

In the case of the Minnesota mortgage law, said Judge Barnes, the Supreme Court was considering an exercise of power by a State which possessed all powers except those prohibited to it and those delegate to the United States. In the present case, he said, the court was considering the exercise of power by the Federal Government, which "is a Government of enumerated powers, a Government which possesses only those powers which have been granted to it."

"It must be held that emergency does not create Federal power," said the Judge.

Judge Barnes set March 5 for a final ruling on the motion for a permanent injunction.

NAZI WOMEN ASSURED OF CARE FOR ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN

Party Leaders Address Mass Meeting of 25,000 in Sports Palast, Berlin.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Feb. 10. — Twenty-five thousand Nazi women were told tonight at a huge meeting in the Sports Palast that prospective mothers of illegitimate children will be cared for by the Nazi state.

Erich Hilgenfeldt, newly appointed Nazi women's leader, declared, "we Nazis believe in life. Therefore, we will go to the unwed expectant mother and help her without assuming to condemn her. In my opinion, this represents a much higher moral standard than ridiculing her."

There was enthusiastic applause when Robert Ley, Chancellor Hitler's trade union commissioner, referring to Catholics, said the concordat would be respected, but that cleavage to nation along religious lines would not be tolerated. He said: "When man, who is the natural leader, is out defending the country, we need German woman leadership at home, and the Nazi women's movement will supply it when the time comes. We will not permit German womanhood to be dragged into the mire of politics."

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Although Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Harvard is now in England lecturing at Oxford University, his influence ranks with the highest in the Roosevelt Administration. The latest legislative proposal to carry marks of his political philosophy is the stock market regulation bill, sponsored by Chairman Fletcher of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee and Chairman Rayburn of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

The bill, which was introduced late yesterday, was virtually written by associates and former students of the Harvard law school professor.

The stock market bill is a complement to the Truth in Securities Act of 1933, which was also a Frankfurter product. President Roosevelt praised Congress yesterday when he said in his message: "This Congress has performed a useful service in regulating the investment business on the part of financial houses and in protecting the investment public in its acquisition of securities."

No Specific Indorsements.

The President's failure, however, to give specific indorsement to the Fletcher-Rayburn bill has caused doubt that the measure will be enacted in its present drastic form. Hearings will be started by the Senate and House committees next week and it is safe to predict that a strong drive will be made to substitute the so-called King bill, which embodies the recommendations of the Commerce Department Committee, for the strict regulation proposed by Fletcher and Rayburn.

The drafters of the Fletcher-Rayburn bill are prepared for this move. Among those who helped draft the bill are Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Banking and Currency Committee in its Wall Street investigation; Max Lowenthal, alert Harvard law graduate; two others of Frankfurter's former students now in Government service, and a noted writer on financial subjects.

The disclosures of the Wall Street investigation are one of the direct causes of the proposed stock market regulation. The practices of brokers, of Wall Street operators, of corporation officials who used their "inside" information for their own personal profit, will be used by the sponsors of the legislation in their opposition to relaxing the proposed drastic regulation of the sale of securities.

Where Fight Will Be.

The greatest efforts for compromise will not be for major changes in the regulations of the security exchanges but rather in the proposals to restrict the speculative activities of corporation officials and large stockholders and to demand greater publicity for the financial condition of corporations whose securities are sold to investors.

Perhaps the most far-reaching provision in the bill is that all securities listed on a registered exchange shall be subject to regulations comparable to those made by the Federal Trade Commission for the insurance of new securities under the Truth in Securities Act. Strong pressure has already been brought on Congress for modifying the Securities Act. The Trade Commission regulations were drawn up by one of Prof. Frankfurter's associates, Commissioner James M. Landis, a former professor of law at Harvard.

The Commerce Department Committee report contained no such harsh proposals. That committee, which was composed of John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, chairman; Commissioner Landis, of the Trade Commission; A. A. Berle, one of President Roosevelt's economic advisers; Arthur H. Dean of the New York law firm of Sullivan and Cromwell, and Henry J. Richardson, a Washington attorney. This group recommended that Security exchanges should be licensed and be made subject to broad discretionary powers of the Federal Trade Commission.

To Cite Specific Abuses.

Advocates of drastic regulation of security exchanges and greater publicity for corporation officials and their speculative operations are prepared to defend their bill against compromises with the Commerce Department committee report. Their strategy, as far as can be discerned now, is to have ready specific instances of abuses and unethical conduct whenever any provision of their bill is attacked.

Evidence already given the Senate Banking and Currency Committee furnishes a wealth of material for such defense. If someone contends that the provision is too severe which says the owner of 5 per

DEFENSE ATTACKS DEATHBED STORY OF DR. KENNEDY

Attempts to Show Surgeon Was in Dying Stupor When He Told of Poisoned Highball.

CLASH OVER TIME OF STATEMENT

Two Specialists Called by Dr. Dean's Counsel — Declaration Quoted by Second Brother.

By the Associated Press.

GREENWOOD, Miss., Feb. 10.—Defense attorneys for Dr. Sarah Ruth Dean, on trial for murder, today sought to tear down the reputed deathbed accusation of Dr. John Preston Kennedy that the woman physician poisoned him with a whisky highball. They contended that Kennedy was already in a dying stupor and not responsible at the time of his declaration.

Having questioned two State witnesses on the point without definitely establishing its contention, defense counsel said tonight they had summoned two specialists who examined Kennedy at the hospital on the night of his statement and who would testify that he was then "unconscious or in a stupor." The witnesses said that statement was made "on a Wednesday night" early last August.

"If Dr. A. J. Wilde (an eye specialist) examined Preston that Wednesday night and he was in a stupor or unconscious, then your brother was in a stupor when he made the dying statement. Is that a fact?" Defense Attorney J. J. Breland today repeatedly asked Dr. Barney Kennedy, State witness and brother of the dead man, who was on the stand all day.

Disagreement Over Time.

Shifting about in the witness stand, Barney Kennedy finally answered: "Yes," then added: "But the statement was made Wednesday night and I'm positive that was not the night Dr. Wilde examined him."

During an argument with State attorneys over some of his questions, Breland exclaimed: "Dr. Wilde told us he was there Wednesday night."

Subsequently, Breland said both Dr. Wilde and Dr. A. E. Gordon, who attended Preston Kennedy, had been summoned as defense witnesses.

After two weeks in the courtroom Dr. Dean showed no outward signs of emotion in the face of the State effort to prove that she murdered Dr. Kennedy with poison after having caused a divorce between Kennedy and his wife. Dr. Kennedy died after a 10-day illness last summer, at a time the State says he was planning to re-wed his wife. The defense has insinuated that on the contrary he was planning to marry Dr. Dean.

Brother Breaks Down.

Stacks of love letters which passed between the two are scheduled to be read to the jury next week.

Dr. Barney Kennedy was more composed today as he told the jury of standing by his brother's bedside and hearing the latter accuse Dr. Dean of murder. He broke down and wept and once had to leave the stand to be treated for nausea during the original recital.

After the defense had again been overruled on objections to having the story repeated (it was previously told to the jury by Dr. Henry Kennedy, another brother), Special Prosecutor Means Johnson told the witness to quote the dying declaration.

"Boys, my time has come," Barney quoted Preston as saying, "Ruth Dean gave me a drink of whisky with poison in it. . . . Look after my wife and baby. . . . Do what you want, but don't do anything that will keep us from meeting in heaven."

Father Sits Upright.

Dr. J. H. Kennedy, father of the dead surgeon, sat bolt upright among the Kennedy relatives, staring fixedly into space as the recital went forward.

Dr. Dean pushed a black fur back from her shoulders and looked straight at the witness, her face showing no sign of emotion.

As soon as the witness was turned over for cross-examination, Defense Attorney J. J. Breland asked:

"How many times have you been married?"

The State objected and was sustained. Similar objections had prevented the defense from asking Dr. Henry Kennedy about his "divorced wife."

Breland then asked: "Did Pres-

35,000 IN JAPAN GRANTED CLEMENCY AFTER ROYAL BIRTH

Emperor Issues Order Including Majority of Participants in Political Murders.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Feb. 11.—Expressing his joy for the recent birth of the Crown Prince, Emperor Hirohito today ordered mitigation of the punishments of 35,000 of the Empire's 56,000 convicts, including the majority of the participants in recent political murders.

The death sentence of Tomeo Sagoya, convicted of assassinating Premier Yuko Hamaguchi, was commuted to life imprisonment. A life sentence given Kozaburo Tachibana in the assassination of another Premier, Suyoshi Inukai, was reduced to 20 years. Sentences of Naval officers and Army cadets who participated in the Inukai assassination were shortened one-fourth.

Various civil disabilities were removed from 25,000 persons who were outside of jails.

The amnesty was promulgated today in observance of the national holiday, Kigensetsu, supposedly the anniversary of the accession to the throne of the first Emperor Jimmu Tenno in 660 B. C.

PROTESTS ON WITHHOLDING OF NOBEL PEACE PRIZE

Reservation Contrary to Intention of Donor, Swedish and Norwegian Complaints Say.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 10.—Reservation of the Nobel peace prize again this year by the Nobel Committee of Norway has brought protests, in both Sweden and Norway, that the awarding of only 25 prizes in 32 years is contrary to the intention and spirit of Alfred Nobel's will.

The Stockholm Peace Society, protesting the reservation in a published statement, also declares that the prize too often has been awarded to "Presidents, Ministers and other high public officials," and too seldom to "working friends of peace or to really radical proponents of peace and disarmament." Nobel, it was stated at a meeting of the society, wanted to "help dreamers who found it difficult to get attention for their ideas."

If a satisfactory candidate for the prize cannot be found each year, the society insists, the prize money should be released into propaganda work for peace.

In Oslo, the daily newspaper "Dagbladet" is willing to believe that no satisfactory candidates can be found. "It is exactly such times as these," complains the newspaper, "that the Nobel Foundation should utilize to demonstrate for peace."

$40,000,000 GOLD SHIPMENT

Largest in Present Movement From Europe to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Feb. 10.—The liner Europa left Southampton today with what was believed to be the largest gold cargo of the present movement. It was valued at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000. It took on five million pounds sterling at Southampton, while one million pounds was placed aboard in Hamburg and about three million pounds was taken on at Cherbourg.

Eighty tons of gold were shipped from Southampton alone during the last eight days, and since President Roosevelt proclaimed the new gold price, the strong rooms of 30 westbound trans-Atlantic liners have been filled with the yellow metal at various British and continental ports.

REVERSES RULING ON REWARD PAID BY GRAND BANK

U. S. Court of Appeals Declares Deal for Recovery of Loot Not Contrary to Public Policy.

ORDERS NEW TRIAL OF INSURANCE SUIT

Declares Evidence Did Not Necessarily Show That All Parties Assented to Unlawful Agreement.

Payment of a $140,000 reward for the recovery of $822,000 of bonds stolen in the Grand National Bank robbery in 1930 was not against public policy, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals held in an opinion filed here yesterday.

The decision reversed Federal Judge Davis, and remanded for a new trial the suit he threw out of court a year ago, involving counterclaims of the Grand National Bank and the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland. The bank sued the bonding company, seeking to hold it responsible for payment of part of the reward, and the bonding company sued the bank, to recover part of the money it had paid to compensate the bank for its loss.

Judge Davis, holding that the manner in which the bonds were recovered constituted a transaction the law could not countenance, said his court would "decline to supervise distribution among wrong doers of spoils derived from unlawful conduct," and entered judgment against both parties.

Opinion by Judge Gardner.

Circuit Judge Gardner wrote the opinion of the Court of Appeals, which was concurred in by Circuit Judges Woodrough and Booth. The evidence, they held, did not necessarily show that all parties in the transaction which resuted in return of the bonds had manifested assent to an unlawful agreement, and for that reason, they reversed the decision of Judge Davis.

In determining whether the agreement for return of the bonds contravenes the public policy of Missouri, the appellate court held, the laws of Missouri as well as the principles of common law are to be consulted. Whether an agreement is contrary to public policy, the Court held, does not depend solely on local usage, but the Federal courts, exercising concurrent jurisdiction, will give the weight of "persuasive authority" to statutes of the State in which the contract is executed and carried out.

The opinion cites a Missouri statute which defines as contrary to public policy "an agreement to stifle a prosecution, suppress evidence, compound an offense or conceal a crime." Largely on this statute, the appellate court said, Judge Davis based his decision, and the statute is described as not broader than the applicable principles of common law.

Court Makes a Distinction.

"It is to be observed in passing," the appellate court adds, "that this statute covers only a case where a person shall take money or property of another, or a gratuity or reward, while in the instant case, there is no claim that the defendant (bank) or the plaintiff (bonding company) took or received, or had any agreement for taking or receiving, any money or property of another.

"The property for which they were negotiating was property in which they represented owners. The defendant (bank) was either the owner or the bailee of the stolen bonds. It had a right to their possession, and the property was not the property of the robbers.

"Where property has been stolen, or money embezzled, it is not unlawful for the wrongdoer to make restitution and to satisfy the civil liability created by the wrong. Neither does the law prevent one whose property has been stolen or embezzled from compromising with the wrongdoer, if it is not agreed, either expressly or impliedly, that the prosecution for the offense shall be suppressed or stayed.

"So long as there is not included as part of the consideration any agreement, expressed or implied that a criminal prosecution shall be suppressed, stifled or stayed, the contract should be sustained. There was no evidence that there was an expressed agreement that the defendant should suppress evidence of the commission of the robbery, but the lower court was of the opinion that the parties impliedly agreed to consummate the matter in such manner as to prevent officers of

Two Young Men Slip Into Back Office of Woolworth Shop, Threaten Manager's Wife.

The Woolworth five and ten cent store at Delmar boulevard and Aubert avenue was robbed of $359 last night by two well dressed young men who held up several employes without attracting the attention of about 50 customers and other employes until they were about to leave.

The robbers slipped out the side door of the store, opening on Aubert avenue, and no one was found who knew how they left the vicinity.

Miss Mildred Griffith, cashier, and Mrs. Sidney Kernen, wife of the manager, were in a glass-enclosed rear office when the robbers entered, about 8:45 p. m. One of them took up his station near the Aubert avenue entrance, while the other went directly to the rear office, and demanded admittance, displaying a revolver.

The door was locked, but Mrs. Kernen, when the robber threatened to "blow her brains out," admitted him. He scooped up about $50 which Miss Griffith had been counting on a desk top, and ordered her to open the safe. From that he took about $300, putting the money in a black canvas bag.

At about that time a woman customer approached Kernen, who was busy in the middle of the store, and told him of the holdup. He started back, but as he neared the rear office, the other robber left his post at the door, and advancing toward Kernen with his hand in his pocket as if holding a revolver, told him: "You behave yourself and everything's going to be all right."

Kernen made no effort then to interfere with the robbery and in a moment the thief who had been in the rear office rejoined his companion and fled with him. The robbers overlooked about $200 in a drawer of the desk which had been placed in payroll envelopes.

Mr. and Mrs. Kernen live at 4948 Cote Brilliante avenue. Miss Griffith, who is 22 years old, lives at 4765 Plover avenue.

M'CRACKEN TRIES TO GIVE UP TO SENATE BUT FAILS

Lawyer-Lobbyist Cited in Contempt for Withholding Air Mail Records Offers to Surrender but Can't—Warrant Locked Up Till Monday.

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT IS ISSUED FOR HIM

Defense Counsel Hogan Obtains Order Before He Learns Client Is Not Under Arrest — Debate on Three Similar Cases in Senate Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—William P. MacCracken, lawyer-lobbyist for aviation companies and former Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aviation, who was cited by the Senate to answer contempt charges, offered to surrender tonight to the Senate's Sergeant-at-Arms, Chesley W. Jurney, but Jurney did not have the warrant for MacCracken's arrest.

MacCracken was ordered arrested following the removal of important papers relating to air mail contracts from MacCracken's office.

He appeared at Jurney's home tonight and made his offer. Jurney said he rejected the offer because the warrant was locked in Jurney's office at the Senate and it would not be available before noon Monday.

Premature Announcement.

Frank Hogan, attorney for MacCracken, had announced the surrender of his client. Hogan left almost immediately for the home of a Justice of the District of Columbia Supreme Court to apply for a writ of habeas corpus. He evidently did not know that Jurney did not have the warrant in his possession.

MacCracken refused to appear before the Senate yesterday to stand trial with three aviation company officers. He has been missing since then.

The Senate today concluded the taking of testimony and arguments in the cases of the other three men also accused of contempt. They are Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express; Gilbert L. Givvin, its Washington representative, and L. H. Brittin, vice-president of Northwest Airways.

The Senate deferred executive deliberations until Tuesday.

Habeas Corpus Writ Issued.

A short while after MacCracken had appeared at the home of Jurney, Justice O'Donoghue issued the writ of habeas corpus which Hogan sought. The writ is returnable next Monday at 10 a. m.

Later a deputy marshal of the court was sent to Jurney's home to effect MacCracken's release. There he found, however, that MacCracken was not being held.

The fact that Jurney did not have the warrant with him was regarded as indicating that Jurney intended to arrest MacCracken "on his own terms," as he put it earlier in the day when he declined to negotiate with Hogan for a surrender.

Had MacCracken's surrender been accepted tonight, there would have developed a question of jurisdiction between the District of Columbia Supreme Court and the Senate. That was one thing Jurney sought to avoid.

Hogan's Plea for Writ.

In applying for the writ, Hogan said the attempt of the Senate to bring MacCracken before its bar to "punish him" was an invasion by the legislative branch of judicial functions was an infringement on the rights of MacCracken as a citizen.

Hogan told Justice O'Donoghue that his client had appeared, offered to furnish whatever information the Senate desired of him regarding airmail contracts and had made an honest attempt to produce records said to have been removed.

Hogan declared the Senate had a right to require a citizen to appear and furnish information necessary to its legislative function, but had no right to punish a citizen for an action already completed.

When the Deputy Marshal went to Jurney's home to serve the writ of habeas corpus, Jurney told him: "You have asked me to surrender

GENERAL STRIKE CONFRONTS NEW FRENCH CABINET

4-MAN DICTATORSHIP GETS POWER TO ACT

30,000 Soldiers on Duty in Paris—Parliament to Be Dissolved Unless "Useless" Debates End.

(Copyright, 1934.)
By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—The day-old French Cabinet of veteran statesmen listened to echoes of international friction and "red terrorism" at home today and set out to achieve domestic and foreign peace. It created a four-man committee led by Premier Gaston Doumergue to act swiftly in the Central European situation, in which Austro-German relations are a paramount issue.

At its first meeting the "elder statesmen" resolved to suppress mob violence in the streets, which this week led to the killing of 16 and the injuring of thousands, and warned that the French Parliament would be dissolved unless it abandoned its "useless and irritating debates."

They tackled the most pressing problems before them—a general strike Monday which may paralyze all vital services, Communist riots last night, the internal fiscal situation, and the country-shaking Bayonne pawnshop scandal — and moved toward early and decisive action.

Shake-up in Judiciary.

A shake-up in French judicial machinery and the speedy prosecution of the Stavisky case, whose reverberations led to the fatal rioting, were ordered.

The Government determined to enforce the political truce on which it was founded and to face Parliament next week with urgent measures aimed to give the country sure and quick justice.

The proposed measures would cut the red tape held responsible for the freedom of Serge Stavisky, the operator of the Bayonne Pawnshop, for seven years on a swindling charge until the great scandal broke, causing the downfall of two ministries and the flare-up of popular indignation. Stavisky killed himself when police were about to arrest him recently. The pawnshop collapse caused a loss of $40,000,000 to the public.

It was also decided by the Cabinet that a parliamentary committee should conduct the investigation into the Stavisky fiasco and the alleged implication in it of prominent men.

Moscow's Attention Called.

The Communist-inspired disorders last night, when mobs and police engaged in running skirmishes in workers' sections, were understood to have been politely called to Moscow's attention as endangering the good Franco-Soviet relations and harming trade of the two nations, which a recent treaty intended to encourage.

Approval was given for the "directorship" including Vice-Premiers Andre Tardieu and Edouard Herriot and Minister of Foreign Affairs, Louis Barthou.

Its first task will be to seek a quick solution of an international disarmament impasse resulting from Germany's demands for new arms and the disquieting Austrian situation.

Plans to guard the capital and other centers against further disorders during Monday's "anti-fascist" demonstration were completed at the three-hour Cabinet session—one of the longest on record—in the Quai d'Orsay dining room.

Fatalities during the rioting reached 16 with the death today of two more of the victims in Tuesday's and Wednesday's disorders.

Federation Calls Strike.

The French Federation of Labor called the general strike. More than 800,000 civil servants and school teachers announced they would join the demonstration and a complete tie-up was thereby indicated of services like railroads, gas, water, mail and electricity.

Paris was peaceful today but it was a tranquillity inspired partly by fear—the presence of 30,000 soldiers here, and augmented police force, as well as the impending strike.

In the fighting which lasted until early today 10,000 rioters opposed officers across burning barricades. Forty policemen and hundreds of assailants were hurt. Many were arrested.

Seeks Agreement With Italy.

The personnel of the Foreign Affairs Committee was made possible by the fact that Doumergue, Tardieu and Herriot are without portfolios and are able therefore to concentrate with any ministry on any particular problem.

An agreement will be sought with Premier Mussolini of Italy and the Little Entente—Bulgaria, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia — for the strong support of Austria and a general solution of the Central European situation, made tense by what Austria says is Germany's action against her sovereignty.

a man who is not in my custody."

Jurney said the Senate had directed him to arrest MacCracken while the Senate was in session.

MacCracken was still at Jurney's home when the Deputy Marshal arrived with the writ.

Hogan and other attorneys for MacCracken directed him to remain in "custody" at the Sergeant-at-Arms' home until Monday.

The Sergeant-at-Arms immediately communicated with Chairman Black. Later Jurney told newspaper men he was not going to "kick Mr. MacCracken out."

Black was understood to have advised Jurney to go into court Monday morning and say simply that he did not have MacCracken under arrest.

HEARING ON THREE OTHERS CONCLUDED

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — The Senate, in an atmosphere consisting of a curious mixture of drama, comedy and suspense, late today took a recess until Tuesday noon in the contempt trial of three aviation company officials charged with attempting to obstruct the Black committee's investigation of air mail contracts.

Indications pointed to hours, perhaps days of debate behind closed doors before a decision is reached.

Meantime, while William P. MacCracken, airline lawyer, remained a technical fugitive from a Senate warrant, the status of Frank J. Hogan, noted Washington criminal lawyer, attorney for MacCracken, became a favorite subject of discussion among Senators tonight. Hogan had declared publicly that he knew his client's whereabouts, but declined to produce him except under circumstances which would permit him to be freed at once on a writ of habeas corpus.

Senator Black (Dem.), Alabama, chairman of the investigating committee, called attention to a section of the judicial code which provides penalties of one year's imprisonment and $300 fine for anyone obstructing the service of a Federal warrant.

Prisoners at Bar Yesterday.

The three prisoners at the bar of the Senate today completed their defense, and deliberation on their fate will begin Tuesday. They are Harris M. Hanshue, president of Western Air Express; Gilbert L. Givvin, Washington representative of the same company, and Col. L. H. Brittin, vice-president of Northwest Airways.

Brittin, like MacCracken, challenged the authority of the Senate to try a private citizen for contempt, but Hanshue and Givvin tendered a public apology to the Senate for their conduct, and virtually threw themselves on its mercy.

After the Black committee last week issued a subpena for all papers in MacCracken's files relating to air mail contracts, Brittin went to the office, removed some of the papers, and attempted to destroy them, although Postoffice inspectors later recovered the fragments of several from trash sacks in the building basement.

His lawyer pleaded in his behalf that he was "excitable" and "inexperienced," and asked consideration on those grounds.

Givvin also took papers from the same files and sent them to Hanshue, who later returned them. After testifying before the committee earlier that he acted under Hanshue's orders, the young and obviously frightened employe changed his story before the Senate today and said he acted without instructions.

Issue of Jurisdiction.

It was apparent that the Senate's decision will turn largely on an issue of jurisdiction. If it sentences them, or any of them, to jail for the remainder of the present session, an appeal will be taken to the courts. If it decides to certify the record of the case to the local United States District Attorney, the matter will be handled like any other misdemeanor case. The latter course was pursued with respect to Harry Sinclair and Col. Robert W. Stewart. There appeared to be a strong difference of opinion among Senators.

Still another aspect of the complicated and colorful tangle was a denial by Justice Daniel O'Donoghue of the District Supreme Court of a published statement that Hogan had arranged with the Justice to issue a writ for MacCracken's release as soon as he was arrested. The Justice's denial followed expressions of surprise by Senators that a Judge would commit himself before hearing the application. Reporters who sought to approach Justice O'Donoghue's chambers were repulsed by Marshals.

Hogan successfully defended E. L. Doheny and Stewart in the criminal trials which followed the Teapot Dome scandal, and also obtained Stewart's acquittal on a contempt charge. He has had a brilliant record of success in the local courts.

Arguments for Defense.

Seth Richardson of North Dakota, former Assistant United States Attorney-General under the Hoover administration, argued the case for Brittin.

Richardson said that the proceeding constituted "the most solemn challenge to the jurisdiction of this body." He said he would not argue the question, but he urged the lawyers of the Senate to consider it before passing judgment.

Richardson alluded to well-grounded reports that the Senate sergeant-at-arms was waiting to arrest MacCracken until he could find him at a distance from a court which might issue a writ of habeas corpus before MacCracken could be arraigned in the Senate.

"A citizen should not be forced to play a game of hide and seek with his Government," he said. "And I hope that if the unfortunate day comes when you decide to punish my client, we will have a chance in the courts for our white alley, and not have to deal with a dodging sergeant-at-arms."

Lawyer Draws Laughs.

The lawyer unintentially drew laughter from the galleries when he said, "If I had wanted to make up a story for Col. Brittin, I could have made up a better one than that which he told on the stand yesterday."

He said Brittin "did wrong," but pleaded for him on the ground that he had "a one-track mind," that he "operates the only independent air line left in the country," and on the ground that "he has served in the uniform of his country."

Frank Nebeker, attorney for Hanshue and Givvin, also challenged the Senate's jurisdiction, and asserted that the Supreme Court had clearly affirmed that the Senate can punish for contempt "only to prevent obstruction of its processes." Moreover, he insisted that even if Hanshue had committed contempt, he purged himself when he sent the papers back.

Senate Meets Hour Early.

The Senate assembled an hour before the usual time in order to expedite the procedure. The three defendants and their lawyers were in their places, but the vast throng which jammed the galleries yesterday had thinned out perceptibly.

It was obvious from comment among Senators that the explanations given yesterday by Hanshue and Givvin, coupled with their failure to question the Senate's authority, had made a very favorable impression. On the other hand, Brittin's tactics in first challenging the Senate's power to punish him, and then submitting himself to an exhaustive cross-examination, which obviously did not improve his case, mystified Senate lawyers.

MacCracken's Secretary Heard.

Joan Murphy, MacCracken's secretary, testified that Brittin used MacCracken's office constantly last summer, and that copies of his letters were placed in MacCracken's files. The Senate chuckled when the witness said that "Col. Brittin was a very difficult man to work with, and seldom said 'good morning!'"

"Where did he (MacCracken) say he was going?" "To the office of Attorney Hogan."

"Do you know where he is now?" "No, sir."

Damaging testimony against Brittin was given today by Frederick P. Lee, MacCracken's law partner, who declared he warned Brittin that all papers in the office relating to air mail contracts were under subpena, and that Brittin took them anyhow, and attempted to destroy them. Some were later found in the waste paper bins in the basement of his office building.

Lee testified that Brittin "burst into" their office a week ago Thursday, saying he had left some personal papers in the office files. He said he told Brittin all the air mail papers were under subpena, but that he might remove his personal papers.

"I had reason," Lee said, "to believe he had private papers there because I had heard that he was in difficulty with his firm, and that he was having some marital troubles."

Fails to Remember Names.

Although Lee inspected all the papers that Brittin took away, he could recall the name of only one addressee, a "Miss Stein." He remembered that, he explained, "because she was a woman."

He couldn't recall the one addressed to "Dear Ben," who, Brittin testified, is Ben Myers, a Chicago postoffice official. Fragments of the letter were found in the trash bins of Brittin's office building.

Complying with the antique procedure provided in contempt cases, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader, submitted in writing, through Vice-President Garner, this question:

"How did you expect to determine whether the papers were personal unless you read the contents?" The witness said he "took Brittin's word for it." He did not explain why he inspected the addresses and signatures.

Recalled to the stand, Miss Murphy testified that she talked by telephone this morning to John Guider, Hogan's son-in-law, who said MacCracken wanted to know whether there was anything important in his morning mail. Guider told her, she said, that she could reach her employer through Hogan's office, but did not disclose his whereabouts.

Discovery of the fragments of the Brittin letters in the basement of the National Press Building, where Brittin has his office, was described by J. A. Bradley, a postoffice inspector. The galleries buzzed when Bradley related that he and two other inspectors went through the contents of 300 full gunny sacks to make their find. As a piece of detective work it was impressive for thoroughness and the amount of labor involved.

U. S. Considering Canceling Ocean Mail Contracts Also

considering and awarding bids for new contracts had been completed. At least three independents and one present contractor made such offers and each was taken under advisement by the Postoffice Department.

The Varney Speed Airline, a California concern, offered to carry the mail on a west coast route; the Braniff Line, of Oklahoma City, informed the Postoffice Department it was outfitted to fly the transcontinental mail, New York to Los Angeles, or to fly the route from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico, and C. E. Woolman, of Monroe, La., the Delta Air Corporation, volunteered to carry mail from Atlanta to Fort Worth.

The Eastern Air Transport, operator of the Eastern seaboard route from New York south through Washington, offered "every possible assistance" to the Army and the Postoffice in turning over its route to the Government at the expiration of its contract on Feb. 19.

Demands for a Hearing.

While these developments shaped up in Washington, there came protests from dozens of contract operators.

Generally, they made plans to carry on with their passenger and express flying operations even though the Government clipped off a substantial portion of the incomes with the subsidy cancelations.

Almost universally, they demanded a hearing by the Government. The Government, through the Postoffice Department, indicated it would turn a deaf ear to these requests, however.

Branch, at his press conference, said there was no need for a hearing, that the cancelation had been done and the case was closed.

There was suggested to postal officials by the newsmen the possibility that some of the big companies might reorganize and bid for their old contracts. Branch indicated that while this would not be disapproved entirely that Postmaster-General Farley would require assurance that it was "really a reorganization."

As the plans for Army mail flying began to take shape, it appeared that the immediate program would call for maintaining virtually regular schedules over the main lines touching the Federal Reserve Bank cities, points where the speed of airmail has come to be essential to business.

After these main lines are put into action, the smaller lines will be attended to, although the postal officials indicated that the frequency of schedules might be reduced in some instances.

The question of landing fields also arose during the conferences of the Postal, Army and Commerce Department officials. It was expected that the majority of the 167 landing fields now used for mail service would be continued under the Army operation plan.

If any instance arises where the contracting company controls the field and declines to allow its use by Government ships, nearby Army or Navy flying fields, or the emergency landing fields maintained by the Commerce Department, can be pressed into service.

Brown Terms Cancelation Without Hearing "Incredible."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The Government's cancelation of air mail carrying contracts was termed "incredible" today by former Postmaster-General Walter F. Brown.

"It seems incredible," said Brown, "that any Postmaster-General would decide to annul these contracts except upon conclusive evidence of illegality with respect to bidding, presented at a hearing conducted either by the Postmaster-General himself or by a court of competent jurisdiction, at which hearing the contractors against whom charges of misconduct were made had first been afforded an opportunity to answer the same, and all other persons having knowledge of the essential facts had been given an opportunity to testify."

Brown said that since the inauguration of the contract air mail in 1926, 34 contracts for domestic service had been let by the Postoffice Department. Of these, he declared, only three had been let during his term as Postmaster-General.

"In letting these contracts," Brown said, "every requirement of law was observed. No question with respect to the legality of the proceedings affecting contracts Nos. 1 to 31, inclusive, has ever been raised."

Brown described the three contracts let during his tenure as No. 32, Pasco to Seattle via Portland; No. 33, Atlanta to Los Angeles via Fort Worth, and No. 34, New York to Los Angeles via St. Louis and Kansas City.

"At the letting of contracts Nos. 32, 33 and 34, there was no evidence whatever of collusion between the bidders thereon, or the holders of any other domestic air mail contract," continued Brown, adding: "And I do not believe any such collusion ever existed."

Mail Chief Source of Revenue of Air Lines Statistics Show.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of the United States today estimated that revenue derived from Government mail contracts comprised more than 50 per cent of the earnings of the various air transport companies.

While no accurate figures were available for last year, the chamber stated that in 1932, the last year on which detailed statistics have been assembled, income from Government mail contracts amounted to 66 per cent of the entire earnings of the companies. Since that year, it was stated, there had been an increase in other earnings, but the revenue from carrying the mails still amounted to more than 50 per cent.

Income from passenger and freight transportaton had increased sharply along with the amount of mail carried since 1926, it was said.

Domestic mail transported in 1926 totaled 433,649 pounds and in 1933 amounted to 7,367,977 pounds, which was considerably below the peak reached in 1931 when 9,005,089 pounds were transported.

Freight transported by plane in 1926 was 6467 pounds and in 1933 totaled 1,457,941 pounds; passengers transported increased from 5782 in 1926 to 491,036 in 1933, and the number of miles flown were 4,608,880 in 1926 and 46,659,250 in 1933.

Head of T. W. A. Protests in Telegram to President.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The first formal protest against administration cancelation of air mail contracts was filed today by Richard W. Robbins, president of Transcontinental Western Air, Inc. Robbin's protest was made in a letter to President Roosevelt on the letterhead of his company, saying: "We respectfully protest against the exparte cancelation of our air mail contract known as A. M. 34.

"We enclose herewith confirmation of telegrams we sent you this afternoon in the matter of the cancelation of our air mail contract.

"We also enclose a copy of a letter which we have forwarded to the Postmaster-General."

T. W. A. is one of four large air transport companies operating out of Newark Airport which altogether carried approximately 80 per cent of the nation's air mail.

REVERSES RULING ON REWARD PAID BY GRAND BANK

the law from securing any information as to who the offenders were, who represented them, where the securities were concealed, and who had them in their possession.

Disagrees With Judge Davis.

"This wrongful purpose, the lower court held, was clearly a part of the whole undertaking, and hence, regardless of whether the parties compounded a felony or became accessories after the fact, they consummated a transaction that could not be justified under the law.

"It is true that the unlawful agreement need not be an expressed one if from the evidence, facts and circumstances it may be fairly implied. It should first be observed that to imply such agreement imputes to the parties the commission of a crime. The evidence is undisputed that the contract of the parties here was directed to one specific object, that was the recovery of the stolen property and its restoration to the defendant, and the object of the robbers was to procure money for its restoration.

"Whether or not there was a valid consideration for the payment of the money is not material to the question of the alleged illegality of the contract as against public policy. If the transaction is to be held void as against public policy, it must be because of the implication of an agreement to conceal an offense, suppress evidence, stifle the prosecution, or compound a felony.

"Although an agreement to compound a felony or settle a prosecution may be implied from the facts and circumstances, the law will not impute a promise where it would be unjust to the party to whom it would be imputed, and where, as in the instant case, it would imply a promise to do not only an illegal, but a criminal act.

Mere Expectation Not Enough.

"Mere expectation of the robbers that there would be no prosecution is not sufficient. The robbers may have been actuated by a hope of gain and that prosecution would be deterred, but the plaintiff and defendant may have had no other thought but that secrecy was essential to recover the property."

The reward of $140,000 was paid to the late Joseph L. Lemon, attorney, who retained $15,000 of it as his fee, and arranged for the return of $822,000 in bonds, part of the $956,000 in bonds and cash stolen in a sensational robbery of the bank's safe deposit vault.

Emmett M. Meyers, resident vice-president of the bonding company, participated in the negotiations for the return of the bonds, and agreed, the bank claimed, that the bonding company would pay a share of the reward. The bonding company denied any such agreement, and sued the bank for $77,944 it had paid to compensate the bank for its loss after the robbery. The bank was willing to refund only $14,370, but advanced its counter-claim to be reimbursed for part of the reward.

SEA SERPENT SEEN FROM MAURETANIA

First Officer Tells of Sighting 65-Foot Monster, Six Feet Broad, in Caribbean.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The liner Mauretania passed a sea monster 65 feet long and six feet broad amidships in the Caribbean Sea—and there's an entry in the log to prove it.

Senior First Officer S. W. Moughtin admitted today that he made the entry in the log under the date of Jan. 30. It read simply: "Sighted sea monster headed S. W., 1:20 p. m."

Beside the entry Moughtin drew a sketch of the monster which was also seen by Senior Third Officer J. W. Caunce. Moughtin said he never mentioned it before because of the ridicule cast on his story by his fellow officers.

"It was a fine clear afternoon," he said, "and the ship was about a mile off St. Eustatius in the Caribbean when I sighted this strange monster on the starboard bow coming from the direction of the Saba bank, which is composed of white sand and coral.

"At first I thought it was a whale or a whistling grampus thrusting its head up into the air to catch flying fish on the wing, but I soon saw it was too large. The head of the monster was about six feet out of the water and was fully two feet across.

"About 45 feet of the body, which had a six-foot beam, could be seen in curves on the surface of the sea, and, judging by the commotion caused by the tail moving to and fro, there was another 25 feet below. Its color was a shiny jet black.

"I could not distinguish the eyes as the monster kept its head on a slant from the Mauretania as if it were braced sharply against the breeze."

Moughtin said he ran to the chart room to call Quincy, who arrived on deck in time to see about 30 feet of the monster before it vanished under water.

GRAND JURY WILL TAKE UP KELLEY KIDNAPING SOON

Investigating Body to Be Called in Few Days and Is Expected to Meet Next Week.

BOND FOR DAVIT SET AT $15,000

Habeas Corpus Hearing Reveals County Prosecutor Has Evidence Beyond Fiedler's Statement.

The sensational kidnaping of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley on April 20, 1931, brought back to public notice again by the version of the crime told by Adolph Fiedler, former Maplewood Justice of the Peace, will be investigated by a St. Louis County grand jury beginning next week.

Presiding Judge Mueller of the Circuit Court at Clayton announced yesterday that Judge Nolte would issue an order within the next few days for the calling of the grand jury. It probably will be impaneled to begin its deliberations within a week of the call.

Prosecuting Attorney Anderson's request that Judge Nolte call a grand jury followed an official investigation of Fiedler's story, published last Wednesday exclusively in the Post-Dispatch, in which Fiedler named a woman and eight men as participants in the abduction plot and pointed out a farm shack in which he said Dr. Kelley had been imprisoned by his kidnapers for 24 to 30 hours immediately after he was seized.

Four Persons Arrested.

The woman and three men named by Fiedler, are at liberty on bonds or in custody in jail at Clayton, having been named in warrants charging kidnaping.

Before asking for the grand jury Prosecuting Attorney Anderson announced that certain details o Fiedler's story had been verified. That the prosecutor had obtaine evidence, beyond Fiedler's statement, shedding light on the kidnap ing, was also disclosed yesterday b Anderson's assistant, John Wolfe.

During the course of a habea corpus hearing before Judge Mue ler on a writ of habeas corpu sought for the release of Ba Davit, named by Fiedler as one the actual kidnapers, the Cou asked Wolfe if the State had an evidence over and above the stat ment made by the former Justic of the Peace. Wolfe replied th there was such evidence.

Pleading for issuance of the wri so that Davit might be released o bond, Philip Foley, Davit's lawye asked that the Court recogni Fiedler as "an infamous lia Wolfe remarked that this "would a novel action for a court to tak

Bond Set at $15,000.

Judge Mueller ignored Foley suggestion, but issued the writ a set bond at $15,000 to be given b fore Sheriff Deuser. Foley prote ed that the bond should be tak by Judge Mueller or a Justice of t Peace but the Court did not ad the suggestion. Sheriff Deuser quires signers of bail bonds qualify in property holdings twice the amount of the bond, also insists that at least two p sons, so qualified, sign all bonds $10,000 or more.

Prosecutor Anderson has nounced that he feels certain Fi ler, in the course of his story, c rectly pointed out the shack wh Dr. Kelley was held by his abd tors, on a farm four miles sou west of St. Charles.

After characteristic details been checked by Dr. Kelley found to tally with his impressi of his first place of captivity, Sh iff Deuser announced that he, felt that detail of Fiedler's st had been substantiated. Dr. K himself said the place was " like" the shack where he was h but added that he could not ide fy it positively.

Negro Still in Jail.

Still held at Clayton is Joh Johnson, 51-year-old Negro o of the farm. Fiedler declar his statement that Davit and McDonald, convict, operated a on a place adjoining the Joh farm. Ruins of the vats were fo when Johnson's place was vis last Wednesday.

In addition to Davit and J son, county deputies arreste woman named by Fiedler, and a man known to Fiedler as Dago," and said by Fiedler to been a close associate of Davit McDonald. Both were releas $25,000 bonds after denying co with the abduction.

In addition to the five al mentioned, Fiedler named To Wilders, Shelton gangster now to be in Florida, and Tommy H "Willie Gee" Wilbert, and " Boy" Lechler, who were slai gangster enemies on the East the night of April 15, 1932.

"At first I thought it was a whale or a whistling grampus thrusting its head up into the air to catch flying fish on the wing, but I soon saw it was too large. The head of the monster was about six feet out of the water and was fully two feet across.

"About 45 feet of the body, which had a six-foot beam, could be seen in curves on the surface of the sea, and, judging by the commotion, caused by the tail moving to and fro, there was another 25 feet below. Its color was a shiny jet black.

"I could not distinguish the eyes as the monster kept its head on a slant from the Mauretania as if it were braced sharply against the breeze."

Moughtin said he ran to the chart room to call Quincy, who arrived on deck in time to see about 0 feet of the monster before it vanished under water.

ORDERS

GRAND JURY WILL TAKE UP KELLEY KIDNAPING SOON

Investigating Body to Be Called in Few Days and Is Expected to Meet Next Week.

BOND FOR DAVIT SET AT $15,000

Habeas Corpus Hearing Reveals County Prosecutor Has Evidence Beyond Fiedler's Statement.

The sensational kidnaping of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley on April 20, 1931, brought back to public notice again by the version of the crime told by Adolph Fiedler, former Maplewood Justice of the Peace, will be investigated by a St. Louis County grand jury beginning next week.

Presiding Judge Mueller of the Circuit Court at Clayton announced yesterday that Judge Nolte would issue an order within the next few days for the calling of the grand jury. It probably will be impaneled to begin its deliberations within a week of the call.

Prosecuting Attorney Anderson's request that Judge Nolte call a grand jury followed an official investigation of Fiedler's story, published last Wednesday exclusively in the Post-Dispatch, in which Fiedler named a woman and eight men as participants in the abduction plot and pointed out a farm shack in which he said Dr. Kelley had been imprisoned by his kidnapers for 24 to 30 hours immediately after he was seized.

Four Persons Arrested.

The woman and three men named by Fiedler, are at liberty on bonds or in custody in jail at Clayton, having been named in warrants charging kidnaping.

Before asking for the grand jury Prosecuting Attorney Anderson announced that certain details of Fiedler's story had been verified. That the prosecutor had obtained evidence, beyond Fiedler's statement, shedding light on the kidnaping, was also disclosed yesterday by Anderson's assistant, John Wolfe.

During the course of a habeas corpus hearing before Judge Mueller on a writ of habeas corpus sought for the release of Bart Davit, named by Fiedler as one of the actual kidnapers, the Court asked Wolfe if the State had any evidence over and above the statement made by the former Justice of the Peace. Wolfe replied that there was such evidence.

Pleading for issuance of the writ, so that Davit might be released on bond, Philip Foley, Davit's lawyer, asked that the Court recognize Fiedler as "an infamous liar." Wolfe remarked that this "would be a novel action for a court to take."

Bond Set at $15,000.

Judge Mueller ignored Foley's suggestion, but issued the writ and set bond at $15,000 to be given before Sheriff Deuser. Foley protested that the bond should be taken by Judge Mueller or a Justice of the Peace but the Court did not adopt the suggestion. Sheriff Deuser requires signers of bail bonds to qualify in property holdings for twice the amount of the bond, and also insists that at least two persons, so qualified, sign all bonds of $10,000 or more.

Prosecutor Anderson has announced that he feels certain Fiedler, in the course of his story, correctly pointed out the shack where Dr. Kelley was held by his abductors, on a farm four miles southwest of St. Charles.

After characteristic details had been checked by Dr. Kelley and found to tally with his impressions of his first place of captivity, Sheriff Deuser announced that he, too, felt that detail of Fiedler's story had been substantiated. Dr. Kelly himself said the place was "very like" the shack where he was held, but added that he could not identify it positively.

Negro Still in Jail.

Still held at Clayton is John C. Johnson, 51-year-old Negro owner of the farm. Fiedler declared in his statement that Davit and Felix McDonald, convict, operated a still on a place adjoining the Johnson farm. Ruins of the vats were found when Johnson's place was visited last Wednesday.

In addition to Davit and Johnson, county deputies arrested a woman named by Fiedler, and also a man known to Fiedler as "the Dago," and said by Fiedler to have been a close associate of Davit and McDonald. Both were released on $25,000 bonds after denying connection with the abduction.

In addition to the five already mentioned, Fiedler named Tommy Wilders, Shelton gangster now said to be in Florida, and Tommy Hayes, "Willie Gee" Wilbert, and "Pretty Boy" Lechler, who were slain by gangster enemies on the East Side the night of April 15, 1932.

WILLIAM F. DOWDALL SUED FOR DIVORCE

Wife Says Broker Cultivated Society of Women and Left Home.

Mrs. Clara M. Dowdall, 54 Broadview place, Clayton, filed suit yesterday to divorce William F. Dowdall, investment broker, whom she married in June, 1921.

The petition, charging general indignities, states that for the last year and a half Dowdall has been cold and indifferent and "has cultivated the society of women." He frequently telephoned that he would not be home for dinner and later refused to state where he had been, Mrs. Dowdall alleges. When she asked him to resume a normal family life he left home Nov. 4, and has failed to return, she states.

Stating that her husband has sufficient income to support his family, Mrs. Dowdall asks an allowance for herself and two children, whose custody she is seeking. The suit will be heard in Circuit Court at Clayton.

Dowdall has offices in Boatmen's Bank Building.

STRIKERS HURL BRICKS INTO NEW YORK HOTELS

500 Men Rout Diners at the Pennsylvania and Injure Several Policemen.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—About 500 striking waiters and sympathizers tonight fought with seven policemen and routed them after injuring two patrolmen who had attempted to stop and disperse the procession just south of Times Square.

Police were called after the demonstrators, marching up Broadway, threw bricks into the main dining room of the Hotel Pennsylvania, shattering six windows and routing diners.

When the seven police withdrew and others took their places in an attempt to keep the marchers in an orderly procession, the demonstrators threw bricks into the grillroom of the Hotel Taft and into the main dining room of the Park Central Hotel.

By the time the parade broke up before the offices of the Amalgamated Hotel and Restaurant Union on Eighth avenue, two policemen were taken to a hospital and other patrolmen on parade duty had received bruises and cuts.

COMPTROLLER'S BARRING OF MAYS PUT INTO RECORD

Letter About Grand National Reorganization Offered as Continental Life Litigation Evidence.

A statement from the office of the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington that in the reorganization of the Grand National Bank Ed Mays, president of that bank and of the Continental Life Insurance Co., would not be permitted to hold any office was introduced in evidence in Circuit Judge Ryan's court yesterday.

This was stated in a letter written last Dec. 22 by Gibbs Lyons, deputy comptroller, to State Insurance Superintendent O'Malley. The letter was read by Powell McHaney, attorney for Superintendent O'Malley, at the trial of the suit brought by O'Malley to dissolve the Continental Life Insurance Co. on grounds of insolvency and mismanagement.

McHaney asked Mays, who was a witness for the eleventh day, if he had known before that he was not considered acceptable by the Comptroller's office for a place as a director or officer of the new bank that it was proposed to organize to take over the business of the Grand National. Mays declared the letter was the first intimation he had received that the Comptroller was opposed to his connection with the new bank. He said he had spent nine weeks in Washington working on the reorganization plan and that when he left there it was understood he was to be president of the new bank.

Didn't Want Job.

"I didn't want to be president or have anything to do with it," he said, "but people who were interested want me to be."

He related that the letter was read to him by O'Malley who had just returned from Washington where he was accompanied by Charles G. Revelle and James Carroll, attorneys for Continental Life.

"They changed the deal in Washington after I was there," Mays said.

Mays told of telephone conversations with Revelle when the latter was in Washington with O'Malley the week before Christmas.

"He told me they were handling Washington pretty roughly," Mays said, "that O'Malley was talking straight to the Comptroller."

Events of Late December.

Mays again went over the events in the last week of December when efforts were being made to open the Grand National Bank in which the insurance company had more than $600,000 deposited. The insurance company was to furnish the capital and additional funds for the new bank.

At the time, Mays said, Superintendent O'Malley was insisting that the stock of the new bank be placed in the hands of Dr. Emmet Kane as trustee and that the insurance company stock be trusteed or that O'Malley should name enough of its directors to control it.

"I told my attorney," Mays said, "that I would fight it through the last court of the land before I would agree to turn these companies over to trustees."

The trial will be resumed Monday, with McHaney continuing the cross examination of Mays.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Machir J. Dorsey and three others were fined and sentenced to prison or jail terms today on their conviction a week ago of conspiracy to defraud the Security Life Insurance Company of America, of which Dorsey was president.

Dorsey and Edwin Hult, head of a real estate mortgage concern, were sentenced to terms of one to five years each in the State penitentiary and fined $1000 and costs.

G. Edwin Johnson, former vice-president of the company, was sentenced to one year in the county jail and fined $1000 and the costs, Harry W. Huttig, manufacturer of Muscatine, Ia., to four months in the county jail and fined $2000 and the costs.

The defendants were charged with mortgaging real estate far in excess of its value and then unloading the mortgages into the insurance company.

Judge Benjamin P. Epstein denied a motion for a new trial, but a stay of mittimus for 60 days was allowed for an appeal, during which time the defendants will be free on bond.

COLONE ACQUITTED OF MURDER IN KILLING OF ENEMY

Collinsville Cafe Owner, Who Shot Dominic Maddelin to Death, Freed at Edwardsville.

Louis Colone, Collinsville cafe owner and former policeman, was acquitted in Edwardsville Circuit Court last night of murder in the killing of his enemy, Dan Dominic Maddelin, whom he shot to death in a raid on Maddelin's home early in the morning of June 28 last.

The jury had the case five hours, and took six ballots. Members said that not more than three voted at any time to find Colone guilty. The fact of the killing was not denied, but Colone maintained that he shot Maddelin to protect himself.

Colone and George J. Kuelks, Illinois State highway patrolman, went to Maddelin's house, without a warrant, just after Colone's place had been "shot up" with a machine gun, Colone's brother being wounded. Colone blamed Maddelin for this attack.

Judge Alfred Riess, who presided at the trial, was at home when the verdict came, and it was received by Judge D. H. Mudge. A few of Colone's friends were in court with him. He followed the departing jurors into the hallway, thanking them.

State's Attorney Geers made no announcement as to the case of Kuelks, indicted jointly with Colone on a first-degree murder charge, who obtained a severance. With Colone, the actual slayer, set free, the case against Kuelks may be rendered difficult. Kuelks is at present under suspension from the highway patrol.

ton drink when he visited your home in Jackson?" "Sometimes."

"During Preston's last illness, did Dr. Hand give him morphine?" "I think he gave him some morphine." "How?" "By injection. In the arm."

"Very often?" "No, not very frequently. One injection would last four or five hours."

When the witness said Preston was "unconscious or in a stupor" when he was examined by Dr. Wilde, Breland quickly asked: "What night was that?"

The witness said he was uncertain whether it was the Thursday night or the Friday night after the Wednesday night declaration and then intimated it "might" have been Wednesday night.

Question Put Several Times.

"If Dr. Wilde examined him Wednesday night and he was in a stupor or unconscious, then your brother was in a stupor when he made the dying statement. Is that a fact?" was asked.

After the question had been put several times, Barney answered:

"Yes. But the statement was made Wednesday night and I'm positive that was not the night Dr. Wilde examined him."

"Didn't Dr. Hand encourage Preston to believe he would live, even after the dying statement?" "He expressed hopes to me but not to Preston."

The defense had several times pressed this point in view of the Mississippi law making dying statements competent only when given after all hope of life, "however remote," has been abandoned.

"Why is it you can't remember some things and remember the dying statement so well?" the attorney asked. "I'll never forget it. I think about it when I go to bed at night."

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S REPLY TO CONGRESS

Takes Ironic Fling at House Vote Against Manufacture in Subsistence Project.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today made ironic answer to the move of Representative Ludlow of Indiana against the proposed postoffice equipment factory for the Reedsville (W. Va.) subsistence homestead project in which she has been deeply interested.

Without a record vote, the House recently approved a bill by Ludlow preventing the factory from selling its furniture to the Postoffice Department.

Addressing the annual Pan-Hellenic luncheon of women belonging to Greek letter college societies, Mrs. Roosevelt predicted the subsistence homestead movement would prove far reaching in its scope, and stoutly stood up for the worth of the Reedsville experiment.

"It would employ the large number of 125 people, which you wouldn't think would be very dislocating to industry as a whole," she said.

"But a number of places are very much afraid it would throw all their workmen out of jobs, and a number of Congressmen have become very excited about it.

"Even if the postoffice factory were to be established, it would not be a precedent. It is purely an experiment—to see whether a factory that employes one member of a family can give enough income for that family to live on, if it is also helped to grow subsistence on a small acreage by an agricultural college."

Mrs. Roosevelt previously had made a statement that if congressional action rules out the postoffice factory at Reedsville, some other form of factory would be established there.

FIRST PAYMENTS OF SALES TAX ARE DUE ON THURSDAY

But State Auditor Smith Will Allow More Time Where Needed for Filing Returns and Settlement.

By BOYD F. CARROLL,
Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 10.—An extension of time for the initial filing of returns and payment under the new Missouri sales tax law will be granted, where necessary, State Auditor Forrest Smith announced today.

The law became effective last Jan. 15 and the first returns and payments from the approximately 75,000 individuals, firms and corporations subject to the tax are due Thursday for the last half of January.

Smith said it would be impossible to place the tax return blanks in the hands of all of the taxpayers before Feb. 20. He has not determined how much additional time will be allowed, but he is authorized to grant an extension of 30 days for the filing of the first returns.

Next Returns March 15.

Returns for February and the tax payments for that month, will be due on or before March 15. Thereafter the return and tax for each calendar month will be due on or before the 15th of the following month. The act is effective until Dec. 31, 1935, unless the time is extended by the 1935 session of the Legislature.

The tax rate of one-half of one per cent applies to all retail sales of tangible personal property; admission charges to amusements, games and athletic events; sales of electricity, water, gas and sewer service to domestic, commercial and industrial users; telephone and telegraph service; newspaper advertising and newspaper service; commercial laundry, cleaning and dyeing service; transportation of passengers or freight for hire, and billboards and other outdoor advertising service.

Swamped With Inquiries.

The State Auditor, who is charged with administration of the law, said his department had been swamped with inquiries on the provisions of the act, and so far has not completed compilation of the list of all individuals, firms and corporations subject to the act.

"Many unforeseen difficulties have arisen," Smith said, "but we are trying to simplify the procedure and to eliminate as much red tape as possible in administration of the act."

Smith is preparing rules and regulations for administration, and an interpretation of the act, which will be made available to taxpayers.

Few sales tax collections will reach the State Treasury before late in February or early in March, Smith said, due to the necessary delays.

No official estimate on the probable revenue from the tax has been made. Members of the Legislature estimated the revenue from $4,000,000 to $6,000,000 a yar.

Lists of those subject to the tax are being compiled by Smith from the license and corporation records of various State departments, county and municipal tax assessment and license records, business reports, and municipal directories.

Dick Stokes' Opera Given Premiere at Metropolitan

'Merry Mount,' by Former St. Louisan and Music by Howard Hanson, Sung by Tibbett and Ljungberg.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The tom-toms and war-whoops of Indians, the tomahawking of Pilgrim maids, the strife between straight-laced Puritans and rollicking Cavaliers, all came to the Metropolitan today in the premiere of "Merry Mount."

The war-whoops were answered with shouts of approval, ovations and curtain-calls by a house that had the "S. R. O." sign hung out. And there was not much standing room.

The opera, sung in English, depicted a colonial incident in Massachusetts. It was the work of two Americans: the composer, Dr. Howard Hanson, native of Nebraska, now director of the Eastman School of Music at Rochester, N. Y.; the librettist, Richard L. Stokes, former drama and music critics of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, now a New York critic.

Tibbett and Ljungberg.

Lawrence Tibbett, baritone, sang the leading role—that of Wrestling Bradford, a Puritan pastor whose soul is wracked with the fires of passion, who deserts his flock for a Cavalier noblewoman.

There was a Swedish touch to the otherwise American scene. Dr. Hanson is the son of Swedish immigrants; and the prima donna was Goeta Ljungberg, soprano from Stockholm, who sang the role of the Cavalier dame, Lady Marigold.

The contralto was Gladys Swarthout, from a Chicago suburbs. She was a Puritan maid, whose love the pastor spurned. The tenor was Edward Johnson, who came to the Metropolitan from Canada.

Integral parts of the opera didn't answer the curtain calls. These were the chorus and the ballet, whose work often stopped the performance. The composer has used these as protagonists of his work—they serve not as mere attractions, but as moving, vital forces in the singing and drama.

Curtain Calls Between Acts.

Between every act, the principals, the composer and the librettist were called out on the stage many times. Most of the curtain calls were for the latter—for it was their day.

They were shy fellows; Hanson, tall and slim, bespectacled, with a mustache and small goatee; Stokes, larger, portly.

Half the time, Hanson sat in a box with friends from Rochester; the rest of the time he was backstage, sitting on a bench beside the impresario, Giulio Gatti-Casazza.

Beside Gatti was his wife, Mme. Rosina Galli. It was she who arranged the ballets. Hanson and Mme. Galli were nervous. But not the bulky, bearded Gatti-Casazza. He has seen too many premieres, too many successes. It just was another day for him.

But he did loosen up enough to say: "It was fine. A grand performance. A fine work."

"World Operatic Premiere."

INSULL MAY GET TO STAY IN GREECE UNTIL FEB. 22

Attorney Denies Appeal to League of Nations But Nansen Passport is Possibility.

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Feb. 10.—Samuel Insull's stay in Greece may tacitly be prolonged until Feb. 22, his lawyer, P. Rhallis, indicated tonight.

"There will be no question of the expulsion of Insull before that date," the lawyer asserted. He scoffed at the rumor that his client had appealed to the League of Nations, he added, however, that if the former utility magnate should be expelled, he would demand a Nansen passport from the League. His American passport expires tomorrow.

A Nansen passport is one granted by the League to refugees of any country seeking permission to travel from one country to another with complete freedom of movement, though they lack passports from their own countries. It has been used chiefly in the large refugee movements, such as those of the Russians who fled red rule.

SNOW IN EVERY SOUTHERN STATE, HEAVIEST IN 10 YEARS

Citrus Trees Denuded; Man Is Frozen to Death in North Carolina.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 10. — Snow whirled into every Southern State today, bringing the heaviest fall in 10 years.

For the first time in many years Florida recorded snowfall in the northern part of the State. Attorney-General Cary D. Landis, on the way from Tallahassee to Jacksonville, wired his office "sleet and snow makes it impossible to drive further." Stuart, far down on Florida's east coast, felt the effects of an intense hail storm as did Palm City. Citrus trees were denuded and truck crops beaten to the ground, unprecedented for the section. Hundreds of windows in the Stuart area were broken by the storm. Two cows were pounded to death by the icy pellets which were driven by a 60-mile wind. Huge waves raked the St. Lucie River and piled several launches on the shore. An hour afterward the ice was piled six to eight inches deep where the storm was worst.

Snow fall at Atlanta was three inches. At Manteo, N. C., a Negro was found frozen to death, and Lynchburg, Va., had the coldest morning that city had experienced in 22 years. The reading was four below zero.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Feb. 10.—The winter's heaviest snowfall blanketed parts of Colorado and Wyoming today, crippling highway travel and slowing up train service. Twelve to 14 inches of snow had fallen in the Pike's Peak region, smaller amounts at Denver and in Eastern Colorado and Western Kansas. About four inches of snow fell at Santa Fe, N. M.

FEDERAL AGENTS TAKE OVER HUNT FOR BREMER KIDNAPERS

Government, in Full Charge, Imposes Strict Censorship on Any Developments.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 10.—The United States Government today took full charge of the hunt for the kidnapers of Edward G. Bremer, and it's first move was to impose a strict censorship on any developments.

Harold Nathan, first assistant in the Department of Justice at Washington, said any word of progress must come from Attorney-General Cummings. City police and State Crime Bureau officials followed the lead of Federal operatives, headed by Nathan, in maintaining silence.

It was known authorities had the stories of at least five witnesses who said they could either identify the actual kidnapers or the gang's automobile. Coupled with those clews were the notes conveyed to the family by the gang which seized Bremer, wealthy banker, Jan. 17, and freed him at Rochester, Minn., Wednesday after payment of $200,000 ransom.

Bremer went to his bank today for a brief visit. He walked with a cane. A physician planned to X-Ray his leg, severely bruised when the abductors slammed his car door on it when he sought to prevent them from closing it.

ILLINOIS G.O.P. LEADER, FRED STERLING, DIES

Served as State Treasurer, Accused With Len Small of Taking Money.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Feb. 10.—Fred E. Sterling, former Lieutenant-Governor of Illinois, died yesterday at the age of 64. Mrs. Sterling, a son, Arthur, and a daughter, Olive, survive.

For the last several years Sterling had not been well, but his illness became serious only a few days ago. He underwent a blood transfusion Thursday, but failed to regain strength. The cause of death was a long standing heart disease, complicated by high blood pressure.

He retired from the Lieutenant-Governorship in 1932, defeated by Thomas Donovan for a fourth term. Although he retained an office in the Rockford newspaper consolidation dominated by Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Sims, he had retired from active business.

The funeral service will be held Monday at 2 p. m. at the Second Congregational Church of Rockford, of which he was a member. The pastor, the Rev. John Gordon, will officiate. Burial will be at Willwood Burial Park.

Sterling, a newspaper publisher for many years, had been identified with Republican political activities since his youth. He was born at Dixon in 1869, educated at Dixon and at Huron, S. D. For 10 years he was Alderman in Rockford and for 12 years chairman or secretary of the County Republican Committee. In 1916 he directed the national and State campaign in Illinois as chairman of the State Committee.

Gov. Frank O. Lowden appointed Sterling a member of the Public Utilities Commission in 1917, and a year later he was elected State Treasurer, succeeding in that capacity Len Small, who became Governor.

Sterling and Small afterward were accused of lending — while holding the office of State Treasurer—State money to Chicago meat packers through a bank they controlled, collecting 7 per cent interest and paying only 2 per cent to the State. Small was tried and acquitted. Sterling was never brought to trial. Before he retired from his third term as Lieutenant-Governor Sterling remitted $391,386 to the State. Attorney-General Otto Kerner last year started suit to reopen civil proceedings against Small and Sterling to regain the money for the State. Small previously settled for $650,000.

After the charges had been made, Sterling was re-elected Lieutenant-Governor, the post he first won in 1920 by 700,000 plurality.

The increased collections were made during the last six months of last year, Cherry said, as the first half of 1933 showed a loss of $11,237.23 as compared with the corresponding period of 1932.

How Customers Obtain
Sound Bank Loans—

LOANING policies of good commercial banks have been established for many years, and are based upon sound business practices which are embodied in both Federal and State Laws.

The bank's operations should bear in mind always that money being loaned belongs to depositors, for whom it is trustee, and the liquidity of course must be apparent. Only such loans should be made as will merit the full approval of Federal and State Bank Examiners who periodically inspect the bank's affairs. Readily marketable collateral, or financial statements which evidence the borrower's financial condition as being sound and his business on a profit-making basis should be required.

A bank which does not observe these elementary and yet fundamental policies does not serve wisely or well the borrower, the bank, or the community.

The First National Bank in St. Louis has abundant funds available for industrial and commercial loans on the basis of sound banking practice.

$7,903,000 SPENT FOR RELIEF IN CITY, COUNTY LAST YEAR

All Except $562,530 of This Came From Municipal, State and Federal Funds.

Relief of distressed families in St. Louis and the county last year cost $7,903,189, according to figures compiled by Irving Weissman, research director of the Community Council. That amount was spent in helping 77,235 families and single individuals.

"If the community were to have shouldered this burden without Governmental assistance," Weissman points out, "every man, woman and child would have had to contribute approximately $7.50 to the relief chest."

Actually, however, only $562,530 of the total spent for relief was from voluntary contributions, obtained in the first United Relief Campaign. The balance, $7,340,659, or 92.9 per cent, came from municipal, state and Federal relief funds, chiefly from the latter source. As has been told, the bulk of the funds raised in the first United Relief Campaign were allotted to institutions which could not share in Government relief funds, such as hospitals, orphan asylums and homes for the aged.

Comparison With 1929 Figures.

The tremendous increase in the cost of unemployment relief during the depression is apparent in the fact that relief costs in 1929 were $567,432, only 7 per cent of the 1933 total. In 1932 the cost of relief was $3,898,488, about half of last year's figure. In 1929 the number of relief cases was 9391; in 1932, 53,584; and in 1933, 77,235.

For the first four months of 1933 there were sharp increases in the number requiring help, and for the next four, beginning in May, there were lesser decreases. Beginning in September, the expected fall increase in relief requirements was apparent. In that month there were 33,180 cases under care. By December there were 43,926 cases, an all-time record, and the cost of relief in that month alone was $938,373. Still another record was established in December, when 12,251 applications for help were received in the city and county.

The effect of the CWA program made itself felt last month, bringing a marked decrease in the number of those helped by relief agencies and in the cost of relief. Figures for the county have not been compiled, but in the city, the cost of relief fell from $802,394 to $530,068, and the number of cases from 32,537 to 19,328.

U. S. Aid for Jobless Only.

The January figures mentioned are those of the Citizens' Committee, which is the public relief agency through which Government funds are disbursed. Relief agencies which comprise the committee also function as private agencies, using voluntary contributions to aid those not eligible for Government relief, which can be administered only when the distress is caused solely by unemployment, and not by illness or other handicaps.

Weissman's report for 1933 includes both the relief expenditures of the Citizens' Committee and those of the following private agencies: Provident Association, St. Vincent de Paul Society, Jewish Social Service Bureau, Salvation Army, St. Louis and Webster Groves chapters of the Red Cross, Bureau for Homeless Men, Bureau for Women, St. Louis County Welfare Association, and the application, clothing and employment bureaus of Citizens' Committee.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—The Whelan Drug Stores, subsidiary of the bankrupt United Cigar Stores of America, were sold at auction for $6,000,000 today to the principal creditor, the United Cigar Store Corporation of Delaware.

The successful bid was made by the Irving Trust Co., trustee in bankruptcy against an opposition bid of $5,600,000 by the Branfield Corporation. W. H. MINER DIES; FUNERAL TO BE AT 2:30 TOMORROW

ONCE FOUND $25,000 ITEM IN LOT OF JUNK

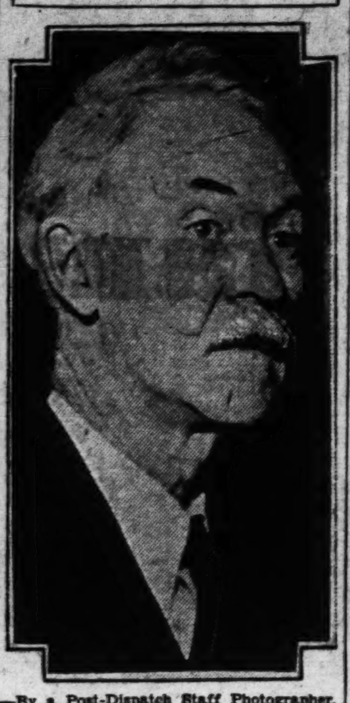
NOTED BOOKMAN DEAD



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.
WILLIAM HARVEY MINER.

The funeral of William Harvey Miner, book dealer, will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Donnelly undertaking parlor, 3840 Lindell boulevard, and will be followed by cremation at Valhalla Crematory.

Mr. Miner, one of the most widely known of American bookmen, died early yesterday of injuries inflicted Tuesday, when he was knocked down by an automobile on Market street in front of Union Station. He was 56 years old. He had just left a suburban train from Kirkwood, where his residence, "Restholme," 334 South Clay avenue, houses his large private book collection, and was on his way to his bookshop at 3519 Franklin avenue.

The car which struck him was owned and driven by Peter Prusick of 2342 Mullanphy street. Prusick said he had just received a $25 reward from his employer, Columbia Terminals Co., for driving its trucks without accident. City Hospital physicians said Prusick had been drinking. Mr. Miner's injuries were fractures of the skull, legs, pelvis and ribs.

Writer and Publisher.

Friend and counselor for nearly 40 years of book-lovers on both sides of the Atlantic, he knew books not only as a connoisseur, but as a student, an author and a publisher. His best known work was a "History of the American Indians North of Mexico," published in 1917 by the Cambridge University press, and internationally regarded as an authority.

With Luther A. Brewer he formed the Torch Press of Cedar Rapids, Ia., which in 10 years turned out 40 volumes now prized by collectors, including the only work of William Marion Reedy to be published in a bound volume in Reedy's lifetime. Here in St. Louis, some 20 volumes were published under the imprint of the William Harvey Miner Co., of which several were republished in London and some, including Denton J. Snider's work on Shakespeare, sold more than 100,000 copies in the American edition.

Best Known for His Friends.

But it was as a student that he was best known, and most loved, by the little group that might be found nearly every week-day afternoon since 1916 in his bookshop of the period—at first on the south side of Franklin avenue, east of Grand boulevard, later on downtown Pine street, and then at the present site, on the north side of Franklin, opposite the site of "the old store."

Most of that group would have shuddered at the word "high-brow," but the conversation sometimes rose to a lofty plane. Almost always with them was the late Denton J. Snider, who even remembered when St. Louis had meant enough in philosophical circles to have a "St. Louis movement," and, in fact, had himself been a leader of that movement.

Argument sometimes ran high in the little group gathered around Mr. Miner's desk. Occasionally from somewhere back among the shelves, would drift the comment of one who could neither stay away from the books or remain entirely out of the many-sided debate. Mrs. Miner, busy at the ledgers which form a necessary if often overlooked part of a bookman's trade, sometimes would look up to put in a smiling word or two.

An Attractive Personality.

Mr. Miner himself, gifted with a faculty of convincing his listeners without ever seeming to differ with them, was frequently the center of the group. His appearance was distinguished, his habit of thought wholly individual without any trace of the merely clever, his bearing a rare fusion of courteous simplicity, and his voice singularly gentle and persuasive.

Genuinely devoted to the authentic in people as well as books, he was gently contemptuous of a purely ornamental respect for books, whether for the reputation of the writer, the remoteness of the period, or the color scheme of a new binding. On Jan. 10, 1925, he set down some of his views of the old and the new in the Post-Dispatch book review, as follows:

"After all, I must confess my own inability to rave over many of the masterpieces of a hundred years ago. I am bored beyond measure if I try to work through Scott....

"To me the older books mean so much more than the new .... I contend there is more solid and profitable reading in old Homer of Chios than in young Homer of Croy, and that Dante is superior to Stephen Phillips—although the latter's 'Paolo and Francesca' is no mean work.

"To go one step farther: If the modernist could but find time to read Goethe's 'Elective Affinities,' he would get the same sort of thrill that George Moore offers, with infinitely more artistry than that gentleman possesses or may ever hope to."

From College to Bookshop.

Mr. Miner was born at New Haven, Conn., and one of his early heroes was P. T. Barnum, whose circus then wintered at Bridgeport. He took a three-year special literary course at Yale, began the study of his craft in the rare book section of Dodd, Mead & Co. under the late Luther S. Livingston, and then completed his college course at George Washington University, remaining in Washington to head the American division of the famous Lowdermilk bookshop.

While in Washington he roomed with Channing Pollock, playwright, and both were attentive to the same girl, who became the central character in Pollock's "Little Gray Lady." There, also, he began the ethnological studies which furnished much of the material for his later works on American Indians.

For several years he headed the rare book and editorial departments of Burrows Bros. in Cleveland. There he began the custom, continued for years afterward, of spending a few months each year across the Atlantic, spending between $25,000 and $50,000 each trip on rare manuscripts or volumes which he picked up from the great collectors or obscure book stalls all the way from London to Naples.

On these yearly visits—13 for Burrows Bros. and many later—he made an extensive acquaintance with foreign dealers and collectors, and was able as a result to carry on by mail negotiations for little known works or rare editions which would have been impossibly complex for the uninitiate. Similarly, his clientele in this country, necessarily restricted, included famous connoisseurs and men of wealth.

His Greatest Find.

His greatest find, he used to relate, was the Burgis copper engraving of the City of New York, which he uncovered in an attic-full of "junk" bought "sight unseen" for $60. The engraving, recognized the moment he came across it, was dated 1717, the first made on copper in this country and the only copy in existence. He sold it to the head of the Colt Firearms Co. for $25,000.

From Cleveland Mr. Miner went to Cedar Rapids to join with the late Luther A. Brewer in the Torch Press. There he became a friend of Carl Van Vechten, who for years sent Mr. Miner everything he wrote, carefully inscribed, even to magazine articles. And from Cleveland he came to St. Louis to establish the shops which have been rendezvous for 17 years of people who like real books.

TWO SUSPECTS ADMIT DRUG STORE HOLDUPS

Paroled Convict Confesses Two, Companion Another After Capture on Street.

Two men, who brought about their own arrest Friday night when they walked away from a police patrol car approaching Sixteenth and Montgomery streets, have admitted, police say, that they participated in holdups of three drug stores, in which $150 was taken, and in an attempted holdup at another.

One said he was James O. Ralls, 38 years old, 2116 Cass avenue, and told police he was a paroled convict from the Ohio State Penitentiary, sentenced to 15 years for burglary and larceny. The other said he was Richard Bauer, 20, of 2626 North Nineteenth street. Ralls dropped a revolver to the sidewalk as police followed them along Sixteenth street, and a revolver was found in Bauer's room. Both said the weapons were the ones used in the holdups.

Although arrested together, they operated alone. Ralls said he and two other men, whose names he did not know, robbed a drug store Feb. 5, owned by Arthur H. Feder at 5200 North Twentieth street, taking $9 from the owner's pocket and $16 from the cash drawer. He asserted he and the same two men held up two clerks in a drug store, owned by Louis Steinmeyer at 2601 Hebert street, on Jan. 18, and took $25. The third man stayed in an automobile in which they fled, Ralls said.

Bauer admitted he and a companion, whose identity he disclosed to police, held up Oswald B. Strub in his drug store at 4601 Pope avenue on Dec. 20, took $20 from the cash drawer, $75 from a tin box containing cash received for money orders, and a book of 100 blank money orders. He said the blanks were burned.

Accompanied by the same man, he said they attempted to rob a clerk in a drug store Jan. 23, at 4438 West Pine boulevard, owned by Mrs. May Haverman, but she screamed for help and they fled.

AMERICAN WOMAN DEPORTED FROM INDIA

Nila Cram Cook, Gandhi's Former Disciple, Is Carried Aboard Ship.

By the Associated Press.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 10.—Nila Cram Cook's years in India drew to a close today when the former disciple of Mahatma Gandhi was forcibly carried aboard the steamer City of Elwood for deportation to the United States. The ship is scheduled to sail Monday.

The erstwhile "blue serpent goddess" feigned blindness and dumbness and fought against leaving India.

First she locked herself in a bathroom and refused to dress; she refused to speak to her 7-year-old son aboard the ship; she struggled when she was carried to a taxi cab; she railed at the police in a station near her cabin, and then for hours she would not open her eyes.

Much persuasion was needed before she permitted members of the Charity Home staff, under whose care she had been since Jan. 11, when she appeared before a judge as a vagrant, to dress her in clothes provided by the American Consulate Relief Committee.

Hours more of argument were needed before the ship's captain prevailed on her to open her eyes and speak to her son, Serios, who was withdrawn from an Ahmedabad school and Gandhi's guardianship recently to join his mother.

Lived in Iowa.

Mrs. Cook is the daughter of the late George Cram Cook, author, playwright and founder of the Provincetown Players, who once lived in Davenport, Ia. Her husband is a young Greek, who now lives in Athens.

Aug. 26, 1931, Mrs. Cook announced that she would abandon all to serve the escetic Gandhi; a few months later a Brahmin "purification" sealed the vows when she turned Hindu.

Since then her life in India has been one of contrasts: she was made the "first American Aryan" by initiation into a mystic Hindu sect; only after great persuasion did Gandhi end her determination to join him in a fast; she acted as a street cleaner in Bangalore.

Disappeared Last Fall.

Last May she arrived at the Gandhi cantonment on the banks of the Sabarmati River, admitting that Gandhi's accusation of worldliness against her were "all true," and took up a "new life" in accordance with the teachings of the "holy one."

But in October of 1933 she suddenly disappeared and finally appeared in Delhi, where she said she was through with the Mahatma's rigorous mode of life, and that she wanted thrills and speed and life.

But an accident in a new automobile resulted in a stay of several weeks in a Calcutta hospital, after which she was put in a charity home because, she told the judge, "she had no place else to go.'"

Schoolboy Kills Self After Quarrel.

PRINCETON, Ind., Feb. 10.—The body of Raymond Douglas, 14-year-old high school student, was found today in a woods near here where he apparently had ended his life with a small rifle. R. Norman Douglas, father of the boy, said he and his son had quarreled Wednesday evening and the boy had left home with the rifle.

PRESIDENT CALLS ON BOY SCOUTS TO ASSIST THE NEEDY

Roosevelt in Radio Address Urges Collection of Clothing, Furnishings as National Good Turn.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—President Roosevelt today called on Boy Scouts to do a national good turn.

The President in a radio address especially for them asked that they collect household furnishings, bedding and clothes for the needy. Eagle Scouts of Washington surrounded Mr. Roosevelt as he spoke from the Cabinet room at the White House. Concluding, he asked Scouts of the nation to repeat with him the Boy Scout oath.

The occasion for the address was the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the Boy Scouts.

Text of President's Address.

The text of the President's address follows:

"Fellow Scouts: I am happy to participate in the twenty-fourth anniversary celebration of our organization, the Boy Scouts of America. Nearly 1,000,000 of us are mobilized at this time in all parts of the country as a part of the program for this week of celebration. Home and farm patrols and troops of farm boys are joining with their brother Scouts in the big cities.

"In front of the City Hall in San Francisco—and it is 9 o'clock in the morning there—thousands of Scouts join with other thousands in the Hippodrome in New York in carrying on the cause of world-wide brotherhood in scouting.

"As most of you know, scouting has been one of my active interests for many years. I have visited hundreds of troops in their home towns and in their camps. I know, therefore, from personal experience the things we do and stand for as Scouts. We have ideals. We are a growing organization. We believe that we are accomplishing fine American results not only for our own membership, but also for our families, our communities and our nation.

Building Better Citizenship.

"Summed up in one sentence, the aim of scouting is to build up better citizenship. I believe that we are contributing greatly to that objective.

"I am especially happy today to

Eagle Scouts of Washington surrounded Mr. Roosevelt as he spoke from the Cabinet room at the White House. Concluding, he asked Scouts of the nation to repeat with him the Boy Scout oath.

The text of the President's address follows:

"Fellow Scouts: I am happy to participate in the twenty-fourth anniversary celebration of our organization, the Boy Scouts of America. Nearly 1,000,000 of us are mobilized at this time in all parts of the country as a part of the program for this week of celebration. Home and farm patrols and troops of farm boys are joining with their brother Scouts in the big cities.

"In front of the City Hall in San Francisco—and it is 9 o'clock in the morning there—thousands of Scouts join with other thousands in the Hippodrome in New York in carrying on the cause of world-wide brotherhood in scouting.

"As most of you know, scouting has been one of my active interests for many years. I have visited hundreds of troops in their home towns and in their camps. I know, therefore, from personal experience the things we do and stand for as Scouts. We have ideals. We are a growing organization. We believe that we are accomplishing fine American results not only for our own membership, but also for our families, our communities and our nation.

Building Better Citizenship.

"Summed up in one sentence, the aim of scouting is to build up better citizenship. I believe that we are contributing greatly to that objective.

"I am especially happy today to extend personal greetings and congratulations to the scouts and leaders who have earned the president's award for progress in the year 1933, as a part of the 10-year program. It is appropriate that we are planning for the celebration of our silver jubilee, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America, which will culminate in a great National Jamboree here in the nation's capital in the summer of 1935. Of course, it would be physically impossible for us to have the whole membership of the Boy Scouts of America, a million strong, come to Washington at one time, but I much hope that it will be possible to have every nook and cranny of our nation represented.

"As a preliminary to our silver jubilee, and in line with the emphasis of service for others which we have always stressed, I suggest to you that it is time once more for us to do a national good turn.

Calls for "Good Turn."

"As many of you know, we are doing everything possible in this emergency to help suffering humanity. I called upon the Federal Emergency Relief Administrator, Mr. Harry L. Hopkins, to tell me what kind of a national good turn would be of the greatest service. He has recommended that during the balance of the month of February every troop and every scout do everything possible in their separate localities to collect such household furnishings, bedding and clothes, as people may be able to share as gifts to those who greatly need them.

"Therefore, I ask you, under the direction of your own local officers, and in conference with the representatives of the Federal Relief Administration and other local social agencies, to gather up such of this material as may be available for distribution.

"I am confident that the American people will generously cooperate and respond. Indeed, I am hoping that in many cases they will telephone or send letters to the local Scout offices to offer their help to carry through this national good turn.

Offers of Co-operation.

"Already I have received offers of co-operation from Governors of states, from Mayors and other community leaders. May you carry out this new service and rededicate yourselves to the Scout oath.

"I ask you to join with me and the Eagle Scouts and our President and Chief Scout Executive who are here with me in the White House in giving again the Scout oath.

"All stand!

"Give the Scout sign!

"Repeat with me the Scout oath!

"'On my honor I will do my best: To do my duty to God and my country and to obey the Scout law; to help other people at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.'"

6000 St. Louis Scouts Assembled in Theater Hear Address.

More than 6000 St. Louis Boy Scouts gathered at the Fox Theater yesterday morning to hear President Roosevelt in a radio address request them, along with the other scouts of the country, to gather house furnishings for the needy as their part in the national relief program. The scouts cheered the President for more than five minutes at the conclusion of his address.

Earle W. Beckmann, scout executive of the St. Louis Council, said the local scouts would begin immediately to carry out the President's request. The gathering at the theater was, except for the circus which is held each spring, the largest scout mobilization in the city.

The six districts of the council met at six separate points near Grand and Washington boulevards and marched to the theater in parades, led by bands. Before the President's speech was broadcast, they listened to talks by Col. H. D. McBride, Scout Commissioner; Associate City Counselor E. H. Wayman, and Charles H. Mills, scout activities director.

6000 St. Louis Boy Scouts Repeating Oath With Roosevelt

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

AT THE conclusion of his radio address to the Boy Scouts yesterday, President Roosevelt asked all the nation's Scouts to stand and repeat with him the Scout oath. Here are 6000 St. Louis scouts standing at attention and saying the oath at the Fox Theater, where they listened to the address.

ALCORN, SANKEY'S PARTNER, BEGINS SERVING LIFE TERM

He Joins Four Other Notorious Criminals in Paying Penalty for Kidnaping.

By the Associated Press.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Feb. 10.—Under life sentence for the $60,000 ransom kidnaping of Charles Boettcher II of Denver, Gordon Alcorn today entered the Leavenworth Federal penitentiary where four other notorious kidnapers are held.

Alcorn was not allowed to talk as the special railroad car bearing him here from Sioux Falls, S. D., was shunted inside the prison walls.

Alcorn confessed participation in the Boettcher kidnaping which was plotted and executed by a gang headed by Verne Sankey, who beat the law by hanging himself in his South Dakota prison cell this week. Mrs. Sankey awaits trial on a Boettcher kidnaping charge and three participants besides Sankey and Alcorn are in prison.

Alcorn is the fifth kidnaper confined here in the Government's drive against the "snatch racket." Harvey Bailey, George (Machine Gun) Kelly, Albert Bates and R. G. (Boss) Shannon, serving life terms for the $200,000 kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel at Oklahoma City last summer, are the others. All but Shannon are in "solitary."

Ex-Sheriff, 86, Found Shot Dead.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Christopher Strassheim, 86 years old, Republican Sheriff of Cook County from 1907 to 1912, was found dead today in his apartment, a bullet wound in his head and a revolver by his side. He had been ill for some time.

APPROVES BILL FOR MORE PAY FOR U. S. OFFICIALS ABROAD

House Committee Will Speed Action to Relieve Representatives Hit by Depreciated Dollar.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The House Foreign Affairs Committee unanimously approved today a bill to authorize payment of all diplomatic and consular officials abroad a sliding scale of salaries to keep their compensation on a 100 per cent level despite fluctuating currencies. The bill will be called up in the House at the earliest opportunity under a rule giving it privileged status.

United States foreign representatives, ranging from Ambassadors to visa clerks, have made urgent pleas that something be done to save them from actual want and distress as a result of the decreased value of the dollar.

The proposed law would be retroactive to July 15, when President Roosevelt arranged for payment of salaries in gold in those countries still on a gold standard. It is estimated the new bill would involve expenditure of something over $7,000,000 by the end of the 1935 fiscal year.

FEDERAL REGULATION OF LITTLE CONCERN TO LOCAL EXCHANGE

"Necessary Adjustments" Easy If Legislation Proposed Should Be Passed.

Proposed Federal legislation regulating stock exchanges would have little effect on the St. Louis Stock Exchange, its president, Benjamin F. Jacobs, said yesterday.

"The St. Louis Stock Exchange primarily is an investor's market and short sales do not amount to a hill of beans," Jacobs said. "Most trading is on a cash basis and there is a noticeable absence of pools.

"Should the proposed bills pass as introduced, the necessary adjustments would be easy for the St. Louis Exchange. There probably would be curtailment to some extent at first but soon an even trend would be re-established."

9,000,000 ACRES FOR WILD LIFE IN U. S. PROPOSED

President's Committee Urges Submarginal Land Be Bought—Maximum Cost $50,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — A plan for setting aside 9,000,000 acres of land for game birds and animals was presented to President Roosevelt today by his committee on wild life restoration.

This total, distributed over 44 states, would be taken out of agricultural production and restored to its wild state to provide breeding and nesting areas, 4,000,000 acres of it for waterfowl and 5,000,000 acres for upland game birds.

The maximum cost estimated by the committee was $50,430,910 with a figure of $24,430,910 set as the minimum for carrying out the work.

Acquisition of an additional 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 acres for wild life production and related purposes was also recommended as part of the Government's announced program for buying submarginal farm land, possibly up to 50,000,000 acres.

List of 401 Proposals.

A list of 401 proposals submitted by State Game Commissioners, the Bureau of Biological Survey and other groups was recommended in the report after the committee had surveyed the possibilities of each. Of these a total of 325,000 acres was recommended for immediate work because of accurate available figures and surveys.

The projects would be distributed as follows: Migratory waterfowl nesting areas, 311; upland game, 46; Antelope, 3; deer, 15; elk, 3; bear, 7; Mountain sheep, 2; nongame species, 6; research, such as soil-erosion studies, 8.

The specific location of the areas recommended for purchase and restoration for wild life use were not made public. Funds for the work would be obtained, according to estimates of the committee form an expected fund of $700,000 from a "duck stamp" tax, provision for which is made in a bill which has passed the Senate; $300,000 from appropriations under the migratory Bird Conservation Act; $2,500,000 from an ammunition tax which has been approved by arms manufacturers; and an undetermined amount from game and fur cropping.

Members of Committee.

The committee, composed of Thomas H. Beck of Wilton, Conn., J. N. Darling of Des Moines, Ia., and Prof. Aldo Leopold of Madison, Wis., in discussing the report emphasized that it did not concern wild life alone but was a general program of "restoration" involving land utilization, erosion control, water conservation, floor control, forestry management and retirement of agricultural lands.

"There is incontrovertible evidence of a critical and continuing decline in our wild life resources, especially migratory waterfowl, due to the destruction and neglect of vast natural breeding and nesting areas by drainage, the encroachment of agriculture, and the random efforts of our disordered progress toward and undefined goal," they said.

To carry out the recommendations of the report, the committee urged the appointment of a restoration commissioner who would coordinate the entire program under direction of the secretaries of Agriculture, Interior and Commerce.

The commissioner would be assisted by supervisors of migratory waterfowl and shore birds; upland game; song, insect-eating, and ornamental birds; and large game. All would be assisted by experts in land acquisition and restoration, land and wild life management, and research.

The committee said the program would not require new legislation and could be put into effect rapidly through administrative rulings and presidential orders.

It recommended the earmarking of $25,000,000 for the submarginal land requirements of the committee's plan and a similar allotment from public and civil works funds for payment of workers needed for the restoration work.

Other immediate measures suggested included the retirement by executive order of between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 acres of the public domain from grazing and hay mowing, particularly margins of lakes used as duck nesting areas in northern states.

Much of the work in restoring areas for game animals would consist of buying outlying ranches in the public domain which control grazing privileges and allowing the entire park or forest preserve for the use of elk, deer, bear, antelope and mountain sheep.

Closing Time for Foreign Mails.

Mails for Italy close at 9 o'clock tomorrow night, at the Main Postoffice, Eighteenth and Walnut streets; parcel post for Germany and Great Britain and full European mails at 9 o'clock Tuesday night.

Pierce-Arrow Salon Display in St. Louis Throughout This Week

"Silver Arrow" Specially Streamlined Models Among Those in Three Groups Shown.

An opening salon display of the new 1934 Pierce-Arrow cars is being held this week by the Western Automobile Co., Washington boulevard at Euclid.

These new cars, designed and built entirely within the Pierce-Arrow organization following its return to independence a few months ago, range from the highly streamlined "Silver Arrow" to the more conventionally designed sedans and limousines, according to Ashley Papin, sales manager. In the complete line there are three distinct groups, two "twelves" and an "eight," ranging in price from $2795 factory list to $4495.

"According to word from Roy H. Faulkner, vice president of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co., said Papin, "this new line has been given the greatest public ovation ever accorded new models in Pierce-Arrow history.

4 Cubic Feet More Space.

Aside from the streamline modernization, the outstanding developments in the 1934 Pierce-Arrows are roomier interiors with nearly four cubic feet of additional space; airplane type insulation; draftless ventilation; completely re-designed tailoring and appointments; adjustable seats in the rear as well as in the front; 50 per cent greater frame rigidity with full length box-girded side members; full automatic power brakes, improved synchro-mesh free-wheeling, and greater power in the "eight."

In the eight-cylinder group, designated Model 840, the engine rating is 140 horsepower. There are two wheelbases, 139 and 144 inches. The latter chassis accommodates the seven-passenger limousine models and a moderately priced streamlined "Silver Arrow."

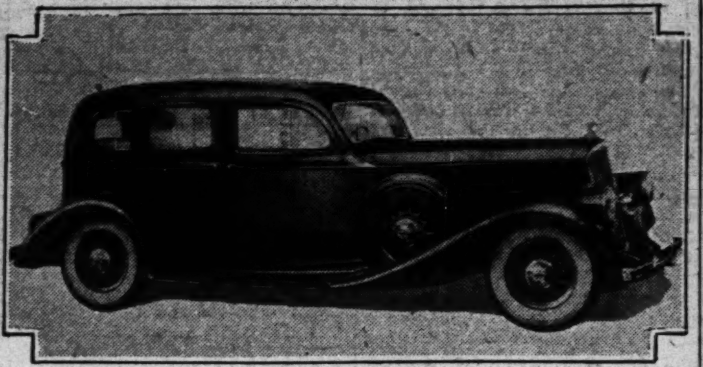
The two groups of twelves are designated Models 1240 and 1248. Both are powered with the Pierce-Arrow 175 horsepower 12-cylinder engine which gained world-wide recognition last year when Ab Jenkins used it in his 118-mile per hour run on the salt beds of Utah, where he scored 14 official world speed and endurance records.

Insulated Like Air Liners.

Following airplane practice in sound proofing the cabins of the finest transport liners, Pierce-Arrow offers in its 1934 cars the first completely insulated automobiles on the American market. The principal insulating material used is all-fiber Kapok, obtained from the pods of the Ceiba tree in Java. This material, after processing, is said to be 25 to 50 per cent more efficient than any other insulating material now used in any other automobile.

Responsible in a great measure for Pierce-Arrow's structural excellence in body and chassis, is the fact that the management has been steadily perfecting its working personnel since the company resumed independence. Many of the veterans of the Pierce-Arrow staff that have won recognition for the Pierce-Arrow car in years past, are again contributing to a new standard.

One of the New Pierce-Arrows



One of the more conservative models in the new 1934 Pierce-Arrow line which is being shown in St. Louis this week. Pierce-Arrows come this year in three groups, designed for three different preferences in body design.

2572 Drivers Sign Goodrich Safe-Driving Pledges in This Area

In the first nine months of operation, the program for safety awards to truck, bus and taxicab drivers carried out by the B. F. Goodrich Co. has resulted in 2572 drivers in the St. Louis district signing the safe-driving pledges and entering the race for the awards, it is announced by W. M. Stonestreet, St. Louis district manager.

These drivers represent 198 owners of commercial vehicles, either individual or fleet operators, who are taking part in a nation wide safety campaign started last year by Goodrich.

Many awards have already been made to drivers who have completed six months of driving without an accident for which they were responsible. Other awards are being made every week.

Each driver, upon completion of six months of driving without accident receives a silver medal. Upon completion of a year's no-accident record he is given a gold medal. Each fleet operator, or individual vehicle owner whose vehicles have a no-accident record for 12 months is given a safety award certificate.

Chevrolet Nearing Capacity Production; 3304 Cars on Jan. 31

With a payroll almost equal to its all-time high, Chevrolet entered February well on the way toward capacity operation, M. E. Coyle, general manager, announces.

Production increased more than 50 per cent in the last week of January—from 2141 cars on Jan. 24 to 3304 on Jan. 31. Co-ordination of activities in the 21 domestic plants was proceeding at a rate which indicated steady progress.

Dealers throughout the country, Coyle said, will soon be making immediate delivery of any model desired.

Chevrolet payrolls on Jan. 31 totaled 53,203 persons, as compared with 33,727 on the corresponding day last year. The payroll increase for the week was nearly 2400 persons. These figures include only the workers on Chevrolet's own payroll. Inclusion of Fisher Body workers producing bodies for the new Chevrolet would almost double that total.

"Our own direct payroll," said Coyle, "breaks all Chevrolet records since the spring of 1929, and is the largest we have ever had at this time of year. As a matter of fact, it is within 3000 of our largest payroll of all time."

Coyle emphasizes the fact that the company is taking back its old employes, and will have no need for new workers at any of its plants.

Diesel Motor Experiments.

One of the important units automotive authorities of the United States for several years have been trying to develop for application to automobiles on a practical basis is the Diesel type motor. The Diesel engine is a foreign born power plant. There have been many experimental cars powered with such motors, but the industry has not yet regarded the result as sufficiently satisfactory to warrant production on a cmmercial scale.

For Rush Delivery of Meats

Five Ford units delivered to the Will Docter Meat Co. for delivery service, especially to hotels, restaurants and institutions. Painted vermilion red, they consist of three Ford V-8 panel body trucks on 131½-inch wheelbase, a Model "A" standard panel delivery car and a V-8 three-window de luxe coupe. Each unit is especially insulated and has complete refrigeration. In the picture are Will Docter (wearing a white coat), William Mendenhall, the Ford dealer who furnished the units, and R. E. Shatrick, of Mendenhall's sales staff.

Ford Dealers Meet Salesmen to Start Sales Training Course

Ford dealers and salesmen were guests of the Ford Motor Co. at a meeting at the Coronado Hotel Thursday night to inaugurate a comprehensive training course.

Plans were discussed for holding a national Ford salesmen's contest in which substantial awards will be made, based on the salesman's knowledge of the Ford car.

According to M. N. Johnson, Ford branch manager, the Ford business is better than it has been in years.

The sales aids provided, public acceptance of the Ford car, and an enthusiastic dealer organization will certainly result in an outstanding year for the Ford company, Johnson says.

Body sills are eliminated in the Auburn line by bolting the body direct to the side rails.

Tide Water Oil Co. Names Distributers In St. Louis and County

Appointment of J. O. Sampson and of the Laclede Oil Co. distributers of its products in St. Louis and St. Louis County is announced by Edwin K. Musick, district manager for the Tide Water Co.

Samson is president of the Power Oil Corporation, 600 South Vandeventer avenue, where he has temporary offices, but expects to move into permanent headquarters by March 1, at which time he says he will have 24 retail outlets operating.

Officers of the Laclede Oil Co. are Charles H. Christel and R. W. Ellis. This firm has a bulk plant and super-service station at Gravois road and the Frisco tracks.

Veedol motor oil and Tydol gasoline, both well known to motorists here, are among the chief products of the Tide Water Oil Co., which is the largest refiner and marketer of 100 per cent Pennsylvania oil in the world. One of the largest of the independent oil companies, it owns and controls large crude oil resources, and produces, refines and manufactures all of its products. It has been refining, producing and marketing oil products since 1888.

Another change in the Cadillac, but harder to find because it is buried deeply in the engine, is the adoption of aluminum pistons.

H. E. Clark Named St. Louis Manager for Western Auto Supply

Don A. Davis, president of the Western Auto Supply Co., announces the appointment of H. E. Clark as St. Louis manager for the company, succeeding K. S. Hall who has been promoted to be supervisor of store installations.

Clark has been with the Western Auto Supply Co. for seven years, coming from Washington, D. C., where he was manager for five years.

Hall has been with the company 17 years, his first position with the organization having been in Kansas City when the company had but one store.

Hall says that the 136th Western Auto Supply Store will be opened soon. He opened his company's first store in St. Louis in July, 1926. There are now five Western Auto Supply stores in Greater St. Louis.

"Why doesn't everybody buy the new Pontiac?"

The other day, in the deepest sincerity, an owner said to us—"Why doesn't everybody buy the new Pontiac?"

Do you know what prompted this question?

This owner had simply learned what we have known since we built this car, namely——that if everybody were completely familiar with the advantages of owning the new Pontiac, almost everybody would want it.

Suppose, briefly, that everybody knew such facts as these—

—that Pontiac is really a big car, with a wheelbase of 117 inches, and a Fisher body that is most generously roomy—

—that Pontiac has a big, smooth, powerful straight eight engine—really the equal, in every way, of the very finest power plants—

—that Pontiac has "Knee-Action" wheels as developed by General Motors, which are far different from the independent springing devices offered on other cars in the field—

—that Pontiac has big, smooth, powerful Bendix mechanical brakes—unexcelled by any brakes for safety and ease of action—

—that Pontiac is a product of the General Motors Corporation—the foremost automotive organization in the world—

—that Pontiac is really almost as economical, both to buy and to operate, as any car you can name . . . including even those that are designed primarily for economy—

—that not more than three or four stock cars in America can pass a Pontiac on the road—and these only on miles and miles of straightaway—

—that Pontiac is really the surprise car of the year, with far more specific things to recommend it than any other car at its price—

—and, finally, that Pontiac is one of the two most beautiful cars in the world . . . absolutely regardless of cost!

* * * *

Yes—if everybody actually knew these things—knew them, that is, as we know them—we believe that just about everybody would want a new Pontiac.

If we're right in this assumption—you want a Pontiac—for you've read the facts here, for yourself.

Are we right?

Then come in. We will be delighted to prove to you the full truth of every single statement made in this message.

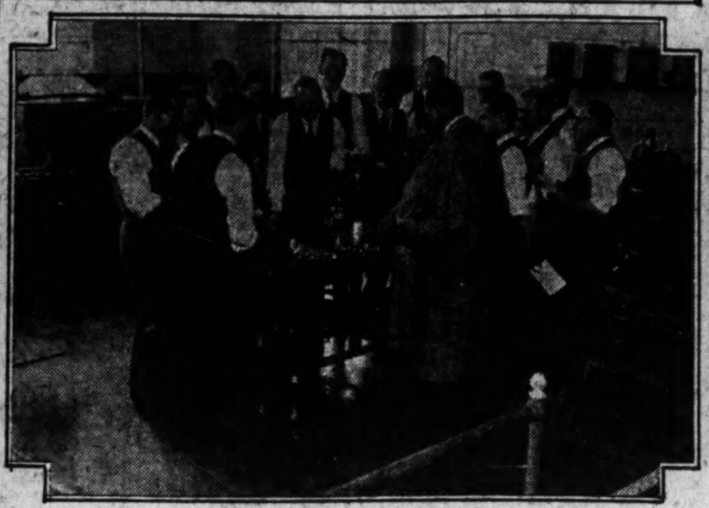
Michener, of the H & H Machine Co., 4216 Easton avenue, and Walter Mills, of the Auto Parts Co., 3201 Locust street, jobbers for Aluminum Industries, Inc., of Cincinnati, O., will hold a general meeting for all the independent auto repair shops of St. Louis at the German House, Jefferson and Lafayette, next Thursday night, at 8 o'clock.

The meeting is of importance to all independent shops regarding the reconstruction and general overhauling of all motors. Refreshments will be provided.

Attending Service School



Scene in the Service School of the St. Louis branch of the Ford Motor Co., where last Saturday the first of a series of classes was held for the branch personnel including branch executives, department heads, travelers and office employes. Particular stress was placed on the necessity of specialized tools, high-grade mechanics and quick, courteous attention to a customer.

In this same school hundreds of Ford mechanics are trained each year, many of them, particularly the dealers' service managers, coming back every few months to learn the latest methods developed at the factory.

Pontiac Finds New "10-W" Motor Oil Best for Cold Start

It Remains Fluid at Zero, So Engine Turns Over Easily for Starting.

Sub-zero temperatures in Michigan have enabled Pontiac engineers to conduct systematic tests of the new 10-W motor oil, the quick-starting cold weather lubricant which they were the first to adopt as standard for cars operated in rigorous climates.

Although the 1934 Pontiacs and the new oil had been tested for months in the "cold room" of the General Motors Research Laboratories, the first opportunity for an outdoor test under operating conditions came during a zero snap shortly before the public announcement of the new cars.

A fleet of 11 1934 Pontiac straight eights was being operated at the General Motors Proving Ground when the mercury suddenly dropped below zero. Instead of being housed over night in the Proving Ground garage, the cars were left in the open, exposed to a whistling north wind. At 8 a. m. the next morning, with the thermometer registering six below zero, all of the 11 cars started at the first run of the starter motor.

Since then the outdoor cold starting tests have continued at the factory. Whenever the weather is sufficiently severe, groups of six to 10 or 12 cars are left outdoors over night in exposed areas.

B. H. Anibal, vice-president in charge of engineering for the Pontiac Motor Co., predicts that this oil soon will be adopted generally for use in other cars.

"This new oil," said Mr. Anibal, "has been developed especially for cold weather service. It is not merely an ordinary oil 'adapted' to cold weather service.

"It remains entirely fluid at zero, eliminating the drag which ordinary oils exert in cold starting. At all winter temperatures, it provides a good lubricating base which affords complete protection for the motor bearings, as proved in more than 100,000 miles of test driving at the General Motors Proving Ground. It thoroughly seals the piston rings and enables them to hold Pontiac's high 6.2 to one compression. Oil economy is very close to that of heavier lubricants. After a recent 600-mile high-speed run, we were able to add less than two quarts of oil to the original supply of 10-W in the Pontiac crankcase.

"And, in addition to its cold starting qualities, this 10-W oil affords other important advantages. It reduces the internal friction in the motor so effectively that added power is released for considerably faster pick-up and higher top speed. Another result is a definite increase in winter fuel economy."

Auburn Factory Bringing Dealers to See Cars by Plane

The first group of Auburn dealers to arrive the past week in the Auburn factory's special plane was made up of 10 from the Metropolitan New York district. When these were returned East, another group of ten was flown in from Philadelphia.

On the flight to Auburn each group stopped at Williamsport, Pa., where they inspected the Lycoming plant, the engine division of Auburn.

At the Connersville plant, the dealers were taken through the factories, inspecting each department. Each dealer drove and tested the new models.

Other groups of dealers will be taken to the Auburn plant in the company's big tri-motored Stinson plane from every section of the country, as speedily as the air trips can be arranged. By using the plane the dealers will be able to make the trip from the farthest points in the country in a short time.

New 'Sport Scout' Indian Motorcycle

Reporting a distinct uplift in the motorcycle business through Government and police orders and a 21 per cent increase in the sports use of motorcycles in the United States, the Indian Motorcycle Co. announces introduction of an entirely new high speed streamlined model, the Indian Sport Scout, with a two-cylinder, 45 cubic-inch engine, independent front wheel springing, low center of gravity, lighted instrument panel, automatic dry sump oiling and a new multiple disc clutch operating in oil.

The machine weighs 385 pounds and has a wheelbase of 56½ inches.

La Fayette Cars Being Shipped at Rate of 100 a Day

The first shipment of LaFayette cars to dealers was made the past week from the Nash-LaFayette plant at Racine, Wis.

Actual production of the new Nash entry in the low priced field began ten days ago, enabling the factory to start shipments at the rate of one hundred cars a day.

Preparations are being made as rapidly as possible to step up this rate of production to care for the demand following announcement of the car at the New York Auto Show.

Nine hundred men have already been added to the Racine plant payroll to take care of the present schedule of production. Another nine hundred have been added at the Nash-Seaman body plant in Milwaukee, where bodies for the LaFayette are being built.

Oldsmobile Executive At Session Here

D. E. RALSTON.

Buicks Show Sales Up 127 Per Cent at Exhibit in Chicago

W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager of the Buick Motor Co., reports the sale of 279 Buicks at the Chicago Show this year.

"This total," he says, "compares with 123 cars sold by Buick at the Chicago Show of 1933 and registers a gain of 156 cars, or 127 per cent. It is also above the record at the New York Show, where Buick sold 260 cars.

"Every sign points to the existence of a real demand for cars and we are more confident than ever that business is good again—and certain to be even better.

"Buick sales in 1934 to date show that a very good percentage of our newest owners are buying the Series 60 and the Series 90, our cars with longer wheelbases and higher prices. This is an additional reason for encouragement."

For State of Illinois

Fifty-nine 1½-ton Chevrolet trucks, equipped with Anthony dump bodies, which were added the past week to the large fleet of Chevrolet units operated by the State of Illinois. These trucks, which were built in the St. Louis Chevrolet plant, were purchased by John T. Casey, Superintendent of Machinery, and assigned to the Illinois State Highway Department. This was the third quantity purchase of Chevrolet units by Illinois this year.

R. J. Fitness Made Reo's Chief Engineer

Appointment of Ray J. Fitness as chief engineer of the Reo Motor Car Co. is announced.

Fitness goes to Reo direct from Chrysler, for whom for the last three years he has been experimental engineer. In all, Fitness has been associated with Chrysler Motors 10 years and has seen 27 years' service in the automobile business. He has served with Continental Motors, Studebaker and Dodge Brothers.

H. T. Thomas, veteran head of the Reo staff, will devote his time to the duties of chief research engineer. Thomas has given the industry several of its major developments, the latest being the Reo self-shifter, the automatic transmission which has been a complete success in Reo cars.

Employment Service For Dealers, Mechanics

The employment service inaugurated by F. S. Wiemeyer Co. some weeks ago, whereby mechanics and specialized service men may register at the Wiemeyer Co. and then dealers and repair men needing help can call for the names, has proven quite successful, resulting in a number of men receiving employment.

Men qualified for this work may register. The service, to be of benefit to dealers and mechanics, must be used by both. Names will be given to all dealers and repair men calling.

There has been a special call for trained auto machine shop operators.

Oldsmobile's gasoline tank holds a gallon less fuel this year. It has a capacity of 15 gallons, but serves as well through fuel economy.

STOCKS SHOW A MODERATE SETBACK IN WEEK'S TRADE

Political Flareup in Paris Undoubtedly Tended to Inspire Caution—Market Regulation Bill Gives Speculative Quarters a Qualm or Two.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—After four weeks of almost steadily advancing prices, securities markets this week were prompted to halt, retreat moderately, and seriously considered their positions.

The political flareup in Paris was undoubtedly a factor tending to inspire caution, and the Fletcher market regulation bill appearing toward the end of the week gave speculative quarters a qualm or two.

But in any case, it had been widely felt in Wall street that the markets were getting top-heavy; subject to minor interruptions, stocks had been moving upward since the end of October, and bonds since late November.

Stocks, measured by the price index of 90 representative issues, declined 3.5 points for the week, closing at 88.5, but that was 1.1 less than the previous week's gain. The index of 60 corporate bonds ended the week at 83.2, off 0.5 of a point from a week earlier, but 2 points above a fortnight ago.

Commodities gave a better account of themselves than securities, cotton was notably buoyant, futures rising $3.45 to $3.65 a bale to the highest prices since August of 1930. Wheat, on the contrary, lost a couple of cents a bushel. Moody's index of 15 sensitive raw staples, nevertheless, registered an advance for the week of 1.4 per cent.

Flurry in Aviation Shares.

Cancellation of air mail contracts prompted a selling flurry in aviation shares at the end of the week.

Administration quarters in Washington let it be known that any such speculative excesses as those of last June and July would be frowned upon. It was understood that it was partly with the idea of protecting the country from a too rapid rise in security and staple prices, which would be followed by the inevitable and disturbing slump, that the administration put the market control legislation forward at this time.

The political crisis in France attracted much attention at the start of the week. On Monday, before the outbreak of violent rioting in Paris, the French franc tumbled precipitantly both in London and New York, but thereafter it was strongly supported, evidently by purchases of French francs to convert into gold. During the remainder of the week, the franc came closer to its new parity, finishing at 6.47½ cents, a discount of about 2.4 per cent, which still made gold transfers to New York profitable. Gold buying in London brought the pound up from $4.93½ a week ago to $5.03 today.

"Crack-up" on Air Shares.

A crack-up in aviation shares and a rally from substantial early declines elsewhere featured a busy market for stocks at week-end.

The immediate response to proposed Federal regulation and cancellation of the Government's air-mail contracts was a heavy wave of selling which broke prices 1 to around 3 points, but the tide ebbed midway through the session and left comparatively few prominent casualties, these being largely in the aviation and inactive specialty sections. The average net change, in fact, was a loss of only three-tenths point.

Wall Street's second thoughts on the question of a regulatory law seemed to reflect an attitude of greater calm, though brokerage opinion was still rather confused. Several houses pointed out that the act had not yet been passed and that it might be modified during its course through Congress, a view which some Washington advices tended to support. Also, the proposed effective date, Oct. 1, would seem to provide sufficient time to permit more leisurely adjustments to whatever new order is arranged.

The opening saw a scramble to unload equities of many descriptions, especially those of companies interested in flying. Aviation Corporation opened with a 20,000-share block at 5⅝, off 3⅛; Douglass, Curtsis Wright common and North American Aviation were also hit. The opening in United Aircraft was delayed until about 11:10 o'clock, its first appearance being 3400 shares at a decline of 3⅞. Later this issue extended its loss to 7 points and closed near the bottom, although others managed to make more substantial recoveries; Douglas' opening loss of 3½ was cut to ⅝ net.

Metals to Fore.

When the market began to steady metal shares came to the fore with a rally that endured to the close. U. S. Smelting soared 5¼, Howe Sound, American Smelting, American Metals and Cerro de Pasco rose fractions to more than a point. U. S. Steel, after touching 54½, closed at 55⅞, off ⅜. General Motors, American Telephone, New York Central, North American and Union Carbide were among numerous leaders to return little or no net change. Chrysler lost one. American Can strengthened nearly 2 net.

In view of the Monday holiday, it was assumed that short covering had played a part in the rally for some traders probably felt the market had become a bit oversold, just as it had recently been overbought. Appearance of substantial support at the lower first hour levels provided a more cheerful note for the extended week-end. Sales reached a total of 2,187,310 shares.

The British pound recorded a gain of 1 cent at $5.03 and the French franc advanced .03½ of a cent to 6.47½ cents. Belgas and Swiss francs were up .10 and .15 of a cent, respectively. Canadian dollar was again unchanged at 99.12½ cents.

WEEK'S METAL REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—An advance of $2 per ton in zinc this week featured quiet but steady non-ferrous metal markets. Unofficial reports of curtailment in mine operations and an advance in ore prices caused smelters to advance metal quotations, but consumer buying was moderate. Recent larger purchases are said to have placed sellers in a more favorable position and the outlook for expanding galvanizing operations was causing expectations of renewed demand. Quieter conditions toward the close reflected an unfavorable view of January statistics and a disposition to await announcement of ore prices and mine output for the week.

Continued delays in drafting a copper code satisfactory to various interests was reflected by a quiet domestic copper market, with the price largely nominal at the 8-cent basis. Expansion in automobile production caused hopefulness for future improvement, but had no immediate influence. A fair export demand was reported at steady prices.

An advance of about 1 cent per pound in tin prices reflected steadiness of foreign exchanges, but business was on a small day-to-day basis. Consumers generally were said to be awaiting renewal of buying by tinplate manufacturers whose operations are slowly expanding. Some large plants were reported to have increased production this week.

Lead held steady and unchanged, with business of moderate proportions. Smelters were not pressing, in view of an expected renewal of consumer demand to fill February and March requirements as well as because of indications of increasing industrial needs for the metal.

Antimony remained dull and prices nominal.

More active specifications for sheets and strips from the automobile industry accounted largely for increasing steel mill operations. Railroad equipment buying also aided, although orders for heavier products have not yet reached mills. Consequently plant operations in various sections were irregular. A moderate gain in pig iron buying developed at steady prices.

COTTON STRENGTH HELPS BRING RALLY IN WHEAT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Soaring of the cotton market to fresh high price records for the season jerked grain values upward late today, more than wiping out early losses.

Advances in wheat, however, were not well maintained in the face of renewed selling at the last owing to uncertainties regarding weather and Washington legislative developments before trading would be resumed on Tuesday. Numerous reports of snow falling in Kansas and Nebraska and likely to improve the wheat crop outlook were current as dealings came to an end.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to ¼ cent higher, corn ⅜@¾ up, oats at ¼ decline to ¼ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 27 cents.

At first, the attention of grain traders converged almost wholly on weakness shown by the stock market and on disturbing of confidence in various quarters because of proposed restriction of dealings in organized security and commodity exchanges. Wheat prices tumbled quickly about 1½ cents and corn about 1 cent, corn reaching the lowest level since Dec. 30 and wheat the lowest since Jan. 26. Pronounced strength which soon developed in the cotton market, though, with rallies that took place in stocks led afterward to a right-about-face for grains.

Assisting the railying power of grains was comment from trade leaders that President Roosevelt had taken a stand that organized exchanges were of vital importance to the country, that he had not endorsed the stipulations of the bills now pending, and that changes of vital importance were yet likely before the bills are enacted. It was urged also that he would not desire anything which would hurt the functioning of markets. Friends of higher prices for wheat emphasized, too, that domestic primary arrivals of wheat were lighter and that fair sales of wheat here were being made to millers.

Corn and oats scored advances after stop loss selling oc corn early was absorbed. Shipping demand here for corn showed material enlargement.

Provisions rose with cotton to new high levels for the season.

COTTON STRENGTH HELPS BRING RALLY IN WHEAT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Soaring of the cotton market to fresh high price records for the season jerked grain values upward late today, more than wiping out early losses.

Advances in wheat, however, were not well maintained in the face of renewed selling at the last owing to uncertainties regarding weather and Washington legislative developments before trading would be resumed on Tuesday. Numerous reports of snow falling in Kansas and Nebraska and likely to improve the wheat crop outlook were current as dealings came to an end.

Wheat closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to ¼ cent higher, corn ⅜@¾ up, oats at ¼ decline to ⅛ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 27 cents.

At first, the attention of grain traders converged almost wholly on weakness shown by the stock market and on disturbing of confidence in various quarters because of proposed restriction of dealings in organized security and commodity exchanges. Wheat prices tumbled quickly about 1½ cents and corn about 1 cent, corn reaching the lowest level since Dec. 30 and wheat the lowest since Jan. 26. Pronounced strength which soon developed in the cotton market, though, with rallies that took place in stocks led afterward to a right-about-face for grains.

Assisting the rallying power of grains was comment from trade leaders that President Roosevelt had taken a stand that organized exchanges were of vital importance to the country, that he had not endorsed the stipulations of the bills now pending, and that changes of vital importance were yet likely before the bills are enacted. It was urged also that he would not desire anything which would hurt the functioning of markets. Friends of higher prices for wheat emphasized, too, that domestic primary arrivals of wheat were lighter and that fair sales of wheat here were being made to millers.

Corn and oats scored advances after stop loss selling oc corn early was absorbed. Shipping demand here for corn showed material enlargement.

Provisions rose with cotton to new high levels for the season.

BOND TRADE QUIETER IN WEEK-END MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Bonds were hesitant in today's brief market session, apparently reflecting the nervousness of stocks over the administrative proposal for the regulation of securities trading.

Many speculative liens were quite soft in early transactions, but most of them later reduced their losses along with equities. Final declines ranged from fractions to around a point.

The activity slowed down considerably, transfers totaling only $7,647,000, par value, against $17,426,000 last Saturday. The average for 60 domestic corporate issues was off two-tenths of a point at 83.2. On the week this average was down one-half point.

Aside from the overnight announcement of Washington's initial step toward the control of speculation, there was little in the news of particular interest to the loans market. Dealers reported some lightening of commitments because of the Monday holiday, when the Exchange will be closed.

Most of the prime investment corporation groups held their ground well and a number of them finished with minor gains. The principal losers were the recently popular high-yielding rails, although losses among these were not too severe at the close. Many bonds were unchanged at the conclusion of business.

Among the more active losers were some issues of Alleghany Corporation, American Rolling Mill, American Waterworks, International Telephone, Kelly Springfield, New Orleans Public Service, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, New Haven, Paramount Publix, St. Joseph Lead, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway and Union Oil.

U. S. Government securities were noticeably dull, but small advances predominated in this section.

Foreign obligations were quiet and mixed. French Government losses were up 1 to 3, and improvement was shown by bonds of Dutch East Indies, Switzerland, Germany and Poland. Cuban 5½s dropped 2½ points and some of the Argentines and Colombians were heavy.

CURB MARKET RALLIES FROM OPENING DECLINE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Curb stocks encountered heavy selling at the opening today but rallied vigorously in the second hour to cancel or reduce losses at the finish. Utilities were subjected to heavy pressure at the start. Oils recivered almost completely and pivot shares worked higher. Some industrial specialties also ended with net gains.

United Aircraft warrants were off more than 2 points in sympathy with weakness in the common stock of that corporation on the big board. Aviation shares generally were easier, Waco and General Aviation yielding around a point each.

Transfers approximated 309,000 shares compared with 322,000 for last Saturday.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 10.—Directors of the Hecla Mining Company, today declared a dividend of 10 cents a share, to be paid March 15 to stock of record Feb. 15.

The dividend was only partly earned, directors deciding to draw on surplus to some extent to pay $100,000 to a million shares outstanding. A similar dividend was paid three months ago. James F. McCarthy of Wallace, Idaho, president, observed that the price of lead had dropped, but that the decrease was approximately offset by an increase in the price on silver.

13C COTTON ON BOARD, THE FIRST SINCE 1930

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10. — An active and apparently urgent demand which appeared to be coming chiefly from the trade, sent cotton into new high ground for the season today. Pre-holiday realizing was absorbed on moderate early reactions and after selling off to 12.21 May advanced to 12.48, while cotton for delivery next January sold up to 13.03, placing 13-cent cotton back on the quotation boards for the first time since August, 1930. May closed at 12.45, with the general market closing firm at net advances of 11 to 15 points.

The opening was 9 to 13 points lower under realizing and a little scattered Southern selling. March sold off to 12.07 and October to 12.57, making net losses of about 10 to 13 points, but offerings were not heavy and the market soon stiffened on a continued demand from the trade accompanied by reports of a continued firm spot situation in the South.

Comment was heard on the proposed Government purchases of cotton to make into goods for distribution to the needy and these features, combined with the prospect for crop control, seemed to dominate the market. March sold up to 12.32 and October to 12.83 in the late trading, making rallies of 15 to 28 points from the lowest. Closing quotations were within two or three points of the best.

There was selling at the start on the easy showing of Liverpool. The opening action of the stock market may also have been a factor but the influences of these features was exhausted by the early selling and the advance encounterd little opposition later. Reports of a firm situation in cotton goods no doubt contributed to the advance. Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 167,000 bales against 147,000 last year.

NEW TRUCKING RATES IN EFFECT THURSDAY

State Hopes by Schedule to Remedy Chaotic Freight Conditions.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 10.—The Missouri Public Service Commission today announced that a new schedule of motor truck rates, and standardized classifications of freight, for less than truck-load shipments, which was ordered by the commission last October to remedy chaotic truck rate conditions and to adjust rate differences between the trucks and railroads, would become effective on Feb. 15.

The rate revision and the requirement of uniform freight classifications was to have become effective last Jan. 1, under the order in October, but the time was extended to permit both the truck lines and the railroads to arrange their rate tariffs.

The commission order prescribed rates for less than truck-load shipments which average 77½ per cent of the existing rate level of the railroads for less than carload shipments of like commodities. The order, however, authorized the railroads to reduce their intrastate rates for less than carload shipments to meet the new rates ordered for the truck lines. The uniform freight classifications prescribed for the truck lines conform to those in use by the railroads.

Commission members said representatives of the railroads had indicated they would file new tariffs for less than carload shipmets, which in most instances would meet the competitive motor truck rates.

Rate experts of the commission stated they could not estimate the effect of the rate revision on shippers, pending a test of the new rates, because of differences in existing rates and lack of uniformity in existing freight classifications. However, shippers will benefit, it was said, through the requirement of uniformity in truck rates and the standardization of freight classifications.

The commission order applies to about 750 operators of truck lines licensed as common carriers under the Missouri truck and bus regulatory law. The order does not apply to truck lines licensed as interstate carriers or contract haulers.

The commission order followed a series of hearings last June, held at the request of both the railroads and truck operators, in an effort to stabilize rates and standardize freight classifications. The commission, in its October order, stated that it had not received sufficient evidence to determine exactly the proper level of motor truck rates, but felt that it should take steps to stabilize these rates, with an experimental schedule, which could be modified, if found necessary.

MOVE BY LAZIA'S LAWYERS TO HALT TAX EVASION TRIAL

Motion for Directed Verdict of Acquittal Taken Under Advisement by Federal Judge Otis.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 10.—Federal Judge Merrill E. Otis took under advisement today a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal of John Lazia, political lieutenant of Democratic Boss Tom J. Pendergast and reputed head of the Kansas City underworld, whose income tax evasion trial is nearing an end. He announced he would give his ruling at the reconvening of court Monday morning.

The motion is based on a demurrer holding that the Government's expose of bank records, indicating sums totaling more than $150,000 passed through Lazia's account in 1929 and 1930, failed to establish proof of income and that if the case were to be given to the jury it would constitute "a violation of the rights of the defendant."

During a 20-minute argument on the demurrer, with the jury excluded after the Government rested its case, Frank P. Walsh, attorney for the politician, called attention to the manner in which the Merchants' Bank here aided in Lazia's gambling operations.

Remarking that the evidence has disclosed an alliance between bankers and gamblers which tended to put a tinge of respectability on gambling Walsh told the court that his client's investment in a gambling house "would not prejudice me and even the Government recognizes it as a business transaction."

Bank Cashier in Stand.

His assertion was made shortly after Raymond Edlund, cashier of the Merchants' Bank had told of disbursing funds for gambling operations and also of handling the finances of a dog track in which Lazia was interested. The cashier's testimony came after a day devoted to cross-examination of Harry T. Riley, Internal Revenue agent, who produced bank records showing scores of mysterious transactions, some of them involving the operation of Cuban Gardens, the Clay County gambling casino, and the North Side dog track.

"This is one of those cases where the Government has put in a great number of unexplained items," Walsh argued, "and thrown in some illegal transactions, such as gambling, counting on creating prejudice to carry them along."

Walsh, who referred to "a group of bankers furnishing currency for gambling operations," insisted his client was not responsible for some of the checks introduced as evidence and said the court "would have to indulge in presumptions" to hold the bank records indicated a definite personal income.

The defense, which will introduce testimony, possibly that of Lazia himself, if the demurrer is overruled, maintained that some of the checks might represent loans, return of invested capital, "even gifts, non-taxable under the law at that time."

Value of Evidence Attacked.

Walsh, who has been chief counsel for Tom Mooney, California labor prisoner, for many years, conceded the admissability of the Government's evidence of Lazia's financial returns from Cuban gardens, the dog track and the Duke Motor Co., now out of business. The motor company was reputed to have sold cars throughout the underworld here.

Then he attacked the value of evidence bearing on those three sources of income, asserting Chicagoans and other Kansas City men were interested also in the dog track "which did not operate in 1929 and 1930" and that if all items pertaining to all three investments were totaled Lazia's income would be below the taxable level.

Replying for the Government, A. B. Lovan, Assistant United States District Attorney and former Assistant Attorney-General of Missouri, ridiculed the defense's contention that about $32,000 paid to Lazia from the gambling house was merely a return of his original investment. "Lazia was getting profits from the gambling house bankroll from the beginning," Lovan charged, "and he finally quit because he got tired of paying $500 a week for protection."

Testimony was given early in the trial, which opened last Monday, by a former manager of the gambling house, which ran across the Missouri River from Lazia's neighborhood, that Clay County officials were paid that sum weekly to let it run unmolested.

Numerous Cashier's Checks.

Lovan upheld the validity of the Government's evidence, based largely on the bank records, and asserted the numerous cashier's checks purchased by Lazia were bought, not as "gambler's currency" as he contends, but as such to conceal his income and its sources. The bank, the continued, was used as a medium to turn over the receipts of the gambling house to Lazia.

Lazia, neat in blue serge, conferred animatedly with his lawyers throughout the day and listened intently to the arguments.

Cross-examination of Riley, which continued until 3 p. m. less than an hour before the Government rested its case, evoked denials duplications occurred on the records presented by the prosecution and the segregation of checks involved in the operation of the horse-shoe shaped casino. Lazia spent $19,000 in constructing the place, it was shown.

Money in loan accounts was not counted, Riley said. The defense is trying to show that Lazia's bank balance at the beginning of 1929 was only $200 while at the end of the next year he owed the bank about $20,000. The Government contends balances are immaterial when contrasted with the steady procession of large sums, many from admittedly unexplained sources, that passed through his hands.

As the Government's principal witness left the stand after testifying continuously for nearly two days, Judge Otis remarked with a smile that he hoped "it won't be necessary to recall you."

Lazia's followers have packed the court room each day and several bodyguards accompanied him as he leaves after the sessions.

FRED BROWN FUNERAL SERVICE

Funeral services for Fred Brown, former Post-Dispatch pressman, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow, at his home, 8424 Water street. Burial will be in St. Marcus Cemetery with a military service.

Mr. Brown, who was 64 years old, died of heart disease, Friday. He suffered a stroke while at work three years ago, and since then he had been in poor health. He had been employed by the Post-Dispatch for 32 years. His widow, a son, and a daughter survive.

RENEWS FIGHT FOR ESTATE AS WIDOW OF THOMASSON

Bride of Night Club Entertainer Files Declaration of Election to Take Dower Share.

Mrs. Grace Thomasson Diefenbach, recent bride of Oscar L. Diefenbach, night club entertainer, renewed her claims yesterday to the $600,000 estate of her former husband, Hugh W. Thomasson, by filing in Probate Court a declaration of election to take one-half the estate as Thomasson's widow.

Four suits—two asking for the estate outright and two for amounts representing its estimated value—also were filed yesterday by Tower A. Thomasson, Mounds, Ill., and E. M. Thomasson, Denver, Colo., referred to in the past as distant relatives of Hugh W. Thomasson. They base their claims on alleged contracts with him in August, 1932.

The former Mrs. Thomasson and her attorneys agreed last September, in consideration of a $50,000 settlement from collateral heirs, to withdraw her claims to the estate, which consists largely of business property. Later Mrs. Thomasson and the attorneys signed a stipulation for the Missouri Supreme Court to adopt the findings of a Special Commissioner, who held that Mrs. Thomasson's three marriages to her elderly husband were invalid.

The Supreme Court adopted the findings, denied Mrs. Thomasson the right to intervene later in the judgment, and finally, after discovery of a will in which Thomasson had left the bulk of the estate to the public schools of Missouri, withdrew the adoption and held that the only issue was one of jurisdiction. It entered a new judgment holding that St. Louis courts were qualified to exercise jurisdiction and left out considerations of the validity of the marriages.

With admission of the will to probate, the Boatmen's National Bank displaced two collateral heirs as administrators and the heirs filed a will contest.

Mrs. Diefenbach's declaration, a copy of which was filed in the Recorder's office, was drawn up last Saturday, two days before she married Diefenbach, known as "Bobby" Roberts, master of ceremonies at the LaVida Night Club, in an early morning ceremony at St. Charles. Her marriage disclosed a previous ceremony and annulment shortly after Thomasson's death in January, 1933.

The contracts on which Tower A. Thomasson and E. M. Thomasson base their claims were introduced into evidence at a 90-day hearing on jurisdiction in the Thomasson case in 1932. They state that in consideration of the loyalty of the two plaintiffs to Thomasson, the two were to become his heirs.

UNITED RELIEF DRIVE WILL BE CLOSED FRIDAY

$2,132,467 or 57.5 Pct. of the $3,700,000 Goal Has Been Pledged in Campaign.

Definite decision to end the United Relief campaign with a meeting of solicitors next Friday noon was reached yesterday at a meeting of directors of United Relief, Inc. Termination of the drive on that date had been recommended by Campaign Chairman Arnold G. Stifel.

The total subscribed since the drive began Jan. 22 is $2,132,467, or 57.5 per cent of the $3,700,000 goal. Of the total pledged the larger subscriptions division has obtained $1,009,000; the employe division, $729,733; the general division, $238,982; and the county division, $49,751.

Three additional firms, it was announced last night, have been added to the 'honor roll" of corporations whose contributions, in the opinion of the committee of 100, represent a fair share of the community's responsibility to its needy. These were Famous-Barr Dry Goods Co., Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., and Phillips Petroleum Corporation.

Previously 63 firms had been given place on the honor roll. It is anticipated that others will be added as the committee of 100 proceeds with the work of presenting its recommendations to their executives. That committee, headed by Ethan A. H. Shepley, has 100 business and professional men as its members. Included are men familiar generally with the ability to give of most of the larger corporations in the city. It reviews their contributions, seeking to determine whether they bear a proper relation to the ability to give, the gifts of others, and the total sought.

Several teams from the larger subscriptions division will make an effort this week to dispose of about 200 prospect cards on which no reports have been received, and in the employe division reports are expected from nearly 800 firms, with about 49,000 prospective contributors. Preliminary reports of many of these, however, have been included in the totals of subscriptions already announced.

WOULD END MOVIE CENSORSHIP

National Board of Review Declares It Unnecessary.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Abolition of motion picture censorship, State and Federal, was urged today in a resolution adopted by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures. The resolution stated that censorship was "unnecessary, unscientific and opposed to the best interests of the public."

Mussolini Says Americans Exalt Courage and Optimism in Rulers as They Do Happy Ending in Movies

Roosevelt, He Declares, Has Raised Morale of Nation by Restoring Confidence in Spirit of People.

By BENITO MUSSOLINI,
Premier of Italy.

ROME, Feb. 10.

ACCORDING to news reaching Europe, citizens of the United States celebrated the birthday of President Roosevelt by sending him from every city, village and hamlet innumerable messages and not less innumerable tangible evidences of goodwill. This is a clear demonstration that President Roosevelt has continued to be popular and that the experiment he is conducting has increased his popularity.

The art of governing is based on several fundamental principles which are above casual and passing political formations and even above the various political constitutions of states.

The words monarchy, republic, autocracy, democracy, absolutism and liberalism have today an altogether different sound than they had at the beginning of the past century when around them battles not alone verbal were fought.

Theory of Government.

The principles of government have their origin in the fundamental necessities of people. Now, peoples in their vast multitudes, scattered or concentrated in their national territory, demand especially in difficult times, to be strongly governed.

The aspiration of a popular man inclined to order and tranquillity leans also to well being, but above all in the soul of peoples there is an imperious, inextinguishable requisite, that of justice. This truly, as ancient knowledge taught, is the foundation of a kingdom.

Now history and life show us that alongside these common denominators of the art of governing there exist differences of various kinds between races and peoples for which every nation requires in its government a very particular element.

For example, would the qualities which President Roosevelt possesses in such a pre-eminent way be adapted to govern European nations and vice versa would those possessed by European statesmen be suitable to govern America?

Those governing must unite in their personalities different and special characteristics of their people; otherwise they cannot win their hearts.

Methods in Italy.

The Italian people, for instance, have a profound respect for, and even worship, talent. They admire it at all times with sincere, unanimous enthusiasm—in politics as well as in arts, sciences and trade.

To be loved by our people an Italian must be able to inspire confidence in men, enforcing upon them absolute conviction of spontaneous intellectual superiority.

The Italian people are too rich in history and spiritual creations to adapt themselves to a government composed of intellectually mediocre persons.

But there is another thing the Italian people exact; a clear distinction between what is sacred and what is profane. They hate any profiteering. They adore Garibaldi because he always fought with complete disinterestedness. This explains why the ruling and bureaucratic class in Italy is of an absolutely exemplary integrity.

Today a sufficiently pronounced evolution in the moral demands of the Italian people is noticeable. Not only intelligence but above all tenacious execution and continuity of effort is admired. The time of improvising, even if more or less brilliantly, is passed.

Contrast in Germany.

The German people, on the contrary, are impressed by intellectual profundity and by efficient and careful organization of culture rather than by flashes of genius.

It suffices to recall the speech of Chancellor Hitler which lasted four hours and in which the "Fuhrer" illustrated all the precedents and aspects of the modern history of Germany. An Assembly of another nation might have felt a degree of dismay, but the German people are gifted with wonderful powers of assimilation and with those of great and patient diligence. They were defined as laboratory people.

The peculiar traits of the German mind are to be seen also in German industry and in the products which the Germans prefer themselves like scientific instruments and other products which all require the patient, intense application necessary to attain that degree of mathematical precision which guarantees their success on the markets.

Character Is English Ideal.

The English seek principally qualities of character. Character is the typical substratum of the British collective mind, the essential factor in relations between the various parts of the empire, the underlying principle of the struggle of English trade in world markets, a fact through which the trade mark "British-Made" has gained the confidence of peoples in the four corners of the globe.

This impressive requisite: seriousness, tenacity, firmness of character permeates profoundly the whole of British life and makes it an essential factor for achievements in the political field.

While he does not despise the peculiar qualities of other national minds, an Englishman makes character a cardinal principle of all national activity. As George Bernard Shaw says, the English people purposely hide their real and remarkable intelligence in the manner of certain animals, such as the chameleon, which takes on the appearance and color of leaves or the ground as a measure of instinctive protection, both offensive and defensive.

American Standards.

As to the Americans, they are given to exalt courage, cordiality and optimism. They know how to raise up a man whose strength is equal to his enthusiasm. This has shown itself as one of the most striking characteristics of Modern America, and was particularly manifest in the national evolution from the efforts of pioneers to the present industrially organized state of the country. The sentiment of optimism which pepped up the hearts of the pioneers and their descendants has really become a national tradition.

It is not for nothing that American motion pictures make a constant law of the happy ending. This happy ending, which is loved and approved by the big public of our times belongs to the tradition of optimism born at the time of the pioneers.

It is remarkable how this spirit of the pioneers has penetrated and is maintained in succeeding generations. We can see the American sense of initiative in the way big industries have developed, in the evolution of the arts and in the courageous experimenting with new processes and systems.

Even today the spirit of the pioneer lends vitality to the cinema and automobile industry, to aviation and to the building trade, which are typically represented by skyscrapers and the powerful mechanical means of modern building technic.

The new Rooseveltian will now manifested after four years of terrible depression is a direct derivation of the spirit of the pioneers.

What Roosevelt Has Done.

I said recently to the Italian Senate that it was early yet to utter

Devaluation of Currency Here and Abroad

Points of Difference Stated by Brookings Institution

Deliberate Policy With Us; Forced Upon Others

France Fixed Value of Franc, After Period of Inflation and High Prices, at Point Above Lowest Trading Figure Reached in Exchange.

United States Placed Value of Dollar at Level Below Any Figure Previously Quoted in Foreign Exchange in Effort to Boost Prices of Commodities.

England Left Gold Standard, Considering Action Necessary After Period of Heavy Withdrawals of Metal From London Market.

United States Abandoned Gold When Federal Reserve Holdings Were Largest in History of the System With One Exception.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.

ONE frequently hears, in discussions of the President's monetary policies, (1) that there is a close parallel between England's departure from the gold standard in September, 1931, and our departure from it in the spring of 1933, and (2) that there is a close parallel between the post-war devaluation of European currencies and the American devaluation of the dollar.

Neither of these statements is correct. In each case there is a fundamental difference between our action and the action with which it is compared.

England was forced off the gold standard; the United States went off voluntarily, in pursuance of a considered policy.

What happened in England is sufficiently explained in the Federal Reserve bulletin, the official publication of the Federal Reserve Board, for October, 1931:

"Suspension of the gold standard was decided upon by the British Government in consultation with the Bank of England in consequence of continued large withdrawals of funds from the London market. These withdrawals were almost continuous from the middle of July to September 19, and amounted for the period to $1,000,000,000, of which about $160,000,000 represented a loss of gold during the latter part of July, which reduced the gold reserves of the Bank of England from $810,000,000 to $650,000,000 and the rest the loss of foreign exchange.

"In August and September the use of these credits (credits extended by the Federal Reserve Banks of the United States, the Bank of France and private lenders in both countries) had protected the Bank of England from further loss of gold, and it was only after these amounts were substantially exhausted that England decided to suspend the operation of the gold standard."

Other Countries Took Action Reluctantly.

Whether or not one believes it was desirable for the United States to leave the gold standard, it can hardly be doubted that the abandonment in April was not compelled by events. Among those testifying to this effect is Dr. E. W. Kemmerer of Princeton, who says that with the sole exception of the United States, all the countries that went off gold during the world depression did so reluctantly and under heavy pressure; Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution at Washington, who says that the Administration acted with the purpose of raising prices, and the Foreign Policy Association which points out that on April 19, the date of our definitive abandonment of gold, the gold holdings of the Federal Reserve System, with the exception of a brief period just before England was driven off gold, were the largest in the system's history.

The Foreign Policy Association is a research and educational agency supported by the contributions of about 12,000 members. Dr. Raymond Leslie Buell, who has written extensively on international problems, is the president. The association's statement on the present monetary policies of the Roosevelt Administration was published in the Post-Dispatch on Feb. 5.

The point made by the association—namely, the unusually large gold holdings of the Reserve System when the United States went off gold—has been repeatedly stressed by Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, who has denounced our suspension of the standard as both undesirable and unnecessary.

The record has been clearly set out by the Brookings Institution in its recent book on "current monetary issues," prepared by Dr. Leo Pasvolsky of the Brookings staff.

It is there shown that although between Feb. 1 and March 4, 1933, the country's total stock of gold decreased by $305,000,000, this amount was much smaller than the loss on two previous recent occasions. During May and June, 1932, the gold stock had decreased by $448,000,000 and during September and October, 1931, by $703,000,000. The gold stock on March 4, it is pointed out, was well above the level for the midsummer of 1932 and was only slightly smaller than the average for 1928-29.

DR. HAROLD G. MOULTON,
President of the Brookings Institution, Washington, D. C.

"Between March 4 and April 19," the Brookings survey continues, "the total gold stock changed from $4,333,000,000 to $4,313,000,000. Thus the maintenance of the dollar exchange rate close to its gold parity over a period of more than five weeks, while requiring a certain amount of current gold movements into and out of the country, entailed a net loss of gold amounting to only $20,000,000.

"In the light of this improvement in the country's general monetary position and of the fact that the Treasury issued certificates of five and nine months' duration on March 16, payable as usual 'in United States gold coin of the present standard of value,' it was naturally assumed by the public in general that the suspension of the gold standard was to be merely an emergency measure, and that no change in the gold content of the dollar was in contemplation. Indeed, there is no evidence to show that the Government at this juncture was seriously considering a reduction in the weight of the dollar."

As to the vital difference between devaluation of European currencies and President Roosevelt's devaluation of the dollar on Jan. 31, the record is equally clear.

Others Acted After Period of Inflation.

In all cases, the post-war devaluations of the franc, the lira and other European monetary units, following upon England's return to gold in 1925, came after long periods of inflation. They were designed not to create a new price level but to adjust the currencies to existing price levels.

In the United States, devaluation of the dollar to 59.06 per cent of the previous gold content was undertaken in an effort to control the price level—to raise commodity prices in the United States to about the level of 1926. In a nutshell, this is the difference—and a very significant one—between what happened in Europe and what is happening in the United States.

The difference may be stated in this way: A high price level resulting from monetary inflation was the cause of devaluation in Europe, whereas the United States Government, in a time of comparatively low prices, is seeking to create a high price level as the effect of devaluation.

France—to take the best known example of revaluation abroad—valued the franc in 1928 at a point in conformity with the domestic price level and with the value of the franc in foreign exchange. Italy revalued at a little higher level. The French action merely legalized a situation which had existed in foreign exchange for a year and a half. Explaining what had been done, the annual report of the Bank of France for 1928 stated:

> "A most important event in the financial history of France occurred during the past year—the creation of a new franc. Facing a sacrifice which unfortunately was inevitable, the law in the public interest legalized the depreciation which had taken place in the national currency. On the other hand, it assured convertibility of notes into gold. After 14 years of inconvertibility, the franc has thus again become sound money, as solidly established as the most stable currencies of the world."

The United States fixed the value of the dollar at a point below its value in foreign exchange and seeks to hold it at the low level through use of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund created from the "profits" of dollar devaluation. For this effort to raise commodity prices by means of currency devaluation and foreign exchange operations there is no precedent anywhere.

Dr. Moulton Points Out the Difference.

In reply to questions by the correspondent, Dr. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, has made a statement contrasting the American devaluation policy and that pursued by France in 1928. The Brookings Institution, established in Washington by the late Robert S. Brookings of St. Louis, has achieved distinction in this country and abroad for its research work in the social sciences. It is a fact finding agency without political affiliations. Dr. Moulton is a recognized authority on the monetary systems of this and other countries.

Dr. Moulton in his statement not only draws a sharp distinction between the American and French devaluation policies, but shows that there is an important difference between our stabilization fund and the British equalization fund.

"The situation in France at the time that the franc was devalued," said Dr. Moulton, "was essentially different from that in this country when the dollar was devalued. Moreover, the objective of the French Government in establishing a lower value for its currency was different from that of the American Government.

"To understand the French situation, it is necessary to have in mind a background of facts beginning in the war period. France, in common with other European belligerents, had to abandon the export of gold during the war. The exchange rate was, however, maintained around 18 cents (par being 19.3) by means of so-called 'pegging' operations, ..which involved the use of foreign credits. With the cessation of this pegging in 1919, the franc declined precipitately to around six or eight cents, where it remained until 1922.

"Between 1922 and 1926, the franc gradually declined to a little more than three cents. This decline in the French exchange rate was the direct result of fiscal inflation accompanying the reconstruction of the devastated areas. The French Treasury sold short-term Treasury notes to the Bank of France and received in exchange bank notes which were legal tender and payable upon demand. These bank notes were turned over to individuals and organizations engaged in reconstruction. The progressive deterioration of the French budget gradually undermined confidence in the stability of the franc and resulted in 1926 in a heavy flight of capital and a rapid decline in the exchange.

High Commodity Prices in France.

"During all this period commodity prices were steadily rising in France. The general prosperity of the period was greatly intensi-

Despite Flood of Jingo Talk Chances of War in Europe In Near Future Seem Negligible

Hitler's Swashbuckling Taken Largely as Bluff Since There Are 10,200,000 in Armies Forming "Ring of Steel" Around Germany.

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON,

GENEVA, Switzerland, Feb. 10.

ALTHOUGH storm clouds darken the European political horizon, and jingoism is rampant from the Baltic to the Black Sea, the chances of a major war on the continent in the near future are practically negligible, for the simple reason that it takes two to make a fight. The only two nations which conceivably could stage a real knock-down, drag-out war in Europe today are France and Great Britain. Both are on the same side. There is less cause for war between them than there is between either and the United States.

Apart from its element of sensationalism and journalistic appeal, the war talk that is prevalent these days is based largely on two factors—propaganda and pious hopes of armament firms and domestic and international politico-military considerations.

Hitler's Swashbuckling.

For Hitler's Germany, swashbuckling across the international stage exactly as did Mussolini's Italy 10 years ago, war, or even a serious threat of war, would be political and national suicide. The group directing the Nazi government has not the slightest intention of provoking war, either deliberately or accidentally, with France or Poland. Hitler, in his efforts to stir up the German populace, can be counted upon to keep his anti-Versailles agitation well within bounds. He will not give the French militarists the slightest real justification for embarking on a "preventive" war. Hitler knows, as well as the French Government, that an aggressive war, or even a "preventive" war carried outside of France's frontiers, will meet with serious internal opposition. No civilian population in Europe today is more impregnated with pacifism than the French. Yet no people in the entire world would rise so quickly and almost to a man to defend their liberties and their homes as will the French workers and peasants if their country is invaded.

To observers of the European political poker game, Hitler's recent plays are almost pathetically obvious. With a few digressions he is imitating faithfully and apparently successfully his Italian mentor. The German masses are proving even more pliable than the post-war Italian public. Once Hitler and his cohorts have solidly established themselves however, they can be counted on to become conservative, as have the Fascists and Bolshevists.

The communistic element in Germany against which Hitler directed his storm troops has not been vanquished. There are at least 5,000,000 of them, quiescent and sinister. Brown shirts may cover their proletarian skins but Marxian ideas are imbedded far deeper in their souls and are not so easily erased.

The Reichstag trial through which the Nazis had hoped to glorify themselves has proved a fiasco. It was one of those political stupidities that the Nazis will strive desperately to forget—a sort of Communistic Dreyfus affair. Ernest Torgler, Communist deputy, if crucified, can very easily become Adolf Hitler's Matteotti. Mussolini has never been able to live down the stigma of the Italian Socialist leader's assassination. The outlawing of his name in Italy has served only to perpetuate his memory in other parts of the civilized world. German Communists of today who may become the German Liberals of tomorrow, will not forget, either.

Mussolini Sitting Tight.

A Franco-German war is the only possible major conflict in Europe at this moment—or even within the next decade. A Franco-Italian war can be checked off the list of probabilities. There is nothing Mussolini wants less than to cross swords with France. Italy might wish to fight the Jugo-Slavs in the Adriatic but that would mean fighting France, too. Now that Mussolini has sufficiently consolidated his regime at home he will be found always on the side of conciliation and moderation so far as Rome is concerned. In a war with France—or Jugo-Slavia and France—the Fascists have everything to lose and little to gain. Yet at the same time, when it is safe to do so, the Italians can be expected to intrigue against France at every opportunity. A Franco-German war would please them. So would any struggle involving the Little Entente, Russia or a Balkan flare-up. Italy's role would be profitable neutrality and a determination to be in at the division of spoils as soon as it appeared clearly who would be victorious. Mussolini's political philosophy is still Machiavellian.

Russia's Peace Policy.

Likewise a Russo-European conflict is hardly within the realms of possibilities. Moscow has nonaggression treaties with all her Western neighbors—Finland, Estonia, Lithuania, Latvia, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Rumania, and also with Turkey and Afghanistan. That permits her to pay attention to the Far East—much to Japan's annoyance. The Soviets are pleased to have France look after Germany at this time.

But, should a Franco-German war be precipitated within the next decade (and it could occur only as a result of some monumental stupidity on the part of the Germans or in case the French Government fell completely into the hands of its militarists) only one outcome is possible. That would be the absolute and complete subjugation of Germany and Hitler. The Nazi chief is not inviting such a fate. In such a struggle Hitlerite Germany of today or even of tomorrow would be practically helpless. A mere glance at hard, cold, military facts is sufficient evidence of this.

War Forces Compared.

Germany, disarmed by the Versailles treaty, is supposed to have an army of 100,000 men. She says, in fact, she has 94,900 soldiers enlisted for 12 years and 3798 officers. Official reports (her own) say she has about 2000 machine guns, 288 light cannon and some commercial airplanes. Legally she is not entitled to have any tanks, military planes, heavy artillery, battleships or submarines. Her entire naval complement is limited to about 200,000 tons, with 10,000-ton "pocket" cruisers as the strongest single unit.

Rumors are prevalent (and there is evidence of it) that she has been arming secretly for the past six or seven years. That she has built up any considerable armament is doubtful. The Nazi political army (in which, according to reports, it takes about 30 armed Brown shirts to beat one unarmed Jew or Communist) has no great military value except as cannon fodder. But for argument's sake one might multiply by four what she is known to have in order to approximate what she is alleged to have—namely, 400,000 men, 8000 machine guns, 1200 field guns and a few hundred airplanes capable of being converted into bombers. Germany also undoubtedly has built up a considerable reserve of raw material (copper, nickel, rubber, etc.) for the manufacture of munitions.

With this potential military strength in her favor Germany has against her the combined

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Drew Pearson on Goldfish.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE Ozark Fisheries' correction of the goldfish item appearing in Washington Merry-Go-Round convinces me of what I should have realized long ago—that I know absolutely nothing about goldfish. My statement that only six goldfish employers turned up at the NRA code hearing instead of the actual 30 or 40 is not the first mistake I have made regarding goldfish. My troubles began two summers ago when I installed a fountain in my garden and ensconced therein a really regal tribe of finned friends. There were 10 of them and I named them after the Hoover Cabinet.

But I figured without the cats of the neighborhood. True, I did not weep too much when one of them fished out Pat Hurley, for I never cared much for the Secretary of War. I was somewhat more perturbed when my feline friends ate President Hoover himself, for he was a fat and well-fed creature. But when they got Henry L. Stimson, I borrowed a shotgun and used to send all the children of the neighborhood running to their mothers by taking pot shots at their pet pussies. Finally the Hoover Cabinet disappeared. This, I figured, was in keeping with the cycle of politics, so this spring I restocked with a Roosevelt Cabinet even more gorgeous than its predecessor. Things went better last summer. The depression was not so bad and the cats not so hungry. The Cabinet remained intact until winter. But when I took them inside, my troubles began.

Actually they began when a friend in New York went out to the airport and in a drunken moment put a small kitten aboard an airplane and consigned it to me. Being kind-hearted, I kept the kitten and called him "Hitler." He was much more ruinous than his godfather.

One morning as I came down to breakfast, my small daughter met me with the news: "Hitler has eaten President Roosevelt."

My biggest goldfish was gone.

My sincere apologies to Lawrence Bailliere and the Ozark Fisheries for being ignorant about goldfish, and my solemn pledge that I have nothing but the highest regard for the product of his labor.

A Congregationalist on War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WITH reference to the picketing of the First Congregational Church of St. Louis by the Young People's Socialist League, this writer regrets exceedingly that the voice of the pulpit was not so definitely against war that this silent demonstration was possible. War is as un-Christian as it is suicidal. No statement in the Scriptures is more definite, and none is better borne out by history, than "he that taketh up the sword shall perish by the sword."

The statement of a thoughtful New York clergyman ("Without reservation or equivocation, I herewith affirm that this pulpit, while I stand on it, will never give its support to war, to any war whatsoever, to war with any other people or nation") voices the sentiment of this writer and a growing number of men and women in all nations.

Nor can war ever be prevented by preparation for war. History for 3000 years has demonstrated the futility of this method of preventing war. Instead, it brings on war. Edwin Markham has well expressed this writer's viewpoint:

"Come, let us try the Master's way;
Ages we have tried the way of swords,
And the world is weary of hostile hordes;
Love, and not hate, must come to birth,
Christ, and not Cain, must rule the earth."

Hell, Huey!

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AS to your editorial concerning Huey P. Long and our recent election in New Orleans, I shall begin by saying that either you are dumb, or you think readers dumb. It is not a matter of conjecture with the voters of this city or State as to our able Senator's standing, not only in this State, but throughout the United States.

Now, Mr. Editor, a few facts for you to sum up if you are half-way good at mathematics. John Klorer received some 32,000 votes in the recent election and Francis Williams, the oil magnate candidate, received 28,000, backed by two newspapers, Hilda Phelps Hammond and others of her caliber. Four years ago, Francis Williams ran for Mayor and received around 38,000 votes. When Huey P. Long ran for Governor five years ago, he received 24,000 votes in this city, and was elected by the largest majority ever received by any candidate in this State. Now, who is growing in popularity and who is on the decline?

It is useless for me to tell you of our most able United States Senator's wonderful achievements since he became Governor of this State, as that is a national record.

So please, Mr. Editor, do not impair your health worrying about the people's friend, Senator Huey P. Long, for he has certainly proved his capability of taking care of himself and thousands of others of your caliber.

New Orleans, La. R. E. WALDEN.

Politics and the CWA

Government for the benefit of the people is such a novelty in the United States that it is having many laughable consequences.

Among them is the political situation as it affects the CWA. The CWA is the best thing the New Deal has done. After the expansive operations of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which ladled out millions of public money for the benefit of the great financial institutions, the banks, the railroads, etc., the CWA presents the reassuring spectacle of Federal aid going directly to the people.

Unlike the RFC millions, the CWA money is not lodging in the coffers of Wall Street, or the big boxes of such institutions as Mr. Dawes' bank in Chicago, or even the vaults of local banks. The House of Morgan, which got most of the RFC loan to the Missouri Pacific, is not getting it. The people get it. They spend it with the grocer. They pay their rent with it. They buy clothes with it. In a word, it stimulates the purchasing power of the people, which in turn stimulates business, something the RFC had failed to do.

The CWA also did something else. It disarmed all the critics of the New Deal and left them fanning the air. Witness the phantom sparring done by Mr. Mills at Topeka. One would just as well go from Kansas to the sea coast to bring back a bottle of fog as to go out from Wall Street to Kansas and try to bring back comfort for that theory of government which would make the many the oysters of the few. This philosophy of greed is a dead cock in the pit of our political science. Its spurs are dulled, and its brave and hopeful chanticleer no longer salutes the rosy morn. Everybody knows it. Most people are glad of it. The few that rue it cannot believe the New Deal will last. They do not know history. Most of all, they do not know the American people.

The Republican National Committee is the latest Richmond upon that gory field whence all the voters have fled. It has delivered a broadside at the CWA. Gall was never more sublime than it was at the moment when this attack was launched. Over in the Senate, men in both parties were passing another appropriation of $950,000,000 for the CWA. Over in another room, contempt citations were being issued for some of the men who have refused to testify in the air mail inquiry, which typifies the kind of government we used to have. Over in the White House, the President was preparing a message to Congress in the matter of the stock exchanges, which are to get what Paddy gave the drum. He was also abrogating all the air mail contracts upon the score of widespread fraud and collusion. Over in Boston, a lady was gleefully exhibiting a letter from Mr. Roosevelt, in which he says that of course he is for the child labor amendment, as if anybody could suppose he is not. In 10,000 cities and towns in the United States, the hum of industry was resuming. Stacks were smoking again, such as the great Commonwealth steel plant on our own East Side, which is putting 1800 men to work April 1, and the Scullin Steel Co. Payrolls were being revived. Bread and butter was emerging from hiding. The heart of the nation was beating again.

When the appropriation which had just passed the Senate was brought up in the House, only one man voted against it. The reason there is no opposition to such a measure in Congress is that the men down there are responsible to their constituents. There has been grievous complaint that these men are no longer free; that they are the mere echoes of their states and districts. Great Jehoshaphat! Isn't this what democracy presumed they would be? Did it ever presume that they would be the tools of privilege and the stalking horses of an economic aristocracy? Yet that was exactly what they did become, and the people revolted. They are now pulling the strings themselves. They are sick and tired of having privilege pull the strings. They are disgusted with a lopsided economy which enriches the few at the expense of the many. They want the fixers, the market riggers, the crooked dice throwers, the money changers, and all those enemies of the people, tied up. The New Deal is tying them up.

The Republican National Committee says the CWA must be stopped at once. It insists that the whole thing is rotten with corruption, and it charges the administration with setting up the most venal political machine the Republic has ever known. It took crust to make that charge. The Government is quite aware of impurities in this otherwise placid pool. It is its own critic. Meanwhile, the most venal political machine this or any other republic has ever known was that set up by the people who looted the country and brought it to ruin.

Verily, saith the Saturday Evening Post, town crier for the City of Privilege, the Republican party as constituted is morally bankrupt. It was the traders whom it protected that ushered in the depression. Plato, 2300 years ago, said they would do so. They will do so whenever they rule. They can't get the ball now, and they wander around on the field tearfully haranguing the audience, berating the referee and the umpire. If they got the ball back, they would not be able to hold it. It has become too slippery with the sweat of 4,000,000 dispirited people taken out of the soup lines by the CWA and enabled to earn their bread.

The committee says all these people can be absorbed by industry if the Government quits supporting them with handouts. We gave industry that chance. We waited four years for it to put the people to work. We waited until there were 15,000,000 unemployed in the soup lines.

Senator Couzens warned our employers of labor three years ago that if they did not put the people to work the Government would do it for them.

The Government did do it for them, but not that government for which the Republican National Committee speaks. It was a couple of other fellows.

Training For Peace

The case against compulsory military training in colleges and universities has been good enough all along, but it is greatly improved by the stand taken by 300 students at the University of Illinois. Meeting to protest against the ousting of seven Ohio State University students, who refused to take compulsory military training, members of the Illinois group petitioned the authorities of their university for a course in peace training which would deal with the causes of war and devices for its prevention. They reasoned as has the Daily Illini, student paper at Illinois, that in view of what the recent war cost the world, peace training is not only desirable but vital.

This is criticism of the most constructive sort and represents undergraduate thinking at a high level. The nations of the world have had military training from ancient times, and with it they have set themselves back periodically with one war after another. Military training at the colleges, with its dress uniforms, parades and social functions, emphasizes the brass-button side of militarism. What college students of this generation need is full light on the actualities of war—the real reasons wars are fought, the hidden motives, the economic and diplomatic intrigues, the propaganda campaigns, the activities of munitions makers, the drain on civilization.

The petition which the Illinois students have sent Dr. Arthur Hills Daniels, their president, raises a point that is not only fair, but one which deserves serious consideration and a serious reply. An affirmative answer will open the way for a new and thoroughly splendid educational opportunity.

The Sugar Compromise

The President's plan for sugar affords an eminently practicable compromise between the conflicting interests which are present in the industry. By limiting domestic output, it will check uneconomic over-production at home. By providing for allotment payments, it will supply domestic beet and cane growers with increased purchasing power. By fixing an enlarged quota for importations from Cuba, it will improve economic conditions in that island and open the Cuban market to increasing American exports. By matching tariff reductions with processing taxes, it will protect the consumer against exorbitant prices.

Sugar differs essentially in nature from the other basic commodities which were earlier included under the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Wheat and cotton and pork products were goods which we produced in excess of our domestic demand and sold on world markets. The domestic allotment scheme is essentially a device which provides for the payment of a bounty to the producers of export crops. Sugar is not an export crop.

We consume far more than we produce at home. The balance we import, mainly from Cuba. Unlike wheat, cotton, tobacco and lard, sugar is a crop which can be affected by the imposition of restrictive tariffs. Domestic beet and cane producers have consequently clamored for and obtained tariffs.

The effect of the sugar tariff has been, as the President says, to impose an annual tax of $200,000,000 on consumers for the benefit of the producers of a crop whose gross value is only $60,000,000. At the same time, the increased price has provoked such an over-expansion of domestic beet and cane production that growers here have realized little advantage from the tariff subsidy. It is therefore the President's purpose, as he says, to prevent "further expansion of this necessarily expensive industry."

Adoption of his plan will operate to check further uneconomic diversion of sugar production from low-cost to high-cost areas. It will undo some of the damage which the tariff has already done.

Processing taxes and allotment payments are infinitely to be preferred to tariffs as a means of subsidizing domestic sugar producers. The tariff is a hidden subsidy which is likely to endure because it is hidden. Allotment payments are frank and open subsidies which may be reduced or removed whenever it appears that they are no longer needed. Tariffs cost the consumer far more than they pay to the producer. Allotment payments give the producer only what is collected in taxes from the consumer.

Tariffs stimulated over-production. Allotment payments are contingent upon the producer's agreement to control production. One of the happiest features of the President's plan is the implication that the sugar tariff, through the mechanism which he proposes, may be gradually lowered. It is this tariff, more than any one thing, which has spelled economic ruin and political chaos for Cuba.

The result has been, in the President's words, that "Cuban purchases of our goods have dwindled steadily as her shipments of sugar to this country have declined." The measure which he has proposed should contribute materially to the economic rehabilitation and political pacification of the island Republic, with a consequent improvement in Cuban markets for American goods. Unlike the processing taxes on wheat, cotton, corn and tobacco, the tax on sugar should cost the consumer nothing. What he loses here he will gain in the reduction of the sugar duty. Thoroughgoing free-traders may object that no subsidies should be paid to producers of a crop in which we are at such a relative disadvantage as in the case of sugar, but we can scarcely now remove the protection which we have given beet and cane growers without offering them some compensation.

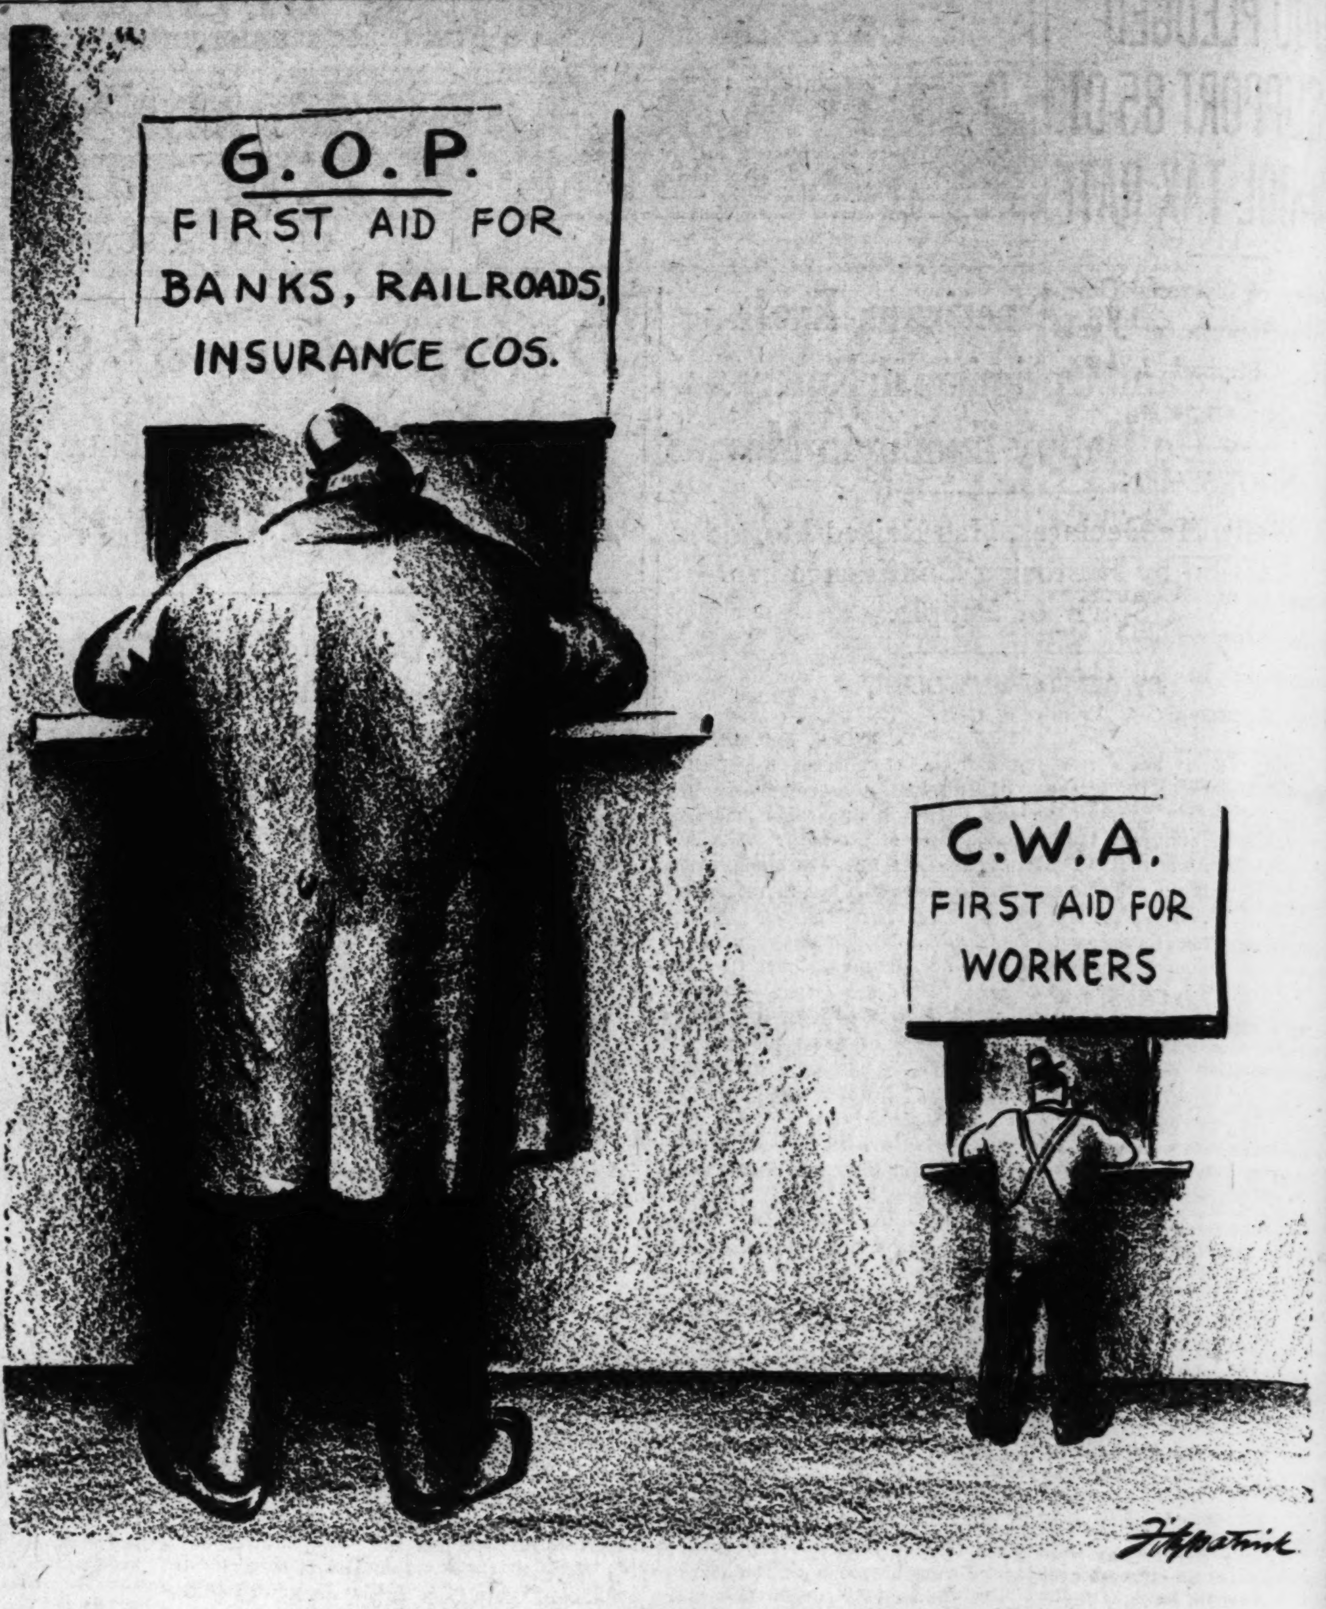
In substituting the processing tax for the tariff, we are replacing an inferior with a superior form of subsidy. The change is one which will promote the interests of all the groups affected by the industry. Even the free-trader must admit that the social gain is a substantial one.

Making Social Legislation Effective

The test of the effectiveness of social legislation is its enforcement. This is a fact which the states must remember if much of the recently-enacted state legislation supporting the Roosevelt program is to be more than so many laws. Illinois, for example, has had a law regulating minimum wages for working women and minors for almost a year, yet this statute has been practically inoperative because the Legislature failed to appropriate for its enforcement.

State Director of Labor Durkin plans to correct this situation through a bill to be introduced in the special session. At the present time, there is only one employe working under the law. Obviously, in a state so large and containing as many factories and businesses as Illinois, one person could do only a small part of the inspecting which is necessary. An adequate staff will cost money, but that is the price of social advancement in a world of business which contains many employers who have not yet learned that workers are human beings and not machines.

Gov. Horner's supervisor of the minimum wage law is Miss Kate F. O'Connor of Rockford. She will find her example in the historic work 40 years ago of the late Florence Kelley, whose courageous inspecting and forthright reports under Gov. Altgeld blazed the trail of factory regulation.



THE OLD DEAL AND THE NEW DEAL.

"Of Making Many Books"

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

THIS is one of the most remarkable stories the present writer has read for a long time; and while, on the whole, it may not have the qualifications of a great novel, for reasons that should be apparent to the reader with a sense of values not dominated by our instant in history, it has many moments of greatness in which flashes of illumination fall upon the mystery of living, like lightning upon a vast landscape through which an unsuspecting traveler walks benighted.

There are readers who will feel they know, and many others who will be strongly persuaded to believe, that these are authentic moments of expanded awareness, revealing indistinctly something of the larger relations, our ignorance of which might well account for all troubling. There are many other readers, no doubt, who will be simply amused by the ingenuity and "queerness" of a yarn that, so far as one reader knows, may be unique.

The most obviously striking thing about the tale is the curious mingling of conventional "realism" with essential mysticism; curious, perhaps, for no other reason than that we habitually limit the "real" to what the senses may rumor to us and what we can agree generally to make out of the rumors. It may be, and sometimes it seems almost certain, that the author is more nearly the realist at those moments when the accepted scale of reality is lengthened and a sudden light is thrown upon the sordid facts, and larger meanings emerge from a momentary sense of larger relationships.

The story is that of one Sam Baggott, a middle-aged New Yorker, who is nobody in particular, but just one of the many whom dull necessity herds back and forth each day from sleep to work, from work to sleep. This has been going on for years. Nothing much ever happens to Sam Baggott, and the same is true of his rather dull, well-meaning wife. Ten years of married life, as it seems to Sam, have come to nothing more than the same old steak every evening, always slightly burned; an occasional bout at bridge with a neighboring couple; sleep, and the same old rush back to the same dull business. Lately, even business is alarmingly on the slump. Now if there had only been a child! But exciting things always seem to have a way of never happening to Sam Baggott.

But one morning something does happen. Sam learns that there is going to be a baby at last. He leaves home that morning in the usual way, hardly realizing at first what he has just learned. But as he proceeds, something very exciting indeed happens to him. It will be a son, of course—Sam Baggott's son! The wonder of the idea seizes upon Sam, and suddenly the whole world changes and there is a new heaven and a new earth. Some of the more irreverent readers may leap to the conclusion that Sam goes suddenly a bit dotty and becomes steadily more so as the tale unfolds; but others may suspect that a touch of cosmic consciousness may be involved; and perhaps the tale will best repay those who lean toward that assumption.

At any rate, all the pettiness of self is suddenly lost; a sense of rejoicing strength and love for everything that lives and is comes over plain Sam Baggott. Everything and everybody are somehow glorified. For the first time in his life, he feels "right" with the city's mood and pulses. The news dealer at the corner, the change-booth man in the subway, seen daily for years, but scarcely known as fellow human beings, become as brothers. The very passengers in the subway train are affected by the new spirit that radiates from Sam, and there is warm friendliness where formerly there was only the cold stare. To some, no doubt he seems a trifle "queer," but the worst they feel for him is an amused affection.

As for Sam, he feels at last that he is an integral part of the continuing mystery of life, of the very blood-stream of the universe, one might say; and certainly Sam is in prime condition for hyperbolic descriptions. The glory of it all grows upon him like a drunkenness, and by the time he reaches the delicatessen store that he runs, it is no wonder his matter-of-fact clerk leaps at first to the conclusion that the boss has gone crazy.

No delicatessen store can hold Sam today with that glorious feeling, somehow, of all the universe inside of him, and he sets forth on a wild adventure in living that, in the course of 24 hours, yields him something approximating a comprehensive knowledge of human life—the whole gamut of essential human experience. Often the tale may seem to have degenerated momentarily into mere vulgarity, but always from the muck of the sordid moment some swift, luminous meaning blooms like a miraculous flower.

There is enough deep insight and wisdom implied in this strange yarn, for all its general air of fantastic extravagance, to humanize the conventional, and therefore unexamined, cruelties out of any reader who will ponder as he reads.

THE LOG OF THE BETSY ANN. By Frederick Way Jr. (Robert M. McBride & Co., New York City.)

BELIEVE it or not, here is the glowing tale of a passionate love affair without a woman in it! Of necessity, it involves a romantic young man, who is himself the teller of the tale; but the lady in the case was not a creature of flesh and blood. Furthermore, she was well past her springtime and perhaps a bit of a frump, in the light of modern fashion, when the young man first saw her "lying at the wharf at Gallipolis, O." But for him, she had "all the allurement of a pre-Civil War bride appearing in these days of abbreviated skirts"; and love-at-first-sight was the delirious result. Her full name was the Betsy Ann; but, with the easy familiarity of one who has found a soul mate, "Betsy," said he, "Betsy, some day you will be mine!"

That was how it all began, in the year 1925. It was a case of marriage by purchase; and although, six years later, there was a legal separation on grounds of nonsupport (nor is this surprising in vie of the fact that it cost $1600 a day to run her), the years between are gloriously remembered and make a moving story.

There has not been anything before just like this book, in which Frederick Way tells of his passionate life-long interest in river steamboats, of his buying the Betsy Ann against his own best judgment, of his desperate attempts to make her pay, of two races that he staged on the Ohio in the good old classic manner of the Natchez and the Robert E. Lee, and of the inevitable failure of his romantic dream.

FROM THE FIRST TO THE SECOND FIVE-YEAR PLAN. A Symposium. (International Publishers, New York City.)

THIS symposium is composed of the reports made by the leaders of the Soviet Union at the Joint Plenum of the Central Committee and Central Commission of the Russian Government, held at Moscow during January of last year. The volume opens with Stalin's apparently comprehensive review of accomplishments under the first five-year plan, and of the tasks that have been assumed under the second five-year plan. There follow detailed reports by the chairman of the Council of Commissars, the Commissars of Heavy Industry, Agriculture, the Army and Navy, Finance and the chairman of the State Planning Commission.

Thus every phase of the great social experiment is discussed by those who should know most about it; and even after making generous allowances for optimism, most readers are likely to close the book with a strong feeling, agreeable or otherwise, that the great experiment has reached a point where it is no longer to be intelligently regarded as merely experimental. Our Government's recognition of the U. S. S. R. is, of course, highly significant in this regard, but there are still those writers who gloat over the alleged failure of the one great social effort in history to give the earth and the fruits thereof back to the children of the earth.

Something of the present symposium was given out a year ago, but nothing like the cumulative effect of all these detailed discussions was to be gained from newspaper reports.

Surely no other social body in history has ever performed a feat so tremendous as that which, at the least calculation, must now be credited to the Soviets. There is something at once hopeful and terrifying about this volume, considering the immense and rapidly developing power of the Soviets in the midst of a world that is resorting more and more to dictatorships in a desperate attempt to save the old social order.

ART IN AMERICA: FROM 1600 TO 186 By Harold Stark, Robert B. Harshe, Charles F. Kelley and others. (University of Chicago Press, Chicago.)

THIS attractive guidebook is an invaluable aid to persons who are listening to the Saturday radio broadcasts on the development of art in the United States. It is arranged by topics coinciding with those treated each week in the radio talks, and contains many illustrations, some of them colored, to which references are made. Painting, sculpture and architecture and the significant exponents of those arts are treated in concise articles which give the book a decided value as a reference work in the home library. Anyone who wants to be introduced to the fascinating story of how and why art developed in this country will find this handsomely-printed book more than equal to the task.

0,000 PLEDGED TO SUPPORT 85-CT. SCHOOL TAX RATE

EW INDORSEMENTS BEING RECEIVED

Chamber of Commerce Sends One — 233 Organizations in All Have Given Approval.

Pledges to vote for retention of the 85-cent school tax rate at the special election a week from Tuesday have been signed by more than 0,000 persons, it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Laura S. Edwards, executive secretary of the Citizens' School Tax Campaign Committee.

At the last school tax election, in 1930, the 85-cent rate was retained by a vote of 46,765 to 6313, with a registration of 348,951. The present registration is about 330,000, but it is likely the total vote may be larger in proportion to the registration than in the past.

The school tax rate is fixed every four years and unless the higher rate is approved by majority vote of the people the rate would revert to the constitutional limit of 60 cents on the $100 valuation. Since 1921 the 85-cent rate has been in effect.

Indorsements of 85-Cent Rate.

The Chamber of Commerce has indorsed the 85-cent rate. In a letter to Sidney Maestre, chairman of the campaign committee, William T. Nardin, board chairman of the chamber, said:

"As you know, the Chamber of Commerce has—particularly during the depression years—advocated economy in government. Our position has not changed, but we feel that voting the 85-cent tax rate does not represent an increase over that which we now have. On the other hand, we have really had a decrease in the amount the taxpayers are asked to pay because of the two reductions within the past two years of the assessed valuation of property. This reduction, as we understand it, really means that the school tax rate in St. Louis at the present time is 68.8 cents as against the 85-cent tax rate before the reductions in the assessed valuations were made.

"Our board has been gratified over the economies that have been instituted during the depression years by the Board of Education, and we have every reason to believe that this same policy will be continued."

Indorsement of the 85-cent rate has been voted so far by 233 civic, commercial, school, labor and other organizations. Mrs. Edwards said pledges of votes and reports of indorsements continued to arrive in every mail. Ten volunteers spend full time sorting pledge cards.

Fred W. Stockham Post of the American Legion, with 200 members, approved the 85-cent rate and pledged the members to vote for it and to urge their friends to do the same. Collector Koeln notified the committee his office force would support the tax proposal unanimously.

Other Indorsements.

Other recent indorsements have been received from Mallinckrodt Parent-Teacher Association, Blow School Patrons' Association, Meramec School Patrons' Association, Beaumont High School Mothers' Club, Grant School Mothers' Circle, Horace Mann Mothers' Circle, Mason School Parent-Teacher Association, St. Louis Council and Col. Theodore Roosevelt Council of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, Kenrick Council of Knights of Columbus, United States History Club, Downtown Republican Women's Club, University of Missouri Alumnae Association, Women's Auxiliary of St. Louis Dental Society.

"The little red school house," erected by the campaign committee on Memorial Plaza, at Twelfth boulevard and Market street, will be opened at 4 p. m. tomorrow, with a formal ceremony, speeches and music by the Beaumont High School Band.

Meetings tomorrow at which talks will be made in support of the 85-cent tax are: Community meeting, Patrick Henry School, 2:30 p. m.; Sherman School, open house, 3 p. m.; Clay School, open house, 8 p. m.; Daughters of America, 3830 Olive street, 8:30 p. m.; Public School Patrons' Alliance, Board of Education Building, evening; Northwestern Business Association, Lillian and Olcott avenues, 9 p. m.; Stewards' Club, Melbourne Hotel. The following radio talks for the tax will be made tomorrow: W. B. McKeeman, WIL, 2:05 p. m.; J. V. Hays, WEW, 4 p. m.; John S. Leahy, KMOX, 4:30 p. m.; Chancellor George R. Throop of Washington University, KSD, 6:15 p. m.; Rabbi Samuel Thurman, KWK, 6:45 p. m.

French-Belgian-Polish - Czecho-Slovakian military machines, to say nothing of the redoubtable Jugo-Slav army, the crack Red Army of Russia and a very real communistic element within her own borders.

If war were declared tomorrow, France and her three allies could immediately throw against each 10 kilometers (6¼ miles) of Germany's demilitarized and unfortified frontier the following forces:

On the Franco-German front: 69,000 trained men equipped with 25 heavy cannon, 23 light guns, 3 anti-aircraft guns, 318 light machine guns, 258 heavy machine guns, 41 tanks and 36 fighting, observation and bombing airplanes.

On the Belgo-German front, 38,431 men, armed with 38 light and 17 heavy field guns, 3 anti-aircraft guns, 187 light and 75 heavy machine guns, 14 tanks and 15 airplanes.

On the Polish-German front: 11,188 men, armed with 7 light and 2 heavy cannons, 32 light and 22 heavy machine guns, 1 tank and 5 airplanes.

On the Czech-German front: 8506 men with 5 light and 2 heavy field guns, 42 light and 8 heavy machine guns and 3 airplanes.

Against these forces the most Germany could muster (if her own figures can be believed) would be 243 men, armed with two light machine guns. In addition to these the Germans would have for every 100 kilometers (68½ miles) of front seven light cannon, 28 light and two heavy machine guns.

Contrast in Navies.

On the sea Germany's position would be even more hopeless. After the Versailles treaty was signed Germany scrapped 26 modern battleships, four battle cruisers, 83 torpedo boats, 19 light cruisers and 350 submarines. Helgoland, her North Sea naval outpost was completely demolished. Her navy today consists of a few pocket-battleships of 10,000 tons armed with 8-inch guns, five cruisers totaling 30,000 tons and a dozen destroyers of an aggregate displacement of 9600 tons, all built since 1922.

Assuming that the Italian fleet were to assist Germany in the event of war, the French still would have no reason to worry even with England remaining neutral. The French fleet today has more than 114 heavy guns (of 14-in. caliber or larger), 546 medium caliber guns (8-in. and above), 477 light guns (4 to 6-inch caliber) and 1519 torpedo tubes.

The combined German-Italian strength at sea would be only 80 heavies, 296 middle calibers, 908 light calibers and 834 torpedo tubes. In the six and four-inch gun category the Italians alone outstrip the French having 862 guns against France's 477. The French Admiralty, however, does not place much importance on the destroyer type of fighting vessel.

France, furthermore, has 32,000 tons of aircraft carriers. Italy and Germany have none.

As for personnel France has 64,000 sailors compared with 15,000 for Germany and 53,000 for Italy.

Since 1922 France has built one 26,500-ton battleship, one 22,146-ton aircraft carrier, 15 cruisers, averaging around 8000 tons each, 30 destroyers, 26 torpedo boats, 79 submarines and 98,000 tons of auxiliary warcraft.

French Military Power.

Roughly summarized France's land military machine today includes 650,000 officers and men (with 3,800,000 trained reserves), 16,000 light machine guns, 17,000 heavy machine guns, 800 mine throwers, 1500 pieces of light and 1000 pieces of heavy artillery, 1700 tanks and 1800 fighting airplanes.

The French air force is estimated at 2200 staff officers, 10,700 non-commissioned officers and 40,900 men. The total equipment (observation, bombing, scout and fighting planes) in commission is about 2800 machines. Germany at the end of the war was forced to destroy 15,000 airplanes and 27,000 airplane engines. Today she is permitted to have only commercial planes, a few of which are fit for military service, except as cumbersome bombers.

In 1913 and in 1931.

An interesting sidelight on the extent of France's preparedness is that, while in 1913 she had only 21 batteries of heavy artillery, in 1931 she had 244. Her artillery today includes 72 heavy and 54 light motorized batteries and 30 "Big Berthas." Where Germany's heaviest gun has a range of 12,300 meters (about 8 miles), France's big guns shoot more than 30 miles. French air bombers, likewise, can carry about eight tons of high explosive over a cruising area with a radius of about 600 miles.

The combatant man-power of France and her allies (with German frontiers) is estimated as follows (standing army and trained reserves):

France: 4,500,000 officers and men.

Belgium: 1,200,000 officers and men.

Poland: 3,200,000 officers and men.

Czecho-Slovakia: 1,300,000 men.

Total, 10,200,000 officers and men.

Italy could put into the field 3,500,000 officers and men according to reliable estimates. Her air force, upon which Mussolini has concentrated, was revealed some time ago as totaling 1500 planes. It probably exceeds that figure by several hundred. The Fascist militia numbers about 300,000 but in war time this body would be needed to preserve order behind the lines.

Russia the Unknown Factor.

Russia is the unknown factor on Germany's eastern horizon. As a result of Moscow's non-aggression treaty with Warsaw the Poles are free to concentrate on their western front and along the Danzig corridor. While not desiring actual participation in a European war the Russians would be sympathetic towards any country fighting Germany. The Russo-German pact of Genoa is a dead letter. It has been replaced by an "understanding", with France—a re-cementing of the friendship of pre-war days.

From military intelligence sources comes the most reliable information on the Soviet's war strength. At the end of 1932 the Russians were reported to have had 1,178,000 men ready for immediate military operations and another 1,500,000 in reserve. This number probably has been increased due to the tension in the Far East. The Red army calls in 800,000 recruits a year for a five-year period of training. Of this number 200,000 pass into the regular army annually while 600,000 become reservists. As conscripts enter the army at the age of 19, and are held liable for active service until they pass 40, Russia will eventually have a permanent fighting force of 16,800,000 officers and men.

Soviet Aviation Force.

The growth of aviation in Russia is another of Europe's enigmas. Two years ago the Red army had 2000 war planes (400 bombers, 400 hydroplanes, 400 fighters and 800 scouts.) The air program sets the goal at 5000 planes by 1935. Last year's building program called for construction and acquisition of 80 bombers, 120 speedy scout planes, 343 all-metal combat planes, 80 training machines, 242 combat hydroplanes and 86 scouting hydroplanes. Whether this was carried through is not definitely known, but the Soviets have enough machines to assign 300 to their Siberian force based at Vladivostok.

The figures quoted above, taken mostly from confidential military intelligence reports, official government statistics and information compiled by the League's Disarmament Section give a sketchy picture of the "ring of steel" that surrounds Germany. The French General Staff estimates that without outside assistance it can easily occupy Berlin within from three to six weeks, depending on how completely the Germans would be able to destroy railway and road communications and transport. In the air and on the sea Germany would be completely at the mercy of France. On land the Nazis perhaps could wage a guerilla warfare, irritating, but not a serious handicap for the invaders.

Disturbing Possibilities.

Among the factors which could conceivably bring about a Franco-German conflict, the chief is the desire of French and Polish general staffs to smash the Germans completely while they are still weak. Occupation of Berlin, enforcement of the disarmament clauses of the Versailles treaty literally and reoccupation of the Rhineland would set Germany back another 25 years. After that the future would take care of itself.

Hitler's bellicose attitude is nine-tenths bluff, the French realize. They believe that, like Mussolini when the French and Jugo-Slavs started "war games" on the Franco-Italian and Adriatic fronts a few years ago, Hitler will buckle under at the first show of force. All the French need to start marching is a good excuse. Unless they are absolutely crazy the Nazis will think twice before giving the French militarists an opening. The Poles feel the same way as do the French about it. War Minister Daladier, when Prime Minister, summed up France's position with the phrase: "We are deaf to no word of peace, nor are we blind to any act of hostility."

Now that Hitler has demonstrated to the world—through the plebiscite—that Germany is behind him, he is not likely to be blind to any consequences which may imperil his government.

CWA Artist Painting Mother Goose Mural

Long-nosed Jack Spratt and his fat wife, the Cat and the Fiddle, Humpty-Dumpty in a jockey cap, a figure of king's horses and men, and other Mother Goose characters, form a procession in a mural for the Benton School kindergarten.

The mural, which is in six large panels, four fet high and about six long, will extend around the room. It is being painted by Dooley Dionysius of Kirkwood, one of the artists engaged by Louis La Beaume, director of Public Works of Art, under the CWA program.

Dionysius, whose choice of work is painting subjects of fancy in minute detail, is doing what he likes "most to do" in painting the murals, although the size of the work requires a broader and bolder stroke than he uses in his miniatures.

Hills and fanciful trees form a background of subdued hues, where loom fairyland castles whose spires lift the eyes and pierce the blue sky. The procession parades past in brilliant colors, solemn-visaged like Jack Spratt, gay like the cat, comic like Humpty-Dumpty.

The mural is being done on pressed wood and will take two months to complete, after which it will be hung in the school. The Board of Education pays for the materials, the CWA for the work.

Dionysius said the mural ordinarily would have cost $500 or more, depending on the ability of the artist. Under the CWA scale, it will cost about $250.

"Although the CWA pay is not big," Dionysius said, "I like the idea of public works of art and hope that, like in Mexico where two great artists were discovered through public works, a genius or two may be found in the United States."

He is doing the murals in a barn at 300 South Sappington road Oakland, which has been converted into a studio by a group of artists. Two other St. Louis artists are painting murals for two other schools.

SAYS SHORTER WORK WEEK IS ESSENTIAL

Father Ryan, Here, Declares Industry Must Act or Congress Will.

Industry will accept a 32-hour week at the NRA conference to be held next month in Washington or will have a 30-hour week thrust on it by action of Congress, in the opinion of the Rev. John A. Ryan, economist of the Catholic University in Washington, and outspoken liberal leader of his faith.

Father Ryan discussed the New Deal after his arrival last night in St. Louis. He is here to address the Liberal Forum of the Young Men's Hebrew Association tonight at 8:30 o'clock. He will speak at the headquarters of that organization, Union boulevard and Enright avenue, on "The Church and Social Problems."

A shorter working week, Father Ryan said, is essential because of technological improvements, and even with the 32-hour week, he estimated, there would still be three or four million unemployed. The Senate, he recalled, had passed a bill for a 30-hour week a year ago, before adoption of the National Recovery Act, and he thought Congress was in a mood to act again in that direction, unless similar steps were taken voluntarily by industry through NRA codes.

Substantial Difficulties.

He conceded there would be substantial difficulties presented, particularly to small enterprises, in meeting payrolls under the shorter week, but held it essential to recovery. Financing of payrolls, he said, must be provided, either through the RFC, or through the ordinary banking facilities, which may be induced to lend, rather than be confronted with RFC competition in industrial financing.

Father Ryan found much to be thankful for in the New Deal, and said its greatest obstacle lay in the opportunities for dishonesty and graft afforded by lavish public expenditures. In that connection, he was encouraged by the dramatic and sweeping action taken by President Roosevelt in abrogating air mail contracts after investigation had developed irregularities.

An advocate of a large Federal appropriation for public works long before the present $3,300,000,000 program was adopted, he was disappointed in the slowness with which the money was being used to put men to work, but pleased that the CWA program had been developed to meet that deficiency.

CWA "Least Radical."

Some of his liberal friends, he said, were apprehensive that the CWA program might be discontinued by May 1, the date President Roosevelt has fixed for its termination. While he did not favor retaining the CWA in its present form indefinitely, Father Ryan said he had no doubt that the program would be extended beyond May 1.

"Then, if by fall or early winter we have not experienced a very marked degree of recovery, he said, "the country will be ready for more radical steps, and continuing the CWA will be about the least radical of all possible measures."

With proper planning, he said, something along the lines of the CWA might well become a permanent institution. He was impressed with the argument that the efficiency of machines had developed to a point where the production of goods never again would employ all available workers, unless the working week was reduced to a point below any now discussed, and said it might be possible to employ the surplus of labor in community services such as those in some degree afforded by the present CWA program.

Mussolini's Idea Of Americans

judgment on the work done by President Roosevelt. Individual measures taken are capable of being discussed and have also been subjects of discussion in America. One result, however, has been attained by President Roosevelt which is of incalculable importance; return of confidence in the spirit of the people. President Roosevelt's courage, buoyancy and optimism have driven from the minds of millions and millions of men the clouds of uncertainty and inaction. President Roosevelt has overcome the crisis on its most dangerous and delicate side, the moral side. President Roosevelt has raised the morale of the American people. He has governed; that is, he has imposed his will.

Plenary powers have not proved a useless arm in his hands. He has used them for the people.

A Spiritual Drive.

Final settlement is still far off, but there is no doubt that President Roosevelt has prepared it. Not so much with his material measures as through the enormous spiritual drive he has made in the entire republic. President Roosevelt's experiment can be added to the infinite number of others recorded by history to confirm this truth; that the decadence of people has its origins in causes of a prevalently moral character and that morale can have effective action even in economic fields.

Everything turns around man and men. Everything moves and is explained by the lofty or depressed, heroic or resigned spirit of man.

fied in France by the carrying through, by means of fiscal inflation, of one of the greatest reconstruction booms in history. The price level in France in 1922 was already 3.3 times the level of 1913. As a result of the inflation boom prices continued to rise and at the time of the stabilization of the franc in 1928 it was over four times the 1913 level.

"The franc was not stabilized at the lowest level reached. After the Poincare Union Government was established, confidence was restored and money flowed back to France, raising the exchange rate from a low point of 3.14 cents to around 3.90 cents. Stabilization was finally fixed at 3.91 cents because this was the natural level determined by the foreign exchange situation and because it was in close adjustment with the general level of domestic prices. Thus the French Government fixed a legal rate of exchange closely in accord with the actual rate as determined by economic conditions. This merely made a de facto situation de jure.

"The United States, on the other hand, has fixed the value of the dollar without reference to the existing price level. Moreover, the new value was set before we could know what the normal rate of the dollar, as determined by international trade and financial operations, would be. The decline of the dollar had been due in large part to a flight of capital from this country. When confidence is restored—for whatever reason—much of this capital will inevitably flow back. Such a return flow would normally bring a rise in the exchange rate; and not until after this abnormal movement of funds had ended could we know what the normal exchange value of the dollar would be.

"Whereas the French stabilization was delayed after the low point was reached for more than a year, giving ample time for a new equilibrium to be established, the value of the dollar has been fixed at a level actually below the lowest exchange quotations that have been reached.

"Instead of being established at a rate which is in adjustment with normal international exchange operations and with the domestic price level, the dollar has been stabilized at a low level in the hope of thereby raising prices of commodities to a much higher level.

"The exchange in this case is looked upon as an active instrumentality for the control of commodity prices. Indeed, our purpose in abandoning the gold standard in the first place was to raise prices.

"It is because the dollar has been revalued at a level below the exchange rate and before the inevitable backflow of capital has begun that the problem of stabilization presents difficulty. The task of the Treasury now is to prevent the dollar from rising by throwing into the balance a supply of dollars to offset the demand for dollars arising in the exchange market. France did not have this problem simply because the value of the franc was set in the light of established economic relationships.

British Situation Somewhat Different.

"The British case is somewhat different. Great Britain was forced off the gold standard by the fiscal and exchange crisis of the summer of 1931. As the pound declined, however, there was no corresponding rise in domestic prices. This was because of the world depression and the absence of any fiscal inflation in Great Britain. At the end of eighteen months, the price level in Great Britain was almost exactly the same as when the depression began.

"A large stabilization fund has, however, been established, but for an essentially different purpose from that which underlies our stabilization fund. The British fund has been used mainly to prevent rapid and wide oscillations in the value of the pound. It has not been used, and is apparently not intended to be used, to stabilize the pound at a level below the commercial rate established in the market."

This view of the British equalization fund coincides with that expressed by Sir Josiah Stamp, the eminent British economist, in a radio speech from London last Sunday. "The purpose of the account," he said, "is to help flatten out erratic, rapid variations in the foreign exchanges between sterling and all the others and so to make international trade more stable, but it is certainly not to hold the exchange at any fixed unnatural point."

An American financial writer in London reports that "the main difference between the British and the American funds as London sees it is that the first is dedicated to the policy of 'wait and see,' while the second is dedicated to the deliberate depreciation of the dollar with the idea of raising internal prices."

The American policy, as expressed in our voluntary departure from the gold standard, in the gold-purchase plan of last October, in our deliberate devaluation of the dollar to a point below its commercial level, is a radically different policy from any that has been employed by any other nation. This much, at least, the record makes clear. The record by which we can judge the effectiveness of the policy as a means of raising commodity prices is yet to be written.

On the one hand we have the opinion of Prof. George F. Warren, the President's adviser, that there is a precise relationship between the price of gold and the price of commodities in general. It is on this theory that the American policy is bottomed. On the other hand there is the opinion of many economists that the commodity price level is determined by a multiplicity of influences and cannot be moved upward in any predicable way by a depreciation of the currency. This is the view of the Brookings Institution.

"At best," said a member of the staff in a recent speech sponsored by the institution, "the influence of monetary manipulation upon prices is wholly unpredicable, both as to amount and as to the time that might be required. As a result, it serves to produce monetary uncertainty and thus detract from confidence rather than promote it.

"In general, the process of economic recovery is extremely complex. There is no royal road to it. Price-raising by monetary manipulation certainly does not represent such a road. It is not even a short cut."

$472,000 CWA PAYROLL IN CITY AND COUNTY

Week's Wages Given to 31,700 Persons — Total Reaches $4,442,000.

Wage payments to CWA employes in the city and county rose to $4,442,988 last week when a payroll of $472,937 was distributed among 31,700 men and women. The first CWA work began here about Dec. 1.

The payroll for 23,400 CWA workers in the city totaled $367,885 last week, and in the county, 8300 workers were paid $105,052. The total payroll for the city has been $3,442,982 and for the county $1,000,006.

Those employed in CWA work who ordinarily work on Monday will report for duty as usual tomorrow, which is Lincoln's birthday. For several weeks a 24-hour work week has been in force on CWA jobs. Previously 30 hours of work were provided each week.

PETROLEUM LABOR BOARD TO MAKE INQUIRY HERE

Two Members of Board Will Visit St. Louis This Week to Go Into Controversy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — The chairman and at least one other member of the Petroleum Labor Policy Board will go to St. Louis next week to get information needed in settling the controversy between service station employers and employes, it was learned today.

Dr. William M. Leiserson, chairman, and George W. Stocking, plan to make the trip. James Mullenbach, the third member of the board, may accompany them.

The trip is for the purpose of obtaining further information as to wage rates and other facts in deciding the controversy and checking the accuracy of statements made by representatives of the employers and employes in the hearing held before the policy board during the week of Jan. 15.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 11, 1934.

HOW THE CINEMAS Have Almost KILLED THE DRAMA

Movie Makers Pay Big Prices For New York Stage Plays, Giving the Theatrical Producers a Fine Profit Without Any Risk or Trouble Involved — Even the Failures Are in Demand at Fancy Sums For All Concerned.

THIS season will go down in the theatrical history of St. Louis as the worst on record. The American Theater hoped to have three more offerings before summer rolled around, but the prospective entertainments have now dropped to two as the temperamental Katharine Hepburn closed her play, "The Lake," in New York last night and called off the road tour entirely. Joe Cook is still scheduled to come in the musical, "Hold Your Horses," on Feb. 25, and Katharine Cornell will arrive on March 19, but that is all that is in sight for the legit show goers.

The movies can be blamed almost entirely now for the collapse of the drama outside of New York. The depression got a lot of people out of the habit of regular theater going at $3.50 per and then the motion picture producers began to buy up everything, successes and failures alike, on the New York stage. The failures never would have seen the road anyway and the cinema gold made it unnecessary for the New York managers to take any chances with the better pieces.

Why, they figured, should they go to any trouble booking a play through the Middle West when the movie men were willing to pay anywhere up to a hundred thousand dollars for the cinema rights? Any big price they got for the property was more than they could hope to make with it on the road, so they took their New York profits and the Hollywood cash and let it go at that.

THE matter of "Dinner at Eight," a sure fire success, was a case in point. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer paid $75,000 for the rights and then added a tidy sum when the stage people showed an inclination to send it on tour anyway. "Men in White," one of the biggest of this season's hits in New York, has been purchased for another $75,000 for the films and even the Alexander Woollcott-George Kaufmann flop, "Dark Tower," brought $35,000 when sold to the camera.

One thing this situation has brought about is the way in which well-known dramatists are returning to the stage fold. They can write for the theater now, get the personal glory—and the money—for a New York production and then be assured of a big cash sum for the cinema rights.

A couple of seasons ago the managers were lamenting the fact that most of the "big name" authors were devoting all their talents to Hollywood and they had only unknown and untried writers from whom to draw their manuscripts.

Among the well-known authors who are contributing to the stage this season are Sinclair Lewis, Maxwell Anderson, Dorothy Parker, Eugene O'Neill, Sophie Kerr, Clemence Dane, Philip Barry, Sidney Howard, Rachel Crothers, A. E. Thomas, Achmed Abdullah and John Van Druten.

AND with his current drama, "Men in White," mentioned as one of the chief contenders for the Pulitzer Prize, Sidney Kingsley already is writing away at his next play.

It will concern the struggle between religion and science, and this young author has just returned from Bermuda where he has been doing research in sociology and economics for material for the plot.

After the extraordinary success of his play about the romantic and ethical problems of a young physician, the American Bar Association, Kingsley revealed, asked him to write a play about the legal profession.

"I decided against that," he explained, "because it would be too much like an encore of "Men in White". I want to grow with my writings, making some different and definite contribution to the theater each time. Each play must be built around a different pattern."

As for his new play, he has no idea when it will be completed. He wrote "Men in White" in three months, and then spent three years rewriting it.

KINGSLEY was born in the tenement district of New York's East Side. With a mother and sister to support, he needed money, but he insists that he never writes with the definite motive of remuneration.

"I realize," he says, "that money is very necessary, but I've always written with the idea of turning out the best possible literature.

"In writing plays one should strive for compression without falsification, for intensification without being untrue."

The success of "Men in White" has assured Kingsley that he won't have to worry about his financial status. Not only is it playing to large grosses on Broadway, but the Norwegian and Swedish stage rights have been sold, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as said before paid a handsome sum for the movie rights.

Bauer the Soloist With the Symphony At Odeon Concerts

Pianist Will Play Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto Under the Direction of Scipione Guidi Next Friday and Saturday.

HAROLD BAUER is to play Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto as soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at its regular concerts at the Odeon Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week. Bauer will appear under the baton of Scipione Guidi, assistant conductor of the orchestra, who conducts these concerts in the absence of Vladimir Golschmann. Mr. Guidi, who as concert master and assistant conductor has contributed so much to the building up of the orchestra in the last three seasons, has chosen to round out a program by presenting Mozart's seldom-heard overture to "La Clemenza of Titi" to open, and to conclude the program Borodine's Symphony No. 2 in B minor, which has not been heard here in 10 years. It will provide the assistant conductor his first opportunity to conduct a regular pair of concerts, his one appearance on the podium at a regular concert having been made on an hour's notice at a Saturday evening's concert two years ago, when Mr. Golschmann was ill.

Bauer began his career as a boy prodigy in London, where he was born, and as a violinist. Paderewski, who became his teacher, influenced him to become a pianist. He became widely known as an interpreter of Brahms, Schumann and Cesar Franck, and, later, of the piano works of his friend Debussy. His later years, however, have been devoted largely to Beethoven. He was the founder and has continued as president of the Beethoven Society in New York.

Mr. Guidi's complete program is:

Overture to the opera "La Clemenza di Tito" ....Mozart
Concerto in E flat major
Opus 73 ("Emperor")....Beethoven
1. Allegro.
II. Adagio up poco moto.
III. Rondo: Allegro ma non troppo.
Harold Bauer.
Symphony No. 2 in B minor
Opus 5 ....Borodine
1. Allegro moderato.
II. Scherzo: Molto vivo.
III. Andante.
IV. Allegro.

The Monte Carlo Ballet Russe comes to St. Louis for three separate programs Friday evening, Feb. 23, and Saturday afternoon and evening, Feb. 24, when it will be presented at the Odeon by the St. Louis Symphony Society, the complete St. Louis Symphony Orchestra of 80 collaborating with the 64 dancers on the stage.

Leonide Massine, the maitre de ballet and chief choreographer, was the Faun when the Diaghilev Ballet first presented Debussy's "The Afternoon of a Faun" in this country 17 years ago.

Miss Adler to Do The "Mirele Efros"

Miss Celia Adler, star of the Yiddish stage, who drew a capacity audiece to the Odeon last week, will appear there again tonight, presenting this time "Mirele Efros," a stirring play by Jacob Gordin. The role played by Miss Adler is a most difficult one and for that reason few Yiddish stars appeared in the Gordin piece. As a matter of fact, Miss Adler's revival of the play is the only one since the death of Kenny Lipzin.

Following tonight's performance, Miss Adler and her company leave for an extended tour. Sol Goldman is the sponsor of the local engagement.

American History in Films.

A photoplay portraying life in Jamestown, the first permanent English colony on this continent, will be shown at the North Side Y. M. C. A., 3100 North Grand boulevard, next Friday evening at 7:30. The play is one of a series of weekly showings of American historical films which the North Side "Y" is giving for its members and their friends.

Greta Garbo in "Queen Christina," Loew's.

Janet Gaynor in "Carolina," at The Fox.

THE WEEK'S NEW FILMS

By Nie

AFTER an absence of almost two years from the screen Greta Garbo is back, by way of Loew's, this week in a picture play of her own choice, "Queen Christina," a story of the Swedish sovereign who wore pants and gave up her throne when she got tired of ruling. The film has it that she retired, more or less gracefully, from the high spots to be with her boy friend. John Gilbert, who later got himself killed in a duel and while history does not back up Hollywood in this matter it serves to provide a good enough reason for the Garbo fans. You see John was the Spanish Ambassador to Sweden and brought with him to that cold country all the warmth of sunny Castile and sun-kissed Beverly Hills. Greta, in her boy's clothes, was sorter wandering around in the snow when John arrived, looking for romance or something, and Ambassador Gilbert has it to burn. Before he discovered that she was the queen—he met her pretty unconventionally on one of her Thursday nights out at a roadside inn—John was in love with her and she with him. When he gets to court and finds his pleasant companion seated on the Big Chair John is, to say the least, nonplussed and considerably atwitter. Before long, however, he recovers his Spanish composure and, what with sleigh rides and other Swedish winter sports, Tina and John are the talk of the town. Count Gilbert starts back to Spain, being hurried along by the pressure of public opinion, and Greta tosses her crown to her cousin Charley and sets out in pursuit. If her horse had been a little faster everything might have ended happily but a Swedish grandee catches up with John first and puts the Spaniard aboard his ship—in a coffin. Ex-Queen Greta sails with her dead sweetheart registering unhappiness and the picture ends then and there. The film has been made with considerable pageantry and some spectacular snow and court scenes and ought to please the big Garbo following immensely for it has, on many occasions, some magnified close ups of the star. As a matter of fact she is spread across the screen rather too often to help the story along and in the bigger moments, when she is called upon to act rather than appear Garboish she does not quite rise to the occasion as a dramatic firebrand. In passing it may be remarked that Mr. Gilbert has slipped some from his position of The Great Lover.

The Solid South.

LITTLE JANET GAYNOR, from up-north somewhere, teaches the tobacco belt a thing or two in "Carolina," at the Fox, and Lionel Barrymore, as a down-at-the-heel aristocrat, helps make the play the best vehicle Miss Gaynor has ever appeared in. The film is taken from the story, "The House of Connelly," and the Connelly family, of which Barrymore is the head, has run to seed by the time Janet and her father arrive to take up tenant farming. The father dies and Janet carries on alone, but when Robert Young, as the junior Connelly, falls in love with her the penniless blue bloods rise up in arms. But Janet sticks to her knitting—or, rather, to her tobacco raising—and everything works out for the best. "Carolina" is really a delightful little cinema and Lionel Barrymore's performance as the Confederate officer who, 40 years after, is still fighting the Civil War, is a work of art. On the same bill at the Fox is "King of Wild Horses," an equine meller, in which Rex, the wonder horse, puts it all over a lot of Hollywood human stars.

Love in Vienna.

BEBE DANIELS, who makes a picture only now and then, is on view once more at the St. Louis in "The Song You Gave Me," a charming little story of a Viennese opera singer who falls in love with her male secretary. The plot is thin, but Bebe gets her man. Victor Varconi, who can sing as well as do secretarial work, heads the supporting cast and the film, made in England with Miss Daniels as the only American performer, is most agreeably done throughout. Miss Daniels, who showed that she had a nice singing voice in "Rio Rita," uses it again to advantage in "The Song You Gave Me." The St. Louis' No. 2 offering is "The Ninth Guest," a mystery meller that is a real thriller with a whole lot of people getting killed in a pent house party. On the stage Leonard Ceeley, Municipal Opera Star, sings in his best manner.

Malay Mixture.

CECIL B. DE MILLE, who never makes a picture without a bath tub, is rather up against it in "Four Frightened People" at the Missouri. The scenes are laid in the Malay jungles, where bath tubs are practically unknown, but when Claudette Colbert stumbles upon a waterfall the problem is solved for Claudette immediately takes a shower bath and the De Mille reputation is saved. The four people who get pretty well scared are Claudette, Herbert Marshall, Mary Boland and William Gargan. They are lost in the jungles and encounter all sorts of dangers from lack of De Mille bath tubs to cobras and warlike natives. Eventually they reach civilization and safety, but not until their guide, splendidly played by Leo Carillo, is killed. When the piece starts off Miss Colbert is a homely Chicago school teacher, but by the time she has had her shower and lost her spectacles she is a ravishing beauty, which adds to the complications facing the men in the party. In its more serious scenes "Four Frightened People" isn't so hot, but when Mary Boland is allowed to cut loose with her own brand of comedy the piece gets entertaining. The same thing is true of the Missouri's other picture, "Good-Bye Love," an impossible and dreadfully dull affair except when Charlie Ruggles is on the screen.

Society and the Underworld.

MIRIAM HOPKINS and Fredric March, stars of "All of Me," at the Ambassador, run into a lot of competition on the screen. First of all the story of a Park avenue girl who loved a college professor but wasn't willing to get married, is rather silly and stupid. Then George Raft and Helen Mack are in the picture and, most of the time, simply gallop off with the honors. The way in which Miss Mack, as an expectant mother, sticks to her thieving companion, Raft, through thick and thin finally makes Miriam see the right road to redemption. Even then George and Helen might have stolen the finish, but an accommodating author has them jump out of a fiftieth story window in order to clear the final fade out for the other two. The Ambassador's girl and vaudeville stage show is master of ceremonied again by the popular Jack Haley.

REALTY BUSINESS SHOWING GAINS IN MANY CITIES

Survey Indicates Continued Shortage of Single-Family Dwellings—Rents Go Upward Again.

SOME DEMAND FOR APARTMENTS

Dearth of Money Supply Still in Evidence — Interest Rates Rising in 68 Pct. of Towns.

Indication of greater activity in the real estate market and definite measure of the growing shortage in single-family dwellings are given in the twenty-second semi-annual survey of the real estate market made by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The findings cover 273 cities. They are based on confidential reports by the association's local member boards in each of the cities.

The survey shows:

Appreciable percentage of cities in every section of the United States showing shortage of single-family dwellings. (This was not true six months ago.)

Shortages appearing in apartment space. This, as yet, in cities of under 100,000 population.

First sign of a check in the down tendency in rents. Up movement begun, both in residential and business space.

Absolute dearth of money supply continuing in every section and in every type of city.

Interest rates rising in 68 per cent of the cities of over 500,000 population.

The survey of six months ago showed for the first time since June, 1929, a predominating uptrend in market activity. The current survey shows the up-dominance continuing, with 37 per cent of the cities showing a more active market than existed one year ago and only 21 per cent a less active market. The South Atlantic section, with 56 per cent of its cities showing an uptrend, and the West South Central section with 47 per cent, lead the movement. In the association's survey of a year ago 65 per cent of the cities gave their market condition as "less active."

Advantageous Buying Level.

The survey's findings on prices indicate the present advantageous buying level. Lower selling prices than prevailed at this time a year ago are shown in 50 per cent of the cities reporting. Prices are at about last year's level in 43 per cent of the cities. They have gone up in 7 per cent of the cities reporting. In the survey of a year ago, 89 per cent of the cities showed lower selling prices. Less than 1 per cent at that time showed the price level going higher.

A marked change in the last six months is shown in supply of single-family residences. Actual shortage in this type of structure exists in 27 per cent of the cities reporting, whereas only 12 per cent showed such shortage six months ago and only 7 per cent a year ago.

Shortage is shown by 69 per cent of the cities in the West South Central section, by 40 per cent of the New England cities reporting, by 40 per cent of the Pacific Coast cities reporting, and by 33 per cent of the cities in the Middle Atlantic section. Percentage of cities showing shortage in other sections is as follows: South Atlantic section, 15 per cent; East North Central section, 23 per cent; West North Central section, 22 per cent; East South Central section, 38 per cent; Mountain section, 14 per cent.

Middle Atlantic—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania.

West North Central—Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas.

South Atlantic—Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida.

East South Central—Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi.

West South Central — Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas.

Mountain—Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Nevada.

Pacific—Oregon, Washington, California.

The condition of shortage appears to be more prevalent in the smaller rather than the larger cities, but no city of over 500,000 population reported an oversupply of this type of structure, and 14 per cent of this group showed a shortage.

Apartments in Smaller Cities.

Shortage in apartment space is shown in 11 per cent of the cities reporting, as against 5 per cent so reporting six months ago. The number of cities showing oversupply has been cut down to 23 per cent of those reporting, as against 36 per cent six months ago. In the New England section 20 per cent of cities report a shortage. However, in the whole survey, no city of over 100,000 population reported any apartment shortage, and 75 per cent of the cities of over 500,000 population indicate oversupply.

Not a single city in any section reported a shortage of business property. Overstock was reported by 41 per cent as against 47 per cent of the cities six months ago.

The down tendency in rents is still dominant, but first signs of an upturn appear. Two-family dwellings and central business property show the most general stiffening. Higher rents than a year ago for central business space have come into effect in 14 per cent of the cities reporting. Six months ago only 1 per cent reported uprents in central property.

In two-family dwellings, 16 per cent of the cities show an upturn in rents.

In single-family dwellings rents are up in 5 per cent of the cities, stationary in 51 per cent and down as compared with last year at this time, in 44 per cent of the cities. This contrasts with the survey of a year ago in which 76 per cent of the cities showed a down-trend.

Apartment rents are up in 8 per cent of the cities, statonary in 43 per cent, and down, as compared with rates a year ago in 49 per cent of the cities. This shows a considerable checking of the down-trend, as is seen from the fact that six months ago 74 per cent of the cities showed a down-trend, and a year ago 90 per cent of the cities showed lowered rates.

Money supply for real estate loans is shown to be practically nonexistent, a condition that has prevailed for four years. Loans are seeking capital in 89 per cent of the cities reporting, and in 100 per cent of the cities in some geographical sections. The dearth of capital supply prevails in every section, and in cities of every population group.

Not a single city of the largest population group (500,000 population or over), in other words, not a single money center, shows capital seeking loans.

Interest rates are reported steady in 68 per cent of the cities, rising in 20 per cent of the cities, falling in 12 per cent of the cities. But it must be noted that 67 per cent of all cities of over 500,000 population show rising rates, and none of them report falling rates. In general the survey shows a gradation of trend. The larger the cities the more prevalent are rising interest rates.

Market for Vacant Property.

For the country as a whole, less than 1 per cent of cities report a more active subdivision market. A level about that of last year at this time is reported in 46 per cent of the cities, a less active condition in 53 per cent of the cities. However, the first signs of a more active condition emerge in reports from the larger cities. In cities of over 500,000 population, 12 per cent show a market more active than existed at this time last year, 38 per cent a stationary condition, and 50 per cent a less active market. In the association's survey of six months ago not a single city of whatever size in any section of the country reported a more active subdivision market.

Real estate market activity as measured by number of deeds recorded stood at 53.8 for December, according to the compilation made monthly by the National Association of Real Estate Boards from official records in 61 typical. cities The index uses official totals for the corresponding month of the year 1926 as its base figure (100). The index for November was 54.1. The year's low point was registered in April, with an index for that month of 41.1. A secondary low appeared in July, when the index stood at 41.5.

OPPORTUNITY
You may not realize that in these last 3 months almost every genuine bargain offered in fine homes has been SOLD—and sold quickly. Don't fool yourself that people are not buying! Consult the records—notice the large increase in sales, and then do some thinking, if you want a real bargain, before it is too late. Here's a bargain, and one of the best ever offered in this fine home district—61 Ridgemoor drive, in the heart of the Moorlands (Claverach Park); 4-bedroom colonial home. Of course, it's modern; only 6 years old; large lot, swimming pool; wonderfully well built; cost around $28,000; is going quickly at $13,750. Try to find another like it at this price! Open Sunday for inspection. Better come early. No trades. WENZLICK R. E. CO., CH. 6900.

Congress Bill Aimed At Brinkley Station.

A BILL in Congress is aimed at such stations on the Mexican border as XER, operated by Dr. John R. Brinkley, formerly of Milford, Kan. It would amend the Radio Act to prohibit transmission from this country of programs to any station in a foreign country having power to be received regularly in the United States, without permission of the Federal Radio Commission. All United States radio stations and communications systems would be forbidden to supply programs to such a foreign station without the commission's permission.

The Brinkley station, which has been authorized by Mexico to increase power to 500,000 watts, has been a constant source of complaint to the Radio Commission, because of interference with United States stations. The State Department has vainly sought to get Mexico to compel Brinkley to desist from using channels that cause conflict. The same effort failed when made at the radio conference at Mexico City last summer.

Dr. Brinkley's license for his Milford station was revoked by the commission, whereupon he established XER. For a while he controlled XER by a telephone line from Milford, but finally moved his headquarters to Del Rio, a few miles across the border from Villa Acuna, where XER is located.

Listen In on Byrd With "All-Wave" Sets.

RECEPTION of numerous foreign stations is reported by listeners using the new Philco "all-wave" sets. As a result, Philco is now guaranteeing foreign reception. Increased sales of receivers are reported by the Artophone Corporation, the local Philco distributer, as a result of growing interest in tuning in distant short wave stations.

Many listeners report picking up the broadcasts from the Byrd Expedition by short wave in addition to listening to the weekly network broadcasts from the Antarctic.

Others report consistent reception, with strong volume, of stations in Madrid, London, Paris, Venezuela, Rome, Cuba and Puerto Rico, as well as Mexico and Canada.

Barrett suggests that the committee prepare a report before the next regular session of the Missouri Legislature.

St. Clair County CWA workers did not receive their pay checks yesterday, the disbursing system having been changed. They will be given their checks tomorrow or Tuesday on the jobs where they are employed, Harold Allison of East St. Louis, assistant disbursing officer for the county, said.

Workers customarily have received their checks by mail on Saturday. HER HUSBAND AND DAUGHTERS.

KLEMME, FREDERICK W.—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, who passed away Feb. 7, 1933:
In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true;
Life was too short to say farewell
To those he knew and loved so well.
With his cheery smile and wave of the hand
Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
But love's remembrance outlasts all.
Think of his faring on, as dear
In the love of there as the love of here.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, BROTHER, SISTER.

KRAGE, NELLIE—In loving memory of Nellie Krage, who passed away 13 years ago, Feb. 10, 1921:
Your memory is as dear today
As in the hour you passed away.
Sadly missed by FAMILY.

KRAUS, LEO—In loving memory of our dear husband and father, who passed away five years ago today, Feb. 11, 1929.
Sadly missed by his WIFE, DAUGHTERS AND SONS.

KRUMMEL, MRS. HENRIETTA—In memory of our dear mother who passed away Feb. 16, 1929.
Thoughts return today long past;
Time rolls on, but memory lasts.
Sadly missed by her children.
AMELIA KRUMMEL and the rest.

MIGNERON, WILLIAM J.—In loving memory of my beloved husband and dear father, who departed this life Feb. 9, 1927.
A light has from our household gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
Some may think you are forgotten,
Though on earth you are no more;
But in memory you are with us
As you always were before.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND DAUGHTER.

NICHOLAS, WILLIAM JR.—In loving memory of our darling son, who departed this life seven years ago, Feb. 24, 1927.
The month of February again is here,
To us the saddest of the year,
Because it took from us away
A dear one just seven years ago today.
Sadly missed by
FATHER AND MOTHER.

ROEHR, CHESTER HAHN—A tribute of love and memory of our dear son, husband and father, who departed this life Feb. 14, 1933:
We often sit and think of him
When we are all alone;
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, WIFE AND CHILDREN.

ROEHR, CHESTER HAHN—In loving memory of my dear nephew, who passed away Feb. 14, 1933:
And while he lies in peaceful sleep
His memory I shall always keep.
His devoted aunt,
MRS. EMMA REIMLER.

STEBER, OLIVER F. JR.—In memory of our dear son who passed away Feb. 8, 1923:
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.
MOTHER, FATHER AND SISTER.

STOCK, CHARLES—In memory of my dear son and brother; died Feb. 15, 1933:
Gone but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND SISTERS.

TRAUBE, PAULINE—In loving memory, who departed this life Feb. 14, 1932.
Remembrance is a golden chain
Death tries to break, but all in vain.
To have, to love and then to part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never;
The memory of those days when we were here together.
Sadly missed by her husband,
ALBERT TRAUBE.

WEINER, JULIA—In sad but loving remembrance of our beloved wife, mother, mother-in-law and grandmother, Julia Weiner, who died Feb. 16, 1931:
HUSBAND, DAUGHTER, SON-IN-LAW AND GRANDCHILDREN.

ZEIS-KROMAN, AMELIA—Who departed this life Feb. 16, 1931:
Thoughts returned to days long past,
Time rolls on but memories last.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

IN MEMORIAM

WIPKE, ANNIE—In loving memory of our dear mother who departed from this life Feb. 11, 1933.
Her smiling way and pleasant face are a pleasure to recall;
She had a kindly word for each and died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet her;
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp her hand in the better land,
Never to part again.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

AMERICANS TO TRIAL AS SPIES IN FINLAND

Former Michigan School Teachers Among 28 Accused of Espionage.

By the Associated Press.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Feb. 10.—Mr. and Mrs. Arvid Jacobson, Americans, who once taught school in Michigan, go to trial Monday among twenty-eight accused of espionage.

Police say the accused supplied a foreign Government with secret information about Finland's military forces, ammunition factories, and communications.

Mrs. Mary Louise Martin, said to be a Canadian, is accused as the leader of the alleged spy syndicate.

Public interest in the case has been intense, especially since police uncovered what they called a second plot to poison high military officers. The two were said to have had no connection.

The Finnish high court at Abo will try the case secretly. The maximum penalty for espionage is six years' imprisonment, but agitation set in after the police disclosures four months ago to raise the punishment for espionage to death.

Desertion Starts Inquiry.

The desertion of Lieut. Vilho Pentkanen from the army general staff, to which he was attached as a photographer, and his reported crossing into Russia with army secrets, photographs, and plans, led to the first investigations by police in mid-October.

Subsequently authorities started a roundup in which the 28 suspects were arrested.

Einor Vaha of Helsingsfors was said by political police to have confessed that he was an agent of the spy band headed by Mrs. Martin and including Jacobson, 29-year-old former Northville, Mich., teacher, who came here in January, 1933, to study higher mathematics in the University of Helsingfors.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson were arrested Oct. 19. Authorities said he confessed to having been a liaison man between Mrs. Martin and more than 20 secret operatives.

Linked with Paris Charges.

Mrs. Martin, who is 37 and a tall brunette, was arrested two days later. She was said to have a Canadian passport, but police said she might be Maria Shule, a native of Latvia. She had steadfastly denied any espionage activity, although several of the others in custody are said by police to have implicated her.

Authorities also say she is an acquaintance of Mme. Lydia Stahl, who is one of more than 20 held in Paris in connection with a suspected spy plot. Others under arrest in the French capital on like charges are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Switz of New Jersey and New York.

Police maintain they found in the Jacobson apartment secret papers and two keys, similar to keys found in Mrs. Martin's home. The keys were said to fit a door of an obscure apartment in another section of Helsingfors which later is said to have been established as the secret meeting place of the alleged organization.

Communistic Sympathies.

Jacobson confessed, police said, that he had communistic sympathies. He was born in Watton, Mich., of Finnish parents, and studied in the University of Michigan.

He told investigators that when he accepted a scholarship at the University of Helsingfors he was told he would "have to make a few reports occasionally," but that when he entered the institution he learned his assignments were to receive information from various agents and relay it to Mrs. Martin.

He tried to give it up, he was quoted as saying, but was threatened with exposure if he refused to perform the tasks given him.

THREE FARM CREDIT OFFICERS APPOINTED

James M. Huston Made Vice President of Federal Land Bank.

Three new officers have been chosen for the Farm Credit Administration of St. Louis, which comprises four organizations serving agricultural needs of Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas.

F. W. Niemeyer of Little Rock has been named deputy general agent of the FCA under General Agent Wood Netherland. He will take up the duties immediately. For the past several months he has been engaged in RFC work in New Orleans and for several years he was president of the Bankers' Trust Co. at Little Rock. He was nominated for the new position by Gov. W. I. Myers of the FCA at Washington and confirmed by the St. Louis advisory council.

James M. Huston has been elected vice-president and treasurer of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, largest of the four FCA units. He succeeds Walter H. Land, who died Jan. 28. Huston has been president of another FCA unit, the Production Credit Corporation of St. Louis. He has been active in the organization of more than 100 local production credit associations providing short-term credit.

W. P. Oliver, vice-president of the Production Credit Corporation, was made executive vice-president, to serve as executive manager. Formerly he was executive vice-president of the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation of St. Louis.

Other units here of the FCA are the Intermediate Credit Bank and the Bank for Co-operatives. Each of the four units has its own officers, but they are supervised and co-ordinated by the general agent of the FCA and his deputy. They provide long-term loans on farm mortgage security, short-term and intermediate-term production loans and loans to farmers' co-operatives.

KROGER CLERKS MINIMUM AFTER TWO YEARS $18 A WEEK

Incorrect Statement About Salary in Post-Dispatch of Friday.

It was incorrectly stated in Friday's Post-Dispatch, in connection with a strike vote being cast by Kroger store clerks who are members of a union, that the maximum salary of clerks is now $18 a week.

The minimum salary of clerks is $18 a week after the second year of service and other clerks earn up to $23 and $25 a week, C. R. Holton, personnel manager of Kroger company said. Store managers are getting a $35 minimum guarantee and others earn up to $50, Holton said.

A contract submitted by union officers proposes $36 a week for managers in stores where sales exclusive of meats are $400 a week or less, and $36 a week and 1 per cent commission in stores where sales exclusive of meats are more than $400 a week.

The contract does not seek to change the working hours under the NRA code, which provides for managers' hours from 7 a. m. to 6 p. m. on five days a week and 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. on Saturdays. Clerks are working 48 hours a week under the NRA code, with a provision for 56 hours a week, any three weeks of the year, usually made effective during the Christmas holidays.

(Repaid was placed outside).
Scratched—Monel, Coequel, Brandon Mint.

Springsteel paid $12.10 straight, $5.60 to place and $4.10 to show; Repaid $10.70 to place, $7.30 to show; Clotho $3.70 to show.

Springsteel at home in the sloppy going broke fast rushed into long lead and was only galloping at end. Repaid also liked the going and was a keen factor for entire trip. Clotho was hustled along and disposed of Clarify for the show. Clarify floundered in the going. He did not like it and never was a contender. Sweeping Light dropped out of it early. Big Beau was unable to keep up in the going. Mad Frump was out run.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 10.—The roan gelding Springsteel, bred and owned by Sylvester W. Labrot, Maryland sportsman, won the Miami Beach Handicap of one mile here today as if he outclassed one of the best fields ever to compete in a winter feature event.

Carrying 121 pounds, three less than the topweight, Sweeping Light, the son of Sir Graysteel led all the way and won by five lengths, under wraps throughout by the veteran Jimmy Burke. Jim Fitzsimmons' Repaid was just as easily second over Clotho, which, along with the sulky Mad Frump, represented C. V. Whitney. Springsteel paid $12.10 for $2 and his time was 1:38. The race was worth $2160 to the winner.

20,000 See Race.

A torrential shower fell just before the headline attraction and the track, which had been unaffected by earlier showers, became sloppy. Despite the elements, the biggest crowd of the meeting, estimated at close to 20,000, was on hand, and the biggest mutuel handle since the boom days was assured.

M. L. Schwartz's colt Clarify, winner of four straight this winter, ruled the standout favorite. It was thought that the rain was a big factor in his winning streak being ended, for he failed to exhibit his usual form in the slippery footing, finishing just out of the money.

Winner Takes Early Lead.

Springsteel, dismal failure in the Hialeah Inaugural but a winner subsequently in the Everglades Purse, dashed to the front in the first few yards after a good start. The battle-worn Burke took him in hand and the roan galloper just coasted to the judges. Repaid, placed on the outside at the start because of his bad post manners, disposed of Clarify before leaving the backstretch and had weak contention for the runner-up position. Clotho was well up from the start but he had to give his best to save the show from the hard ridden Clarify, even with the latter floundering in the going.

TODDY KAMP.

He's not very voluble but when Carl O. "Toddy" Kamp says he has a good team, it's a pretty safe bet that McBride High will go places in the Preparatory League. Twice in six months, "Toddy" confided that he expected great things of his boys and when they stepped out to win the football championship and scored a double victory by acquiring the basketball title, Friday, it just verified Kamp's assertion.

Like the testimonials which aver that when he sat down to play the piano they laughed, when "Toddy" said he thought his boys would win the football championship there was no small bit of scoffing. But win it he did, in spite of the fact that

ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND DRAW IN SOCCER MATCH

By the Associated Press.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Feb. 10.—Representative elevens from the English and Scottish football leagues today battled to a 2—2 tie at Ibrox Park in their annual inter-league soccer game. Scotland won in 1932 and 1933.

WRAY'S COLUMN

The Underdog.

POPULAR sympathy already is going out to Tommy Loughran, one of the ring's most pleasing personalities, a fighter rated by some critics as the world's most skillful boxer.

He is enjoying the favoritism always extended to the terrier who tackles the mastiff. He personifies courage, resourcefulness, and a daring amounting almost to foolhardiness, in the public mind.

LOUGHRAN.

And when the facts and figures are compared concerning Loughran's 15-round fight with champion Carnera at Miami Feb. 22, few will deny that Loughran has courage. For example:

He will be 31 years old, Carnera 26.

He will weigh not more than 185, Carnera 260.

He has been going downhill, Carnera coming up.

He is a beaten heavyweight (knocked out twice), Carnera is world champion.

He will be outreached many inches.

He will be at a six or seven-inch disadvantage in height.

He will be hitting at an opponent he has apparently not the power to hurt, while facing a knockout blow himself.

And all that, friends, takes courage. He is the underdog in earnest; and his confidence in his own ability to avoid being hit a dangerous blow while scoring points is proof positive of his cocky self-confidence. It's a spirit that all ringsiders admire and everyone respects.

A Different Task.

HOWEVER, lest sympathy take our minds off of facts, let us recall that this underdog does not resemble in the least that terrier of the ring, Jack Dempsey, when he faced the giant Jess Willard at Toledo and OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 10.—An obscure sophomore guard playing on the Creighton University quintet was largely responsible for Washington University's defeat by the top-heavy score of 40 to 20 here tonight.

The diminutive guard, Edmund Brick, made five field goals and three free throws before he was sent to the showers.

Washington never seriously threatened the Blue Jays, who took an early leading, having an 8 to 1 advantage before the Bears came to life.

Before the half the Bears appeared tiring. The half ended 19 to 12.

Maysack, Bear center, gave up putting too much effort at jumping center against Schmidt, Blue Jay giant.

Englebretson, forward and the Blue Jays' scoring ace, was held to three baskets before he was ejected for four personal fouls early in the second half. Moller, Bear guard, likewise lost his good standing with four fouls.

Play was loose and rough on both sides. Both teams missed an abundance of shots.

Martintoni set the pace for a while with free throws, flipping four and missing one. Maysack was the high free tosser with five.

Washington suffered from erratic passes, several going out of bounds or directly in the hands of Blue Jays.

TERRY FIRES MONAHAN AND STONEHAM CONCURS IN COLLECT TELEGRAM

Pat Monahan, who found and recommended Blondy Ryan, Bill Shores, Homer Peel, Byrne James and Phil Weintraub to the Giants last year, has been notified by Bill Terry, New York manager, that his services as a scout no longer are required.

"It's all a mystery to me," Monahan told the Post-Dispatch last night. "Terry gave me a boost when Ryan helped the team win the pennant and when the world series ended we parted as good friends, and I was given to understand that I was all set for 1934. Three days ago I got a letter from Terry that he didn't need me any more. I wrote to Mr. Stoneham to find what it was all about, but his reply was a telegram, collect, too, that he concurred in anything that Terry wanted to do."

Monahan said he was communicating with several clubs in an effort to land a scouting job for 1934. He formerly scouted for the Browns and Red Sox.

John Bretz Wins Mile Race In Michigan Meet

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 10.—John Bretz, St. Louis, won the one-mile open race featuring first day of Wayne County Ice Carnival at Bell Isle. Bretz had a six-yard margin over Storms Arnold, Michigan champion. Bill Thompson was a close third. The time was 3 minutes 12 seconds.

Truman Connell and Mel Dublinsky, St. Louis, fell in the stretch while fighting for first place. They also spilled at the same place in the 220-yard open race, while Bretz fell on the first straightaway in this race. Arvid Friedland won 220-yard race with Lloyd Guenther second. The program will be finished tomorrow.

CUNNINGHAM, BONTHRON WIN IN TUNEUPS FOR RACE SATURDAY

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Feb. 10.—Bill Bonthron of Princeton, owner of the American mile record, opened his 1934 campaign by trouncing Glen Dawson of Tulsa, Ok., the National A. A. U. champion, by a good 10 yards tonight in the Boston A. A.'s 1000-yard feature at the Boston Garden. Looking back as he broke the tape, Bonny was clocked in 2:15 1-5 after taking the lead on the second lap.

Eight starters lined up and Brendon Moynahan of the B. A. A. elected to set the pace. He led for one turn and Bonthron forged to the front with Dawson, last year's winner, running last. The Westerner worked his way up through the field while Bonthron was running his easy race. Two laps from the finish, Dawson moved into second place, five yards behind the leader.

Bonthron kept looking back on every lap and when he saw the Westerner come within challenging distance, he started his final drive. The sprinting Dawson managed to stay five yards behind until he weakened on the backstretch going into the tape.

Bonthron appeared in splendid shape but it was evident that he was not in a record-breaking mood.

He ran just hard enough to win and, since he was not forced, the competition probably put him on edge for his objective clash with Glen Cunningham in next week's Baxter mile.

Cunningham Wins Mile Race.

Glenn Cunningham, America premier miler, received but little competition when he made his New England debut by breezing home 35 yards ahead of Dean Woolsey of the B. A. A. in the four-man Hunter mile, feature of the Boston A. A. games.

This blue-ribbon classic, generally the high spot of the Boston A. A. competition, was a washout as far as the 10,000-odd spectators were concerned. Announcing beforehand that he was not ready to cut loose for a record attempt, the powerful Kansan, who has his mind set on next week's competition against Bonthron, merely ran 12 times about the Garden track in 4 minutes, 18 2-5 seconds.

Cunningham's quarters were 1:03 1-5, 2:10 2-5, 3:18 and 4:18 2-5 a mediocre performance on the Garden's sharply banked track that has a 4:15.2 record set by Joie Ray and equalled two years ago by Gene Venzke.

Dick Bell Wins Dash.

The first Eastern indoor start of Walter Marty of Fresno College, holder of the world's outdoor high jump mark, was ruined by George Spitz of New York University, the indoor record holder, who cleared six feet, six inches, two inches higher than the Californian's ceiling.

Dick Bell, of St. Louis, a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology won the Briggs 50-yard final over a fast field.

The summaries:

BRIGGS' 50-YARD DASH FINAL—Won by Dick Bell, M. I. T.; Alfred Hicks, unattached, second; Arthur Jannell, Fordham, third; Thomas Gilligan, Holy Cross, fourth; Walter Janiak, Holy Cross, fifth; C. A. Pescosolido, Harvard, sixth. Time—5 2-5 seconds.

Martin a Holdout? "I Like Literaries," Is Pepper's Reply

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 10.

ALL "Pepper" Martin could talk about today was the "swell time" he had at a country school house literary meeting last night.

He wouldn't say a word as to whether he was a "holdout" for a better St. Louis Cardinal contract.

"Say, you ever been to a literary?" he asked. "This one was in a school house out west of Guthrie. They have readings, one or two of them, and then they sing a while and then a jig or two and sometimes, you know, a harmonica player or fiddler. If I'd known about that I'd have taken up my guitar."

"But did you send your contract back unsigned?" his questioner persisted.

IOWA FIVE HANDS PURDUE ITS FIRST BIG TEN DEFEAT

By the Associated Press.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Feb. 10.—In a thrilling neck and neck battle the University of Iowa handed Purdue its first Western Conference basketball defeat here tonight, the Hawkeyes eking out a 38 to 36 victory.

Robert Kessler, Boilermaker reserve forward, was fouled just as the gun fired and was given two free throws and an opportunity to tie the score. With his teammates standing hopefully beside him he failed, however, and missed both shots.

Purdue opened with a rush and at one time led Iowa, 19 to 11. A brilliant spurt by the Hawkeyes at that point, however, gave them 10 points and the lead at the half, 21 to 19. The winners held the upper hand throughout the last half but Purdue managed to tie the score two times, at 32-all and again at 36-all.

Moffitt for Iowa and Lowery for Purdue were high point scorers, each registering 12 points. Barko made the winning field goal for Iowa.

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Feb. 10.—Illinois held its place in the struggle for the Western Conference basketball championship tonight by subduing Indiana, 28 to 25, in a fast, close battle.

13,000 CROWD SEES WISCONSIN BEAT MINNESOTA

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 10.—Wisconsin and Minnesota created a whirlwind on the basketball floor tonight with the Badgers yanking the Gophers down from their high perch in the Big Ten with a 31 to 30 victory before nearly 13,000 fans.

The engagement, fierce from the outset and repeatedly stopped by officials, became Wisconsin's in the last 10 seconds. A field goal underneath the Gopher basket by Nick DeMark settled the issue.

The season's record conference crowd, pulled out of its seats by Minnesota's late game attack which set the Gophers ahead for the first time, anticipated a Minnesota triumph when George Roscoe caged his fifth basket to place Minnesota in the lead. Then DeMark scored his fifth field goal to be high scorer along with Roscoe at 10 points each.

ACQUISITION IS ANNOUNCED BY BREADON AS 'SURPRISE'

By J. Roy Stockton

Charles Flint Rhem, whose strong right arm helped Rogers Hornsby and the Cardinals of 1926 to give St. Louis its first pennant in 38 years, is coming back to the Redbirds. Sam Breadon announced last night that Rhem had been purchased back from the Philadelphia Phillies and that is the surprise that the president of the Cardinals promised the fans on his return from the National League meeting in New York.

It was a cash deal with the purchase price not disclosed and no other players involved, according to Breadon's announcement. However, Rhem undoubtedly was obtained at a bargain price, as he had the worst year of his career with the 1933 Phillies, winning only five and losing 14 games, and the enemy's earned runs against the big right-hander averaged 6.57 a nine-inning contest.

Better Than His Record.

Rhem, who was sold to the Phillies in June, 1932, with Eddie Delker for a reported price of $50,000, is a better pitcher than his 1933 record indicates. According to the grapevine he did not "get along" with Burt Shotton and after having been with the Cardinals in four pennant-winning campaigns, he found it difficult to take the same interest in his work with a club that was hopelessly in the second division.

Scout Charley Barrett signed Rhem to a Cardinal contract while the strongarmed son of Carolina was a student at Clemson College. "Big Shad" spent the 1924 season at Fort Smith, where he struck out 282 batters and then graduated to the Cardinals. He reached his best form in 1926 and was a big factor in the team's pennant victory. He and Vic Keen kept the Cards in the race in the early stages of the season, Shad winning 12 of his first 13, and Keen 10 of his first dozen. Rhem finished the season with 20 victories and only seven defeats.

Deal Approved by Frisch.

Rhem remained with the Cardinals through 1927 and 1928, but in 1929 he was optioned to Minneapolis and then to Houston. Recalled for the 1930 season, Rhem won 12 and lost eight and in 1931 won 11 and lost 10. In 1932 he was sold to the Phils and finished the season with 15 victories and nine defeats and the earned-run average off his delivery was 3.58 a nine-inning game.

"Frisch approved the purchase," Breadon said, in announcing the deal. "Rhem was not happy at Philadelphia and Frank believes he will regain his oldtime form with us and be a winning pitcher again."

Rhem was born at Rhems, S. C., and was 32 years old last Jan. 24.

Oklahoma Upset By Iowa State

By the Associated Press.

AMES, Ia., Feb. 10.—The Iowa State Cyclones snatched a thrilling 40 to 38 victory from Oklahoma tonight in an outstanding upset of the Big Six Conference basketball race.

It was Iowa State's first victory of the season and a serious setback to the Sooners, who until tonight were tied with the University of Kansas for the conference leadership.

The Cyclones took the lead early in the first period but were overtaken when Bross sank two setup shots to make the score 17-12 for the Sooners. An Iowa State rally just before the half ended put the Cyclones ahead, 18 to 17.

BYRON NELSON CONTINUES HOT PACE IN WINTER GOLF CAMPAIGN

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 10.—Byron "Lord" Nelson, 22-year-old Texarkana Country Club professional, showed the old guards the way today when he led the $2500 Texas Open through the first 36 holes with rounds of 66-70—136, six under par.

Nelson, 17 months a professional, has been touring the country's best courses since the start of the Pacific Coast tournaments, and to date his golf clubs have netted him $595 in prize money. Tomorrow he goes into the final 36 holes three strokes in front of a brilliant field of sharpshooters, and with an opportunity of taking down the top $750 and a diamond studded medal.

His admirers feared for him today when his 37 slipped him one over par on the front nine, but he settled down coming home with a well played 33 for his sub-par 70.

His card:

OUT—
Par	435	444	435—36
Nelson	435	544	444—37
IN—
Par	344	544	443—35	—71
Nelson	344	444	442—33	—70

Jimmy Demaret, Galveston professional, held second place with two fine rounds of 70-69—139. He got birdies at the ninth and fourteenth to shadow par.

Cooper Third.

Harry Cooper, a former Texan who is now a Chicago professional, held third place with 71-69—140. Cooper missed a chance for 68 when he sent his tee shot into the creek at the short eighteenth, forcing him to take a bogey four. He had a putt to hop out of the cup at the seventeenth, but otherwise his round was an exhibition of true shot making.

Gus Moreland, amateur champion of Texas who shot a 69 Friday, slipped to 39-33—72 today for a total of 141. It left the Walker Cup star in a tie for fourth place with Tom Creavy, National P. G. A. champion, Bill Mehlhorn, Wiffy Cox, recent winner of the Agua Caliente open, and Jack Burke of Houston.

Burke and Francis McGonagill, the latter current Texas P. G. A. champion, shot the lowest rounds of the day. Burke turned in 33-35—68, and McGonagill 37-31—68.

154 or Better Qualifies.

It was a dreary day for golf on the Brackenridge Park course and many players complained of putting trouble because of cold hands. Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., was another who slipped. After his 69 Friday, he drew a huge gallery today along with Moreland and Dick Metz, but his best was 37-36—73, for a 36-hole total of 142.

Ky Laffoon of Denver, who shared first place with Nelson through the initial 18 holes with a 66, was badly off today. His shots strayed, forcing him to a 39-38—77, and a total of 143. It tied him with Bobby Cruickshank of Richmond, Va., Jimmy Hines of New York, Victor Ghezzi of Rumson, N. J., and Craig Wood of Deal, N. J.

It required a 36-hole total of 154 to qualify for the final 36 holes tomorrow. The 64 low and all ties through today will play tomorrow. Not one outstanding star was left out of the final drive for the various prize money.

Bill Schwartz, young St. Louis, Mo., professional, had 72-77—149 to get into the final play.

The Well-Dressed Drinker.

No post-repeal wardrobe is complete without a cocktail suit and a champagne coat.—News Item.

A SUIT for every kind of drink
I fear would put me on the blink.
I can't partake of a liqueur
Unless my clothes are de rigueur.

A cocktail I must needs decline
When dressed in clothes that go with wine.
No highballs must go down my throat
When I have on my champagne coat.

I must not quaff the flowing ale
When I have on my swallow tail.
No Pousse cafe goes down the hatch
Unless I'm wearing clothes that match.

According to correct attire,
If I a "night cap" should desire,
No social error it would be
If I had on my robe de nuit.

True Fish Stories.

A farmer in Bogalusa, La., the State where the Kingfish comes from, was washing his false teeth in a stream when a fish struck his hand and swallowed the plate. Going home, he returned with his rifle, shot the fish weighing about eight pounds, and recovered the plate.

And if you can swallow that you will have no trouble swallowing the sequel. It was afterwards discovered that it was a sawfish that had lost some of its teeth and wanted to replace them.

District High School Basket Meet Feb. 26 Draws 30 Entries

The same number of teams that participated in the 1933 St. Louis District high school basketball tournament, 30, will take part in this year's event, according to an announcement made last night by Sam Hall, district chairman. The tournament will start Monday, Feb. 26, and be concluded Friday.

Although the Missouri State High School Athletic Association has abolished the distinction between Class A and B schools, this classification will exist for the local schools with 16 in Class A and 14 in Class B. Included in the former division is Ben Blewett, newly-admitted to the City High School League. Blewett is an unknown quantity, for it has not engaged in active competition against the six other City League teams.

Entries in Two Divisions.

The schools entered in the "A" class are Beaumont, Blewett, Central, Christian Brothers, Cleveland, Kirkwood, Maplewood, McBride, McKinley, Normandy, Ritenour, Roosevelt, St. Louis University High, Soldan, University City and Webster Groves. The "B" division inclues Bayless, Brentwood, Chaminade, Clayton, Country Day, Eureka, Fairview, Ferguson, Hancock, Jennings, Principia, Riverview Gardens, St. Charles and Wellston.

Three schools—C. B. C., Kirkwood and Ritenour—have moved up into the "A" division, while Burroughs has declined to enter a team in the "B" class.

Pairings will be drawn next Saturday. The plan of play now is first round "A" games, Monday at Washington University; second round "A" teams at Washington and first round "B" at University City High, Tuesday; quarter-finals of both divisions, Wednesday, at Washington; semifinals Thursday and finals of the two classes Friday at Washington.

No Class B State Meet.

Although participation in the state meet at Columbia will be limited to those "A" schools which are invited by the State Association and not by the tournament, yet the result of the tournament may have some bearing upon which teams are selected from St. Louis. There will be no State B tournament this year.

Officials for the local tournament will be Roy Newsom, Ray Duncan and Clay Van Reen. Admission to the games will be 25 cents at the schools and 35 cents at the gate.

The members of the committee are Sam Hall, chairman; Ben Barr, secretary; R. P. Hughes, Brother Linus Albert, W. L. Evans, Karl L. Ware and Charles A. Roberts.

No Score After All-Day Huddle On Football Rules

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 10. — The National Football Rules Committee, in annual session here, will delay its voting on any of the proposed rule changes in the college code until Sunday morning, Chairman Walter Okeson of Lehigh, said today.

Except for meals and a short intermission, the committee worked in secret session throughout the day.

Okeson said he would not comment on any of the discussions that took place today, although he asserted that most of the work consisted of weeding out many of the proposals which the committee felt were not feasible.

The suggestions that apparently meet with the approval of a majority of the committee members will be held over for a final discussion and vote Sunday morning, he announced. "We will have no statements to make until after our final adjournment Snuday," he said.

The visiting members were having much fun at the expense of H. J. Stegeman of the University of Georgia, kidding him about the Sunny South, which today offered a snow-covered picture here.

HOPPE, LAYTON AND BOZEMAN TIED FOR LEAD IN BILLIARD EVENT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Willie Hoppe, former balkline king, kept his record clean in the world's three-cushion billiard championship tonight, but he was forced to display a brilliant brand of shot-making to defeat Augie Kieckhefer, Chicago southpaw, 50 to 45. The victory sent Hoppe in a three-way tie for first place with Johnny Layton, Sedalia, Mo., and J. N. Bozeman Jr., Vallejo, Cal., each of whom has won three straight games.

Layton defeated Len Kenney, Chicago, 50 to 28, for his third straight victory.

Layton had only 17 scoreless innings, reaching his top form in the eighteenth and again in the forty-second when he clicked off seven billiards in each frame. He ran out the game in the forty-third inning after Kenney had counted seven times in the latter's last two trips to the table. Kenney's group of five in the forty-first inning constituted his high run.

Arthur Thurnbald, Chicago, a former champion, won his first game in four starts defeating Kinrey Matsuyama, Japanese star, in a long drawn-out match, 50 to 45. The defeat was Matsuyama's second in four matches.

Allen Hall of Chicago dropped out of the undefeated group when he fell before the steady playing of Otto Reiselt, former champion from Philadelphia, 50 to 28, in the first night game. The defeat was Hall's first four games.

In winning his first game of the championship, Reiselt showed by far his best form running out in 49 innings. He played superb defensive billiards, leaving little for Hall to shoot at, and at the same time showed a consistent offensive. The high mark of his game came in the thirty-ninth inning, when he ran eight and then played safe. Hall was at the top of his game in the twenty-second with a high cluster of five.

Tomorrow's schedule: Afternoon, Len Kenney, Chicago, vs. Kieckhefer; Tiff Denton, Kansas City, vs. Arthur Thurnblad, Chicago.

Night, Bozeman vs. Alfredo De Oro, New York; Welker Cochran, San Francisco, vs. Reiselt.

ALTON, Ill., Feb. 10.—The Eastern Illinois Teachers from Charleston handed the Shurtleff College basketball team its eleventh straight Little Nineteen Conference defeat here tonight, 39 to 32.

The visitors led at the half, 21 to 16, but Shurtleff went into the lead briefly in the second period.

Ballard and Rand scored 15 and 12 points, respectively, for the teachers, while Menzie was high for Shurtleff with 7.

FIRST BROWNIE TRAINING CAMP SQUAD TO START WORK MARCH 6

Fourteen pitchers, three catchers and all of the young infielders and outfielders who will be trying for jobs, will be in the first squad of Brownies, scheduled to report to Manager Rogers Hornsby at West Palm Beach, March 6, according to plans announced last night by L. C. McEvoy, vice-president of the St. Louis American League Club.

The only players on the roster not ordered to report with the first squad are Jack Burns, Oscar Mellilo, Lin Storti and Art Scharein, infielders, and Sam West and Debs Garms, outfielders. Burns and Mellilo are fixtures in the inner line of defense, Sam West has the centerfield job sewed up, and Hornsby knows what the other members of the second squad can do.

A Gob Pitcher.

Including Hornsby, there will be 25 athletes in the March 6 squad, but two of the players belong to the San Antonio club. They are Howard Robinson Mills, the star pitcher of the U. S. S. Lexington nine, who will be given his discharge from the U. S. Navy March 1, so he can report to the Brownie camp, and J. M. Roberson, a young infielder. Scouts have said that Mills does not need much experience to make him ready for big league duty, and so Hornsby wants to inspect him personally.

Hornsby will have numerous assistants in camp. Dr. George White, the new club trainer, will make the trip to camp from St. Louis, as will Coaches Grover Hartley and Charley O'Leary and Scouts Ray Cahill and Willis Butler. Butler is the Browns' California coach, who recommended Mills.

The Roster.

The athletes for whom Secretary Willis Johnson is arranging transportation, so that they will be in camp March 6, are as follows:

Catchers—Frank Grube, Tommy Heath and Rollie Hemsley.

Infielders—Ollie Bejma, Harland Clift, Alan Strange and Roberson.

Outfielders — Bruce Campbell, George Puccinelli, Ray Pepper and Earl Clark.

Hornsby will depart early this morning for Hot Springs, Ark., where he will serve as instructor in Ray Doan's baseball school before going to West Palm Beach, where he will greet the first squad March 6. Scout Jack Ryan, still unattached; Sid Simpson, Hornsby's duck-hunting companion, and two young ball players who will enroll in Doan's school, will accompany Hornsby.

TIGERS GET TWO POINTS TO KANSAS STATE'S ONE

MANHATTAN, Kan., Feb. 10. — Missouri University tonight administered a 41 to 20 beating to Kansas State College in their Big Six basketball game here tonight.

Never stopping their hard driving, Missouri used a tight defense and allowed State only four goals from the field while Kenneth Jorgenson, Tiger guard, tossed eight field goals and a free throw for 17 points.

The Aggies gathered 12 free throws but failed in the last minute to keep the Tigers from doubling their score when Blume and Nowell, substitutes, scored.

WESTERN "B" TEAM AND BURROUGHS "C" VICTORS

The Western Military Academy "B" basketball team defeated the John Burrough "B" team yesterday afternoon at Burroughs, 19 to 16. The Western team led all of the way.

The Burroughs "C" team repeated its victory over the Western "C" earlier in the season by winning, 20 to 14. The Western team led in the first half, but in the second part of the game the combination of Earl Sherry and "Simmy" Simmons of Burroughs netted 10 points that decided the game.

WRAY'S COLUMN

brought the Man Mountain of that day toppling to the canvas seven times in the first round.

That was a different sort of underdog. Rather, it was more like the old story of the swordfish and the whale.

The underdog of that torrid afternoon in the wooden bowl at Toledo, unlike Loughran, had youth, and his opponent age, reversing the Miami situation.

He had a terrific punch, and his opponent Willard had never stopped a good man in his career, except the aged and 25-pounds-overweight Jack Johnson.

He had an ill-conditioned fat man in front of him, who had lost all idea of defense and attack through idleness.

All the elements of the Toledo battle were in favor of the "underdog." At Miami most of these factors will be against Loughran.

Carnera Is No Willard.

CARNERA is no gross fat man, wrecked by long absence from the ring. He is always in great fighting condition. He has fine knowledge of defensive boxing. It isn't so certain that Loughran will outbox him for many rounds of the 15. He has proved that he can take it and smile through 15 rounds.

CARNERA.

Dempsey of 1919 would himself found much more trouble with the Carnera of 1934, than he did with Willard. And Loughran is no Dempsey. In fact he was stopped by such men as Sharkey and Hamas.

Loughran's great chance of victory is in making a running fight of it. Carnera is notoriously a weak hitter at a target moving away from him, especially if his opponent is a much smaller man. In Fabian tactics lies Tommy's sole hope. And that seems to be largely one of lasting the 15 rounds.

As Tommy Views It.

NO belittlement of his chances seem to discourage Loughran. A man of good heart, he sees only the ways by which he can win. He brings up the case of Corbett against Sullivan, forgetting that Sullivan was a hulk, and that Jim took 21 rounds to do the job. True, Corbett might have won on points in a 15-round fight—so might any other lively young fellow with courage.

Of Carnera's extra 75 pounds Tommy says it will prove just so much more target area and make the big boy easier to hit. I wonder if he ever watched Carner's foes try to get past that long left arm, the bulwark of Carnera's defense?

He says: "I count on speed, skill and experience to win. Carnera will have to outbox me to win and I don't believe he can."

It may happen that Loughran will win—surprising things occur in the ring. If it were 10 rounds, it might not even be surprising. If he should win the beans would be spilled for the fight world in an altogether disappointing manner.

Loughran, a fading, battle-scarred, knocked about veteran, would then be champion. And wouldn't that be a fine cheering situation for boxing promoters! The entire heavyweight class would be discredited. Perhaps it deserves to be. Certainly there are no miracles in it today, unless Carnera turns out to be one. And he hasn't thus far.

Unkind Suspicions.

FROM the promotion standpoint as well as Carnera's the situation has resulted in the usual grapevine whisperings as to the honesty of the proposed bout. The old "in the bag for the champion" wail is heard in the land.

But that's heard at all times and places. In this case there is every reason to believe that Carnera can and will win. And the fact that the Carnera management is asking for George Blake as referee, seems to make it certain they are on-the-up-and-up with the show. Blake will call the result as he sees it, regardless—and the world knows that.

A Tough Spot.

HOW would you like to referee this fight? Picture the fifteenth round about to end, Loughran still in there. By safety-first or good defensive methods he has made a fine fight. It has been a retreating fight on Loughran's part because Carnera forced it most of the time. And too, he has scored many points.

But suppose he has not landed a decisive blow and that, when the gong rings, the crowd is cheering for the underdog as, win or lose, it surely will.

How would you like to be up there, faced with the responsibility of naming the winner by a hair-line decision? It would be a tough spot.

Carnera doesn't want judges. He wants it all put up to one competent official—the referee. And you can't blame him.

But the referee might.

The Kingfish Talks.

ONE way to get a line on fighters is from men they have fought. In the case of Loughran, there's Kingfish Levinsky. Having fought Baer (twice), Carnera (twice) and Loughran (three times.)

He omits Loughran from future calculations. At a recent gathering of fighters in New York, Max Baer observed that he intends to hit Carnera on the chin regardless of the terms or who promotes the fight.

"That," Levinsky is supposed to have said to Carnera, later, "will make you an even greater attraction against me in Chicago next September."

In other words, the man who has fought all three title rivals seems to believe that Carnera will survive his fights with Loughran and Baer and meet him (for the third time) in a title bout in Chicago.

"When I last met this big bloke I looked up and thought what a sucker I was for getting in there with him a second time," Levinsky told friends later. "All he has to do to beat Loughran is to loosen up and box right along with Tommy. Loughran's legs are gone and I'll be surprised if he is still in there at the end of four rounds."

And that's from a man who thinks there isn't a chance he will ever be called upon to face Loughran again.

TODDY KAMP TELLS BULL STORIES AND MAKES 'EM GOOD

he got off to a bad start in tying Western, 13 to 13. After that followed victories over Christian Brothers and St. Louis University High, the last being the ninth consecutive over the junior Billikens, coached by Tom Stanton. Then McBride lost to Cleveland, 7 to 6, in a post-season city title game.

The fact that McBride had to stay in training for football until Dec. 9 caused the Colonnaders to get off slowly in the basketball season. Before the holidays, McBride dropped decisions to Central, Roosevelt and Beaumont, but the team was just backing up for a good start, because it then proceeded to defeat Western Military and St. Louis University High twice and Christian Brothers once to clinch the championship.

It should be recorded that Kamp got his championship habit at Washington University, where he played football, basketball and baseball. During the season of 1918-1919, "Toddy" was captain of the basketball team. After graduation, Kamp coached two years at Clayton High and then accepted the position at McBride, where he has been ever since. Part of his success this year has been due to the work of Brother Eugene of the McBride faculty, who like "Toddy" doesn't say much, but oh boy, when these two together predict championship teams, then look out.

HALL BECOMES TENNIS HEAD, ASSAILS DAVIS CUP CRITICS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 10.—Immediately after he was elected president of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, Walter Merrill Hall of New York, asserted this afternoon the 1933 United States Davis Cup campaign was above reproach.

Hall, succeeding Harry S. Knox, Chicago, as president of the association, flayed critics of the Davis Cup team and intimated there would be no change in the policy of that organization this year.

Holcombe Ward, New York, was named first vice-president of the association; Joseph W. Ivy, Kansas City, second vice-president; Lawrence A. Baker, Washington, treasurer, and Ralph Westcott, Chicago, secretary.

Ward also was named chairman of the Davis Cup committee for 1934 and Jones W. Mersereau, New York, was named vice-chairman.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 10.—The establishment of open tennis championships in 1935 will come up for vote at the meeting of the International Lawn Tennis Association in Paris next March, it was revealed here today at the fifty-third annual gathering of delegates of the United States Lawn Tennis Association. Last year the International Federation appointed a committee to submit changes in the amateur rules to permit such events.

Louis J. Carruthers of New York was elected a delegate to the Paris meeting and he will express the views of the United States body on the subject of open tournaments, as well as numerous other proposals to come up before the International Association.

The special committee appointed last year will recommend that the question of open events be left to the standing committee of managements. If this recommendation is not adopted, it is likely that some similar plan will be decided upon, such as leaving it to each nation to decide if it wishes to hold an open event. This latter method has been used in the establishment of national amateur events, although somewhat limited in accordance with the importance of the tournament.

College Meet on Hard Courts.

After two years of study, the U. S. L. T. A. voted to play its intercollegiate championships on hard courts starting next year. A poll of 141 colleges showed 92 per cent in favor of such a move.

This will bring the event to the Middle West and it will likely be played on clay courts.

The 1934 intercollegiate championship was awarded to the Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia. It will be the fiftieth annual tournament and a special Golden Jubilee program will be carried out during the week of June 25.

The association decided that, beginning with 1935, all players participating in sanctioned tournaments for juniors, boys and girls will be required to file with their sectional or district association birth certificates or other satisfactory evidence as to their ages. Identification cards will then be issued by the secretary of the sectional association to be presented to each tournament committee.

All sanctioned events for the younger players must have an entry list of at least 12 players in singles and six teams in doubles before the U. S. L. T. A. will award medals to the winner and runner-up.

Medals for girls will be awarded this year for the first time since the tennis center events were established.

Ranking Dispute Crops Up.

In one attempt to prevent disputes relative to the national ranking of players, such as the recent one concerning the placing of George Lott of Chicago at No. 11, the association will require the Ranking Committee to submit a tentative list to the secretary of each sectional association and allow 15 days in which changes may be requested.

The Ranking Committee will then submit its final decision subject later to approval at the national meeting.

The controversy relative to the award of the national men's doubles championship was amicably settled.

Philadelphia was awarded the 1934 tournament and Boston the 1935 event, under an agreement which also included a division of net profits.

The association made a net profit of $32,000 during the year 1933 and voted to distribute $27,000 of the amount to the sectional associations. The Missouri Valley Tennis Association will receive nearly $1600 of the total refund.

Total assets of $159,933.39 were reported by the treasurer. Edward B. Moss, executive secretary, in his annual report showed the 1933 membership of the U. S. L. T. A. to be 719 individual clubs as compared to 803 in 1931, the peak year since 1929. A total of 527 tournaments were sanctioned during 1933, of which 361 were for senior players and 165 for juniors.

Cincinnati was awarded the 1935 annual meeting of the National Association. The Public Parks championship was awarded to Minneapolis on a proxy vote showing 32,000 against 9500 votes on the application of Pittsburgh.

DIVISION RACES IN MUNY SOCCER WILL END TODAY

The regular division championship races in the Municipal Soccer League will close today with the titles to be decided in two groups—Fairground No. 4 and the junior at Carondelet Park.

The closest battling of the day will in all probability come in the Fairground group in which but one team is really out of the title race. The Minit Rubs, leading the Scofields and Park Rats, by two points, play the tailend Brogans, while the Scofields and Park Rats fight it out in the other contest.

At Carondelet, the Diaz eleven, which has a lead of one point over the German Sport Club rules favorite to win the title. The Diaz team is scheduled to play St. Agnes, which has dropped 13 successive contests, while the Germans fight it out with the St. Agathas.

In the other groups it is just a matter of finishing out the season and waiting for the eliminations. Elevens which already have won a place in the series to decide the city championship, now held by the German Sport Club, follow:

Fairground No. 2, Clearys; Fairground No. 3, Doyles; Forest Park, Sunshines; Carondelet No. 1, German Sport Club; Sherman Park, Spartons, and Concordia Park, St. Hedwig. In the junior group, Holy Rosary of Fairground will fight it out with the Carondelet group for the title.

Three of the teams in the senior eliminations were in the series a year ago, the Germans, Clearys and Sunshines. The Germans defeated the Sunshines in an early round and then went on to trim the Clearys two out of three to win the title.

Fairground Park No. 2—Hartmans vs. Kelly Recreation, L. Wimer; Russells vs. Clearys, L. Robbins.
Fairground Park No. 4—Minit Rubs vs. Brogans, W. J. Rogles; Scofield and Trefferts vs. Park Rats, W. Brady.

Life Began at 40 for Bill Tilden, Who Already Had Career Behind Him

By Damon Kerby.

Does life begin at forty?

Prof. Walter B. Pitkin of Columbia University says it does, and the question was put to Bill Tilden here on the eve of his forty-first birthday. He observed the birthday yesterday.

Tilden perhaps hadn't thought much about life from that particular angle. He paced around the hotel room a moment, then placed himself comfortably in a stuffed chair, lit a cigarette and reflected:

"Well, does it?" he countered. "I've had only a year's experience since passing 40 and perhaps I'm not qualified to answer. I know I've been very busy the past year."

Did the tennis veteran plan another hard year of action? He certainly did.

"When we conclude the present tour, Vines and I will begin another tour with the Frenchmen, Cochet and Plaa. We begin action with them in New York, Feb. 19, and during the following 30 days will play 20 matches in 10 cities, extending from New York through the mid-west.

May Tour Europe.

"Immediately afterwards Vines and I will go on tour again. We are considering a playing tour of Europe, starting about April 1 and returning the last of May in time to participate in the professional championships. Then there is the possibility of an open tennis championship tournament.

"Late in the summer," continued Tilden, without drawing a breath, "we expect either to return to Europe or to go to Japan. It likely will be Japan. And even if the proposed trips abroad fall through we will be playing all the time."

It was suggested that the time would come when Tilden couldn't stand the pace—did he have any plans after giving up active play?

"Many, many plans. I have felt lately that my work is just opening up." (Fifteen-love, Prof. Pitkin.)

"There are infinite possibilities in professional tennis, if I decide to promote in a big way. Then I have two books in my head that I must write. And I've got to write them, too. It's the only way to get the plots out of my head. But when? When I find time."

And so, it appears that life—a new sort of life—may have really begun for Bill, at 40. But, judging by the pace he has been going for the past 20 years, even Prof. Pitkin might be justified in doubting if Bill's life before 40 was merely preparatory. It's a career in itself. He has been on the go all the time and is a citizen of the world. He is as much at home on the streets of Berlin, Paris, London, Melbourne and San Francisco as he is in his native Philadelphia.

Hasn't Missed a Thing.

"I don't feel that I've missed anything in my life," he said. "At least I've tried to lead a full life."

Reminded that he hadn't married, he chuckled: "I haven't been in one place long enough to marry. I'm just a wanderer. That's it. Just put me down as the 'Wanderer of the Wastelands.' "

EAST SIDE QUINTETS PLAY CHARITY GAME

The high school basketball championship of East St. Louis will be decided Tuesday evening at the Landsdowne Gymnasium, in East St. Louis, when East St. Louis High School meets Central Catholic High in the feature of the three-game program being held for the benefit of the East St. Louis Community Fund. Two other basketball games and a wrestling match will complete the program, beginning at 7:15 o'clock. The proceeds will be turned over to East Side needy.

In the preliminary basketball games the Lecces of Collinsville oppose the Summers College five of East St. Louis at 7:15 o'clock, while the Kovachs of East St. Louis meet the Granite City Pals in the second at 8:15. The feature contest is scheduled to begin at 9:15.

"CHET" GRANT TO COACH NOTRE DAME BACKS

Grant won monograms at Notre Dame in 1916, 1920 and 1921. In the intervening years, he served in the World War and played football under Pete Vaughan, present Wabash coach, at Camp Shelby, Hattiesburg, Miss.

SOFT BALL LEAGUE PLAY IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Plans are going forward for the erection of a soft-ball park in East St. Louis to be located at Twenty-third and St. Clair avenue. The park will be illuminated and will be the first of its type in East St. Louis. Parks of that description have already been built in Belleville, Wood River, Alton and Granite City.

Milton K. Harrington, Edmund Goedde, George Burnett, Victor Beaman and Leland Crank are officers of a newly formed league which will begin play as soon as the park is completed.

CLEVELAND AND SOLDAN FIVES MEET TOMORROW

The 1933-34 City High School League basketball champion may be on view tomorrow aternoon as Cleveland and Soldan battle at Roosevelt for the league lead. The game will start at 3:30 o'clock.

In a season replete with upsets, Cleveland and Soldan find themselves sharing the lead in the race, each with five victories and two defeats. Beaumont had a chance to move to the front, but the defending champions bowed before Roosevelt last week. The Bluc Jackets are in third place with one more defeat than the co-leaders have.

While past performances have not counted for much this season, yet Soldan conquered Cleveland so decisively, 28 to 11, in the first round, that the West Enders are given a good chance to take over undisputed possession of first place. But whichever team wins, Beaumont still can be counted in the race, because the Blue Jackets will oppose Cleveland this Friday and close against Soldan, Feb. 23.

The probable Cleveland-Soldan lineups:

CLEVELAND.	Pos.	SOLDAN.
Tongay	R. F.	McCabe
De Greeff	L. F.	January
Vanderford	C.	Green
Schneider	R. G.	Steimnaitz

Judge Rules That Boxing Board Can Withhold Purses

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Feb. 10.

BEN JEBY of New York, and "Gorilla" Jones of Akron, will not be paid for the boxing match they "staged" in Public Hall here last April 19.

Common Pleas Judge G. B. Harris today upheld the right of the Cleveland Boxing Commission to withhold the purses of the two men, amounting to $2443 each.

The fight was stopped in the sixth round on the ground that the boxers were "stalling." The fighters sued the commission.

STIX TEAM WILL USE RESERVES IN LEAGUE CONTEST

With an important Western semifinal in the national challenge cup competition scheduled next Sunday, the Stix, Baer & Fuller team, St. Louis' lone survivor, will give three ailing regulars a rest in this afternoon's professional league doubleheader at Sportsman's Park. The Stix are scheduled to play Phil Kavanaugh's Minit Rubs in the first game, with the Ben Millers and Andersons playing in the second. Play begins at 2 o'clock.

The three athletes who will be given a chance to recuperate from injuries suffered in the cup game with the Sons of Malta last Sunday are Werner Nilsen, Bill Watson and Willie McLean. Nilsen and Watson are complaining of leg injuries, while McLean has a bad foot.

As a result, reserves will get into the lineup against the Minit Men. Joe Dumas is scheduled to play in goal instead of Jim McGowan. In an effort to find out if Bob Greg will be of any use in the cup series, he will be given a chance to play a complete match. Bill Lehman will be pushed up from fullback to center half, a position at which he starred until two years ago, when he was converted into a defense man. Eddie Flavin is down to work at center forward. Coach Alex McNab, who early this week received word that his mother, who was 64 years of age, had died in Scotland, will take over McLean's duties, with Frankie Pastor as outside right.

The other managers plan to use their regular battle fronts in the contests, which may prove the last league matches of the campaign.

Jimmy Dunn will referee the first game, while Oscar Mossman is down to work in the second.

STEIN AND SUMMERS TRAIL DALLAS BOWLERS 14 PINS AFTER 30 GAMES

Otto Stein Jr. and Hank Summers, St. Louis star bowlers, were trailing Dick Robbins and Nelson Burton of Dallas, Tex., 14 pins after the third block of their 40-game match was concluded at the Washington Alleys last night.

The final 10-game block will be rolled at the Mid-Town at 8 o'clock tonight.

Coming from Dallas with a four-pin lead, Texan added 10 more in their first block on the local alleys.

The score:

Stein 243 195 203 213 231 228 223 247 249 211—2243.

On their way back from the first half of their match, Stein and Summers engaged in two singles matches at Oklahoma City, Ok., where Summers won from A. Scott by eight pins in a five-game match and Stein lost to Kent Spellman by two pins.

THIS WEEK'S SCHEDULE.

Tonight—OKLAHOMA CITY AT ST. LOUIS.

Tuesday—Oklahoma City at Kansas City.

Wednesday—ST. LOUIS AT TULSA.

Thursday—Tulsa at Kansas City.

Friday—ST. LOUIS AT OKLAHOMA CITY.

Sunday—KANSAS CITY AT ST. LOUIS; Oklahoma City at Tulsa.

By W. J. McGoogan

In a battle for possession of second place in the American Hockey Association race, the St. Louis Flyers meet the Oklahoma City Warriors at the Arena tonight. Each of the teams has won 13 games this season and each is credited with 26 points.

The Flyers, victors in the three games they have played here since last Sunday night, will have an opportunity to record their longest winning streak of the season, for another victory would be their fourth in succession. The best run they have enjoyed previously was three in a row.

The game will be the last the team plays at home until next Sunday night, when Kansas City calls at the Arena. After tonight the Flyers have but seven home games remaining on their schedule, with 12 abroad.

The Road and Big Bad Bob.

As the club has been woefully weak on the road—in common with most other hockey teams — the players would like to win tonight to help offset the trouble they fear is coming away from their home ice.

Wednesday night the Flyers play at Tulsa, then move to Oklahoma City for a game Friday night.

Official individual scoring marks issued from league headquarters at Kansas City yesterday show that Pete Palangio was still leading the league with 21 points up to Thursday morning, with Paddy Paddon one point behind. But as Paddon added two points to his record Thursday night, that would indicate that he is leading right now, with 22 points to Palangio's 21.

Unofficial records here had credited Paddon and Palangio each with 21 points.

In any event, these two left wings have been waging a struggle for leadership, with Paddon going like a house afire in the last three games, in which he has counted eight points

Two Fine Forward Lines.

The Flyers' two forward lines which Coach Al Hughes arranged for last Sunday night's game have functioned smoothly and will, of course, be continued. McPherson at center, Dunfield at right wing and Paddon at left make up one line, while the other is composed of Hughes, center; Gordon Teel, right wing, and Palangio, left wing.

Rollie Huard, who has been out of the game for some time with a broken bone in his left hand, may get into tonight's contest for a short time and if his hand seems well enough, he will be taken away with the team, otherwise he will be left here to give the injury a further chance to heal.

Oklahoma City always affords plenty of opposition with some fast skaters among its forwards and sturdy defense men in Helge Bostrom and MacKinnon. Bobby Burns, speedy Warrior forward who played a few games with St. Louis last season, is also a candidate for scoring honors. Burns had scored 17 points up to Thursday and ranked fourth in the league.

Coach Dick Carroll of Oklahoma City is a former coach of the Flyers and, as usual, has gathered together a good team which has showed its power on several occasions this season, but at the same time evidenced the same need as the Flyers—continued play together.

Unions Play Waverlys.

The Unions, leaders in the East St. Louis Municipal Soccer League, face the Waverly A. C. in the feature game at Jones Park this afternoon. In the other contest the Eltringhams meet the Sanitary eleven

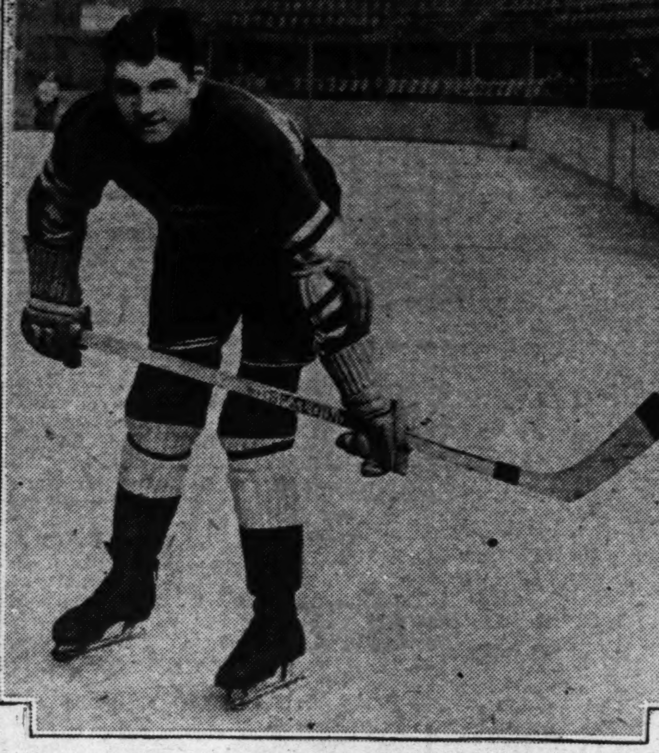
Passes Palangio in Scoring



PADDY PADDON,

Paddon and Pete Palangio, Flyer left wings, have been waging a battle for first place in scoring in the American Hockey Association and latest averages just released show that Paddon has taken the lead over Palangio by one point.

WITHIN little more than a fortnight, March 1, the first major outdoor sports season for Missouri in 1934 will be ushered in with the start of the trout fishing season. Already trout anglers are making preparations for this annual event, sporting goods dealers and tackle repairers say.

Because of the close proximity of the trout season's opening, veteran anglers are now assembling and checking their equipment urging the novice do likewise so that the last minute rush will find him not unprepared. A veteran Ozark sportsman has suggested the following preparation be made by all those who have even the most remote idea of getting out on the trout streams early in the season:

> Carefully check the fly rod. Likely it will need revarnishing. Be sure the guides are clean and polished. Carefully check the ferrule joints to see if they are secure and not corroded.
> Clean and oil the reel. Unless the automatic action reel is used, this task usually can be dismissed quickly.
> The fly line is one of the principal items to consider. If there is any doubt about the line in hand, discard it and start the season with a new, safe one. The line need not be heavy; better usually that it is light and matched with the weight of the fly rod.
> Usually a new supply of gut for leaders is needed, although if the old supply has been carefully preserved through the winter, it may yet be in condition for use.
> Flies need to be checked very carefully. Moths and rust can wreck the best of flies. Points should be clean and sharp.

Although the percentage of trout fishermen in Missouri as compared to bass and other game fishermen is small there are nevertheless several hundred veteran trout fishermen. These largely reside in Kansas City and St. Louis, although each smaller city within easy motoring distance of the Ozarks has its group of trout fishing enthusiasts.

Considering the activitities of the State Game and Fish Department, fishing conditions and sites in general, those who are familiar with the trout situation in Missouri indicate that the best fishing of the season will be available at Montauk State Park in Dent County. There, starting below the trout sanctuary near the springs which flow into Pigeon Creek, to a point more than 30 miles downstream on Current River one will find some of the best trout fishing water in the Ozarks. Because of the great amount of activity about the CCC camp in the heart of the State park most fishermen likely will prefer to fish downstream.

A few miles below the park, Ashley Creek flows into Current River. This stream offers much to the bass fisherman, but is little fished during the summer months because of the great numbers of cottonmouth moccasins reported to be observed along this stream. Those who know this stream usually do not pass up an opportunity to whip it a bit as they move along down Current River.

Roaring River, which starts in Roaring River State Park in Barry County, offers about six miles of trout fishing water before it flows into the White River.

Bennett Spring in Dallas and Laclede Counties furnishes a limited amount of trout fishing water, but the usual great crowds to this place on the opening day are expected. A record number of applications for accommodations at this park have been received, park authorities say.

State hatchery officials say all three parks will offer good fishing if the number of trout released at each place is any indication.

The new road condition map and bulletin now being issued weekly by the Missouri State Highway Commission is considered the most complete of its kind yet made available to Missourians. The map not only shows the road conditions from week to week, but all of the principal fishing streams and lakes, the state parks and other points of interest. This map is published on a subscription basis while the State Game and Fish Department map of the outdoors, long a favorite with Missouri sportsmen, may be had for the asking.

The Nonpartisan League is the newest pro-game commission organization in Missouri. It was organized recently at Springfield. The Missouri Fish, Forest League which has its headquarters in Kansas City, also has been advocating a game commissionership for the state.

It is believed that the fox hunters of Missouri have the largest and most widespread organization of any outdoor sports group in the State. There is a local chapter in almost every county in Missouri.

Considerable interest is being aroused among Missouri conservationists in the soils use conference to be held at Columbia late this month. There many phases of game management as a soils use for this State are expected to be discussed. It has been indicated from high official authorities that considerable of the proposed marginal lands to be reclaimed by the Government will include wild life management projects.

The gigging season closed Feb. 1 and will remain closed until June 1. The game fish season, excepting for trout, will close April 1 and remain closed until Decoration day.

Pearl fishing will be banned after March 1 until July 1. Little pearl fishing is done in Missouri waters nowadays, however. Formerly much pearling was done along the White, Black and St. Francis rivers. Occasionally today even finds of pearls valued at several hundred dollars are reported

PAULINO SIGNS FOR BOUT WITH MAX SCHMELING

By the Associated Press.

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, Feb. 10.—Paulino Uzcudun, Basque heavyweight, signed a contract today to box Max Schmeling, former champion, 15 rounds in Barcelona early in April in the most ambitious fight promotion Spain has ever attempted.

Arrangements are being made to seat 100,000 in the Montjuich stadium with admission prices scaled from approximately $1 to $15.

Paulino, who was beaten once by Schmeling in New York, in 1929, is believed to have been guaranteed $13,000 with a privilege of 17 per cent of the gross receipts. The Barcelona Syndicate, backing the promotion, plans to run cheap special trains into the city from all over Spain.

Signing of Paulino for the Schmeling match ends the race between the German heavyweight and Primo Carnera, giant Italian world champion, to get to the Basque first after fulfilling their present American obligations. Carnera twice has beaten Paulino, once in Barcelona and again in Rome last summer.

A short time ago, Carnera announced that he had agreed to a match with Paulino in Buenos Aires, Argentina, in March or April, the date conflicting with Schmeling's match with the Spaniard in Barcelona. Carnera defends his heavyweight title against Tommy Loughran in Miami, Feb. 22.

3713 SCORE BY ST. PAUL TEAM IS APPROVED BY A.B.C. OFFICIAL

Crashing the setups for games of 1203, 1282 and 1228, the Hamms, stellar St. Paul lineup, set a new world's mark of 3713 in topping the International Bowling Honor Roll for the fourth consecutive week. The Twin City Classic league team bettered its former world's mark, rolled the week previous, by a margin of 77 pins.

The St. Paul quint has not been under the 3500 mark for the past four weeks and the sensational shooting stands out as the greatest in bowling history. True, the Hamm lineup has rolled the totals on one pair of drives, but Judge John L. Rounds, St. Paul American Bowling Congress executive committeeman, has checked the alleys and found them to measure up to American Bowling Congress specifications. His report to Elmer Baumgarten, A. B. C. secretary, follows:

"Both of the record scores were made on No. 15 and No. 16 at the Harkins alleys in St. Paul. The Classic League in the Twin Cities bowls home and home in Minneapolis and St. Paul and the teams pick their home alleys, with no requirement that they use more than one pair. Hence, the Hamms, at home are always on the same pet planks.

All Use Same Delivery.

"All of the Hamm members use the same delivery. The balls act as nearly alike as those rolled by five different men can act. The No. 15-16 alleys are perfectly suited to their delivery—"naturals" for them.

"The two alleys meet all A. B. C. requirements as to kickbacks, gutters, alley pits, etc.

"The alleys were resurfaced and crossplaned last August.

"The pins used in the last four series, in which the Hamms got 3554, 3532, 3636 and 3713, were weighed and proved to be regulation three-pound four-ounce wood."

Ragogna Proves Big Star.

Ossie Ragogna again led the terrific strike spree. He opened with 254, missed 300 in the second game by one pin when the No. 10 pin refused to fall on the last ball and wound up with 268 and an 821 total, highest three-game series ever recorded in the Northwest.

The series:

Metcalf	237	232	202—	671
Ragogna	254	299	268—	821
Voges	232	246	277—	755
Harkins	256	226	257—	739
Evans	224	279	224—	729
Totals	1203	1282	1228—	3713

Cleveland Star Rolls 830.

Walter Ward, Cleveland pin ace, let loose a barrage on the maples which resulted in a sizzling 830 total. His scores of 285, 278 and 267 were easily the best individual scores of the nation for league or tournament play for the week. His series was rolled with the Barski Cubs in the Garfield Heights "A" loop.

St. Louis teams and individuals did well during the week, no fewer than 12 teams and eight individuals gaining a place in the "honor roll." The Chas. Krons paced the teams with 3321, good enough to gain fourth place, while the Gus Krons, with 3260 finished sixth. Other high totals were: Lamberts 3197 and 3109; St. Louis Dairies 3172, Gus Krons 3143, Windler-Neimanns 3134, Silver Seals 3136, St. Anthonys 3134, Alexanders 3124, Say It With Flowers 3111 and Schmitts 3103.

Ticket Sale for A.A.U. Tourneys to Open Tomorrow

An early rush of inquiries regarding tickets has prompted local officials of the National A. A. U. Boxing Committee to announce that the sale of tickets both for the Western A. A. U. event to be held at the Arena on March 16 and the national senior championships to be held in the same location on April 4, 5 and 6, will be launched tomorrow.

They will be obtainable, therefore, at the A. A. U. headquarters here at 809 Pine street and reservations also will be accepted at the New Century Cigar Store in East St. Louis.

Decision to put the pasteboards on the market so early was reached yesterday afternoon at a meeting called by the local boxing committee and which was attended by all persons interested in the two pending amateur tournaments.

Other subjects pertaining to both events were discussed and those members and friends of the A. A. U. who have volunteered their services gratis in the drive to raise $4000 to partly defray the expenses of the national championships were given final instructions.

Prices of tickets for the two tournaments, except for some boxes to be sold at the national event are the same. These latter, of which there will be a limited number, according to Kessler, will be disposed of a $2.30 a seat. The fee on the other seats for both events range from 40 cents to $1.65.

The young men's division of the Chamber of Commerce has promised its support.

ANNOUNCEMENTS written on red Valentine scrolls and drawn from a moss-grown wishing well, yesterday disclosed the engagement of Miss Virginia Louise Zirnheld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene J. Zirnheld, 6428 Cecil avenue, and Albert William Albrecht Jr. The well, its base and uprights garlanded with flowers and tiny ferns, formed the centerpiece for the luncheon table at a party given by Mrs. Zirnheld at Hotel Coronado for 22 of her daughter's friends.

The place cards were double hearts. On one was written the name of the guest, and on the other was a verse reading "There is a secret none can tell, 'til it is found in the bottom of the well." Red ribbons attached the cards to the scrolls, on which were inscribed "Deep within the wishing well comes the 'we' note of a wedding bell" and the names of Miss Zirnheld and her fiance on hearts painted near the edge.

Miss Zirnheld, who is a twin sister of Miss Dorothy Zirnheld, is a graduate of Hosmer Hall and Christian College, Columbia, Mo. Later she attended Washington University, and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

Mr. Albrecht is a graduate of Western Military Academy, Alton, Ill., where he was valedictorian of his class, and attended Washington University. His travels include three trips to Alaska, where he has spent as many summers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.

OWEN DAVIS JR. is by way of being one of the more dashing young men about town. The of the distinguished dramatist, is himself a personable juvenile d knows almost every one who is y one in Times Square, to judge om the salutations he acknowldges along Forty-fifth street. hen not himself playing he is an evitable first nighter, his dark red outonniere serving as an orilamme where the ermine is thickst and the starched shirts the leamingest. He maintains a smart partment at the Dorset, dines out very night of the week and falls and out of love every fortnight. is inseparably associated in our nd with the crystal and flowers nd gold plate of dinner parties, ith good conversation and sparking wine in foil-topped bottles.

He tells how once his father, who perhaps the most fecund of playrights and has several hundred ramas to his credit, was asked uring rehearsals to revise the last ct of the play in production. The enior Davis sat in an orchestra eat, busy with pencil and paper, as the players went through their parts, and after an hour or so the director came over and asked if he had finished rewriting the act. "The act, oh, my gosh," said the great man. "I forgot all about it nd went and wrote a whole new play."

THE really aristocratic motor cars of the town, connoisseurs of such things agree, are not he enormous and shiny importaions from England, Belgium or taly, but the three or four little old Brewster and Renault coupes with tiny motor bonnets and sweeping low mud guards like those of a victoria. Mrs. Alvin Untermeyer has one of them, built 20 years ago at a cost of twenty-odd thousands of dollars, and, with its black and purple liveried men on the box, it s easily the smartest automobile n the boulevards. There are a uple of others like it but none ite so immaculately appointed. hen there is the sleek, streamlined edan of Pierre Cartier, the jewler, who designed it himself with ll the care and minute precision f detail he would lend to the ounting of fine diamonds or emeralds. It is a paradigm of implicit peed and svelt luxury. A. C. Blumenthal, Peggy Fears' husband, has the longest of all Rolls Royces. It black, with yellow basketwork, nd a crystal fgure on the radiator ap. Ex-Mayor Walker used to borrow it for special state occaions. Personally, we prefer Paddy Rafferty's black hansum kerriage ith bright red high wheels. It is s beautifully kept as a battle uiser, and is far and away the ost distinctive vehicle in all New ork.

THE old Grand Dukes of Russia were the most lavish entertainers of modern times and were reputed to smash more glass in an evening than was shattered throughout the rest of the world. The straitened circumstances of exiled nobility and the times themelves combine to prevent any such ay goings on as were characterisic of the restaurants of St. Petersurg before the catastrophe, but all that the Russian Assembly Supper Club, which meets every Friday evening, is a far from dolorus organization.

Its members foregather at the Caucasian Eagle, in East Fifty-fifth street, and from midnight till breakfast there are fine Russian music, some really splendid Slavic dancing, a deal of vodka hoisting and brave doings generally. The Count Vassili Adlerberg heads the list of patrons, and last week we observed at the ringside Prince Paul Chavchavadze, Prince Dolly Obolensky, Miss Hope Iselin, Prince Cyril Scherbatoff and Prince George Matchabelli, perfumer extraordinary to the town. Prince Serge Obolensky did some impromptu dancing atop a table, and number of the singers found the tire assemblage roaring out faliar old Russian choruses with them. There was even a little smashing of glass, but this was only incidental. Hilarious nostalgia was the order of the evening, tempered with the decorum of tail coats and sables.

Miss Katharine Hepburn, star of Jed Harris' "The Lake" is one of the fancier exhibits of the Broadway season and, justly or otherwise, is credited with a wealth of emperament. In order that her ood may not be shattered by cont with crude mechanicians or inor players backstage, she is reported to have had a protecting canopy arranged from her dressing room to the wings of the stage set for her initial nightly entry.

MURRAY HILL has hitherto lacked any of the more modern types of refreshment chalets permitted by the New Dispensation. The old Belmont is part of history, and neither the Murray Hill Hotel nor the agreeable but somewhat stiff Vanderbilt seemed to attract the town's youth for cocktails or after-theater rarebit and champagne. The Tuscany has now come to the rescue of the quarter with one of the smart and really handsomely appointed cafes of the city. With great good sense the management borrowed Ted Saucier, blicity executive extraordinary from the Waldorf for its opening, which was of the gayest order. At one table we observed Karl K. Kitchen, Odd McIntyre, Peppy D'Albrew and Walter Chrysler Jr. over a fragrant assortment of cocktails and canapes, while Gretta Palmer and Mrs. Harry Rickenbacker took sherry at the bar. It was a nice if noisy opening and, if it could be taken as an index, would augur a bright future.

Do as your dentist does— when he cleans your teeth

Powder Cleans and Whitens Teeth—as nothing else can Outlasts Tooth Paste 2 to 1

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleamingly white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

● Dull Teeth Become White

Dentists everywhere recommend Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, because—teeth simply cannot remain dull and film coated when it is used.

It cleans off all stains and tartar, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter.

● No Grit—No Pumice

Free from all grit or pumice, Dr. Lyon's cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel, as years of constant use have shown.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums, freedom from pyorrhea and the least possible tooth decay.

● Lasts Longer—Costs Less

Once you use Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, you will never be satisfied to use anything else. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Dr. Lyon's is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

SCOUT FUND CAMPAIGN TO OPEN MARCH 5

Organization Dinner to Be Given Tomorrow at Second Presbyterian Church.

The first step in the Boy Scout campaign for funds which will be held next month takes place tomorrow night when 75 of the older scouts will attend an organization dinner at Second Presbyterian Church, Taylor avenue and Westminster place. These scouts will form a group which will give three-minute talks in St. Louis churches on Scout Sunday, March 4.

The scouts will get some coaching in public speaking tomorrow night from high school debating coaches who will attend the dinner. The Rev. J. W. MacIvor, pastor of the church, will make the principal speech. Scout officials from headquarters will instruct the boys in the facts they should know about the finances of the council.

The campaign for funds will begin on March 5 and will close on March 14, when a victory dinner will be held. Reports on the progress of the drive will be made several times during the week by the canvassers. The scouts were formerly members of the Community Fund but are not now.

The campaign for funds will be the second large mobilization of the scouts in the city this year. Yesterday they gathered at the Fox Theater to hear an address by President Roosevelt over the radio in which he enlisted their aid in a "national good turn."

Troop Notes

Troop 57, Wyman School, held a parents night last Friday at which the scouts put on a program under the direction of Scoutmaster Doyen and Assistant Scoutmaster Muchmore. Merle D. Shippey, camping director, gave his illustrated talk on the Irondale Reservation.

Eugene B. Kelly is the new scoutmaster of Troop 77, which meets at Tower Place Presbyterian Church. Harry Heuermann is the new leader of Troop 97, St. Agnes Catholic Church.

Troop 160, Emanuel Methodist Episcopal Church, has discarded the idea of patrols and is now organized into two tribes, one under the leadership of an assistant scoutmaster.

The Senior Scout Service Club of Troop 75, which is composed of scouts of star rank or higher, held an outing at Deuces Wild Club on the Big River near Eureka, Mo., recently. The outing was the first of a series for the club.

Troop 98, St. Roch's Catholic Church, put on a program for the scouts of Macon, Mo., in the Macon High School auditorium last Saturday. Included in the program were selections by the troop choir, the troop's play, "Mightier Than the Sword," several short skits and scout demonstrations.

Troop 14, Alhambra Grotto, performed the investiture ceremony for Troop 249, Mason School, last Friday. That night members of the troop also presented the colors at the Ladies' Auxiliary meeting at the Grotto.

Orville Brauss, John DeRities, Frank Giese, Bruce Morris, and Franklin Knight were invested into troop 114, Baden School, at a court of honor held last Friday night. Service stars were presented as follows: Russell Burbach, Ralph Kinder, Robert Murry, Jack Rice, Sam Jones, Herman Nix, Pete Sheehan, and James Werner, one year; James Brown, Earl Hubbman, Robert Knight and Bill Wachsler, two years; Ernest Muth, three years; Gene Thomas and Douglas Willott, four years; Woodrow DeNomy, Leonard Richman, and Harry Wachsler, five years; and Maurice Brouse, seven years. Ten scouts were advanced in rank and 10 received merit badges.

Webster Groves Troop 14, South Webster Sunday School, celebrated its tenth anniversary last Sunday with a troop court of honor presided over by Scoutmaster Kenneth M. Coggeshall, who was presented with a 10-year veteran's badge and the Scoutmaster's key. Five Scouts received the eagle badge and every Scout in the troop was presented with some achievement award. More than 200 parents and friends attended.

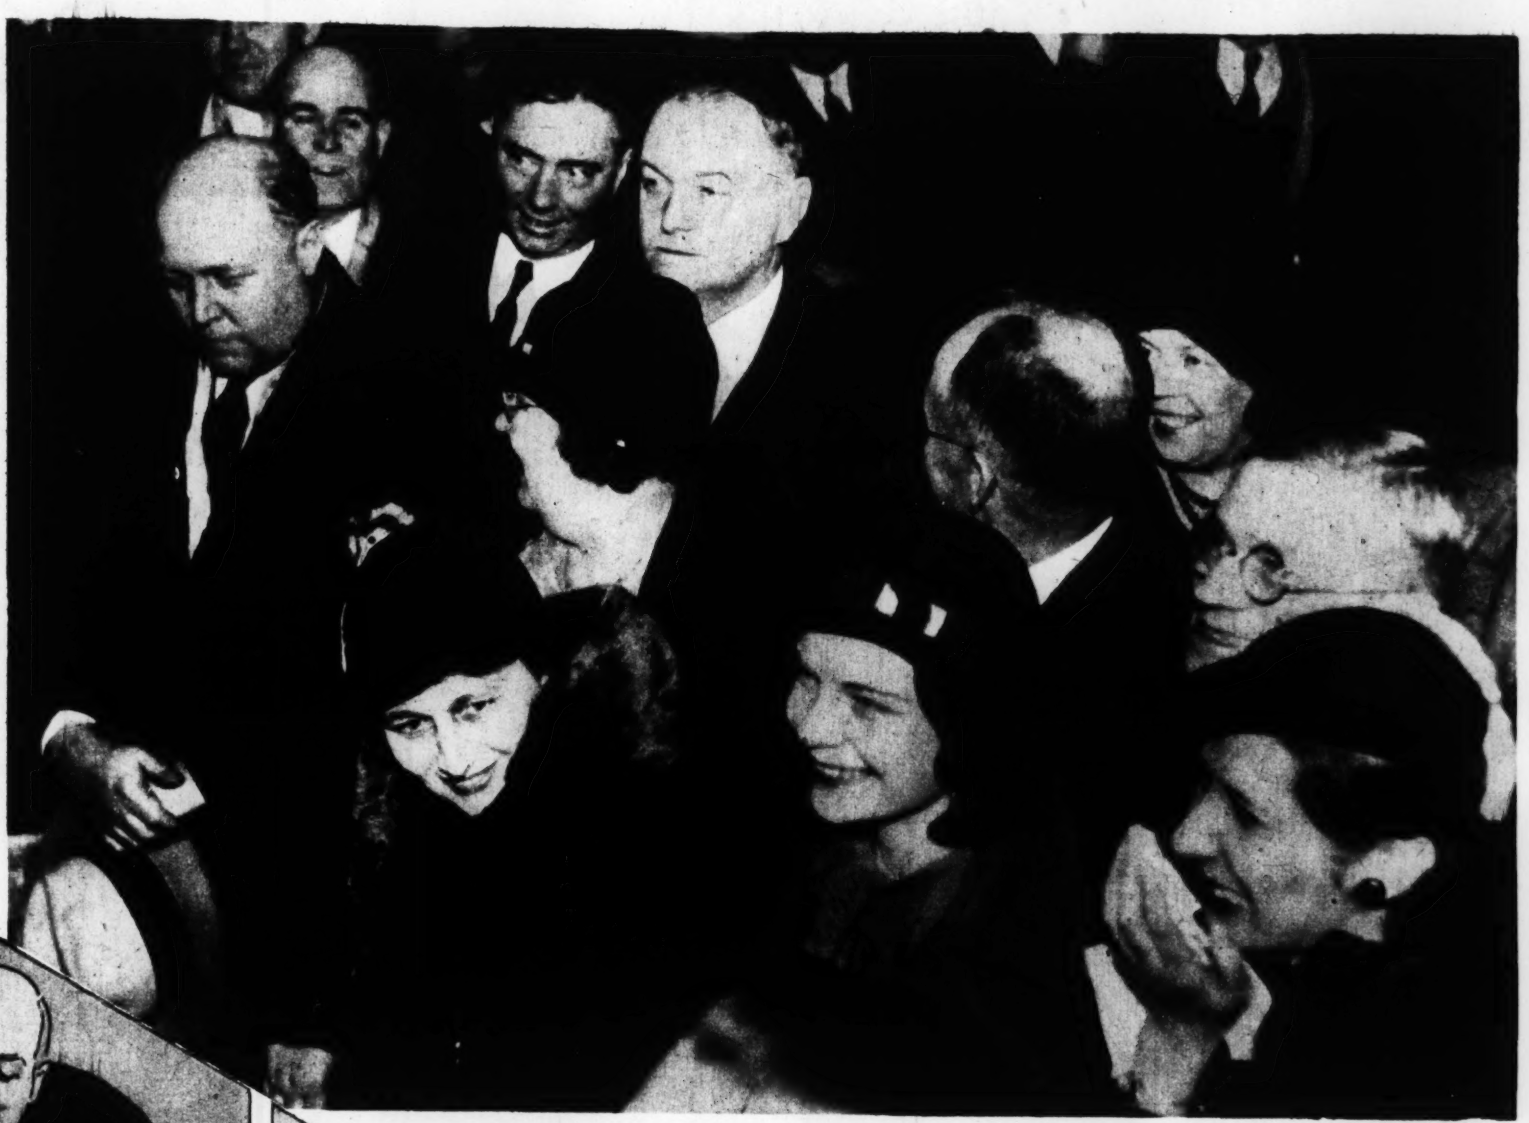
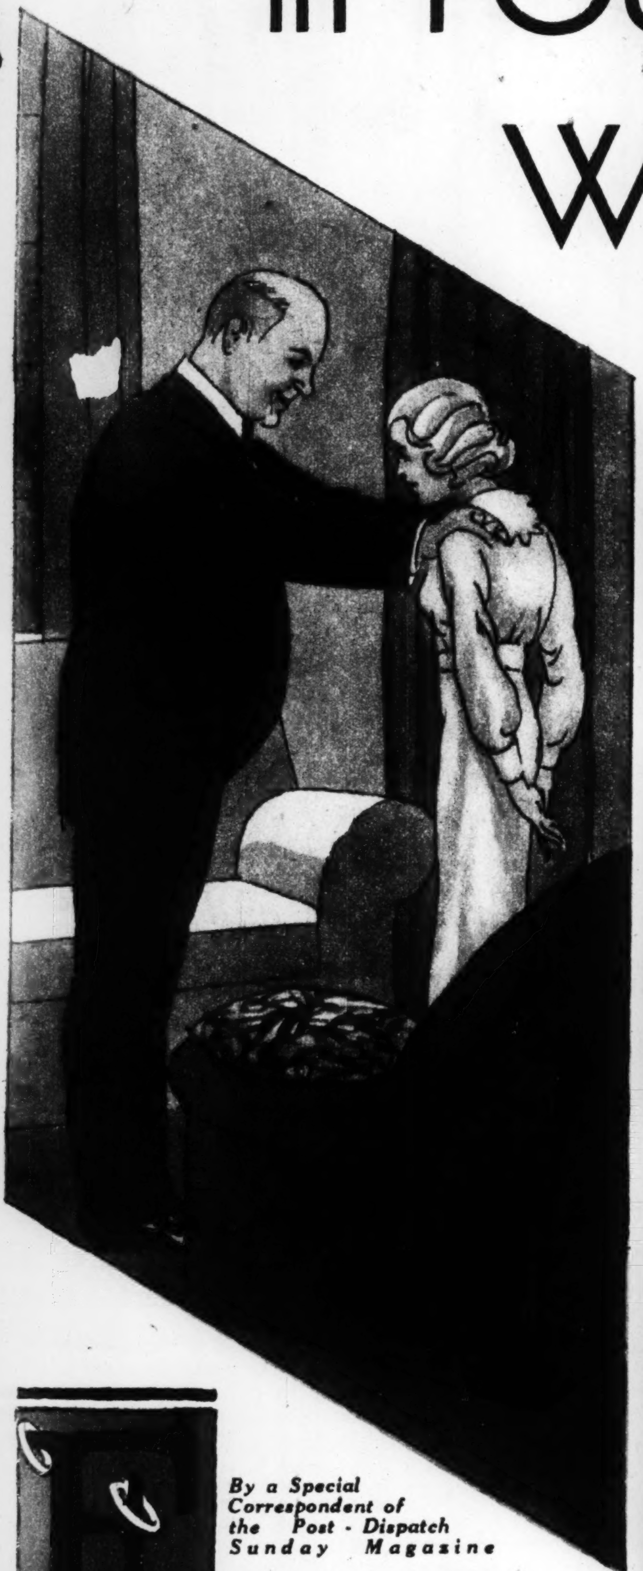
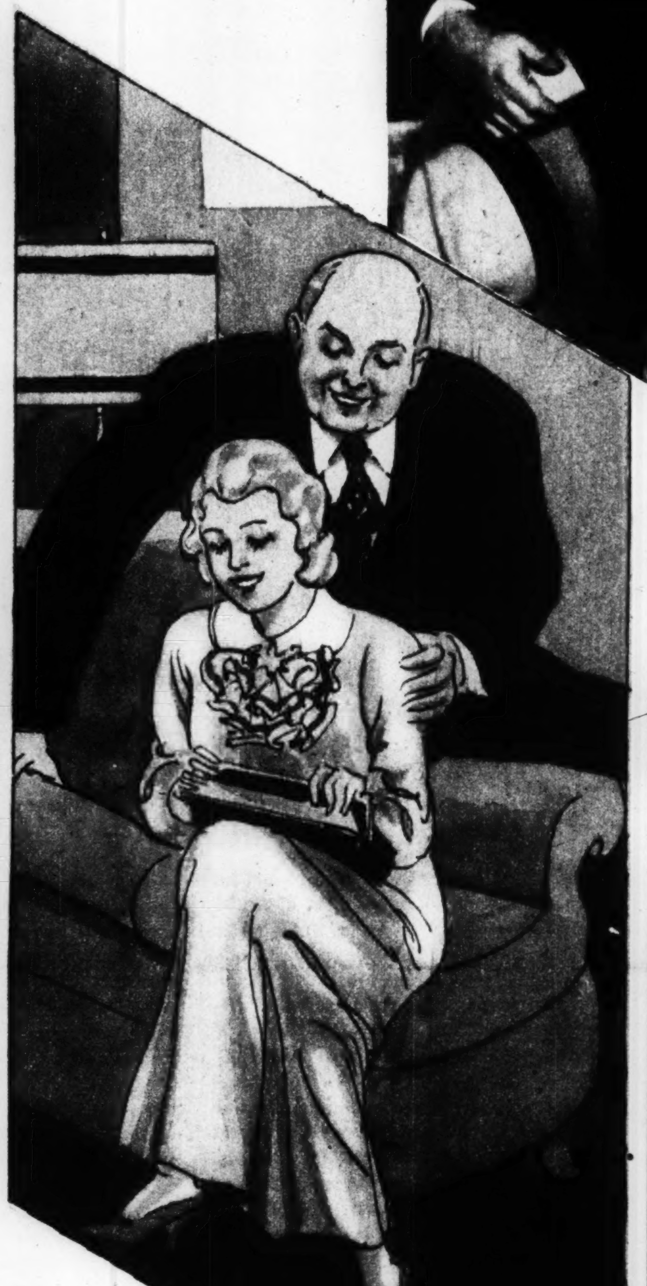
FOUR WIVES in FOUR WEEKS

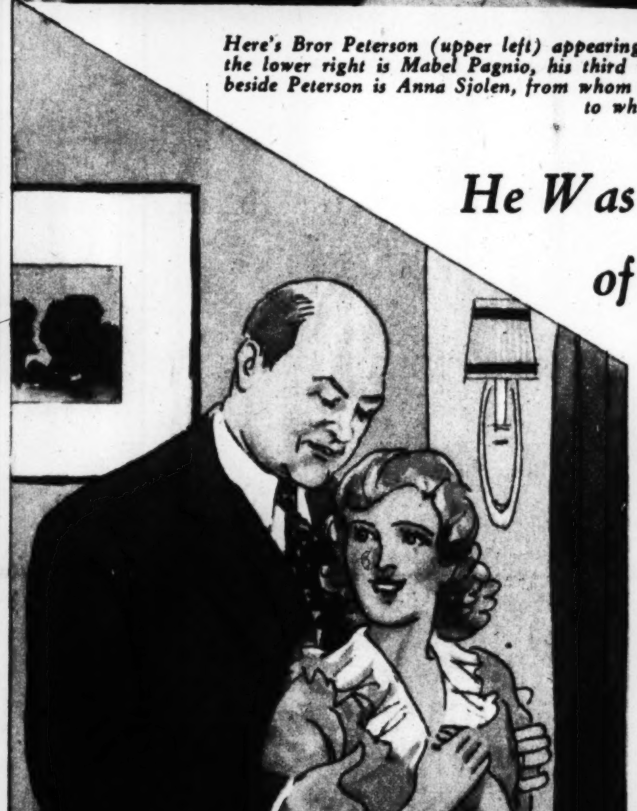


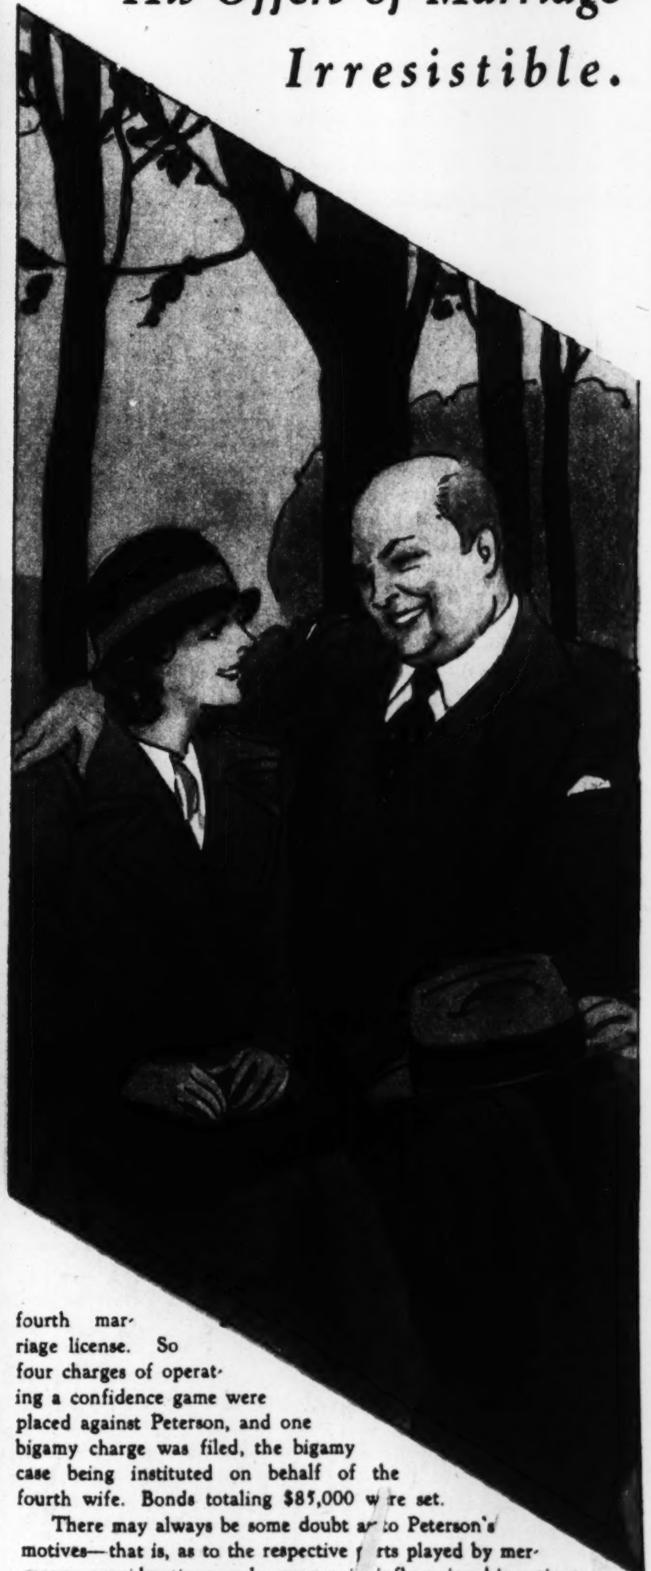
Here's Bror Peterson (upper left) appearing in court to answer charges of bigamy and swindling . . . At the lower right is Mabel Pagnio, his third wife, and beside her is Lydia Fagas, his fourth . . . Standing beside Peterson is Anna Sjolen, from whom he borrowed money, and in front of her is Mabelle Carlson, to whom he was also indebted.

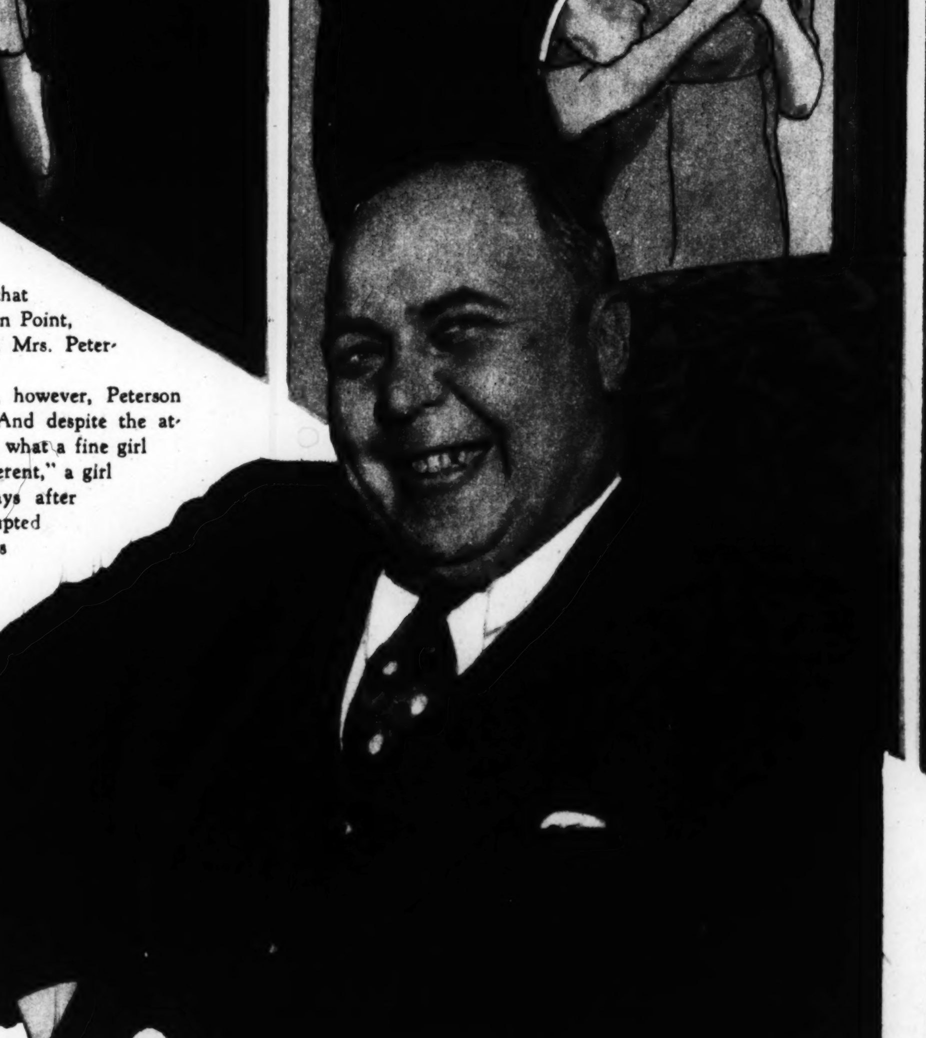
He Was a Fat Romeo, But His Tales of a Castle in Sweden Made His Offers of Marriage Irresistible.











Here's Bror Peterson himself, the roly-poly Lothario, who found it absurdly easy to marry four pretty women in as many weeks.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

CHICAGO.

FOUR wives in four weeks may be some kind of a record for a monogamous country, and perhaps Bror Peterson can extract some consolation from that. Mr. Peterson probably needs some consolation, having been thrown in jail to await trial on five charges.

It seems that Peterson neglected to free himself legally from one set of marital ties before assuming another; that he had three new domestic establishments at one time and conducted two honeymoons simultaneously.

It was not the wives, however, who delivered Peterson into the hands of the law, but a man who complained of an unpaid debt He said he had advanced the money for one of the wedding banquets and had not been reimbursed.

Looking at Peterson, and at the four women he married, one would naturally wonder how he managed it. The four wives are young—between 22 and 25 years old—and pretty. Peterson is 44, fat and bald—hardly suited to the role of great lover. In addition, he conducted his courtships under the handicap of a shortage of funds.

The explanation apparently is that Peterson was able to invest himself with glamour and arouse hopes of future wealth with a story about an estate in Sweden. This lure was so potent, he says, that he could have led a dozen young women to the altar. The inference is that he really showed some restraint in marrying only four times a month.

THIS is the way, Peterson says, he went about finding his brides: "I'd meet some young fellow and tell him about my estate in Sweden. I could collect it only if I had a wife, I'd say. Then I would offer him $100 if he would find me a good girl who would marry me." Once acquainted with a prospective bride, Peterson pushed on to matrimony with remarkable speed.

"I didn't make much love to the girls I married," he relates. "It wasn't necessary. A man doesn't need to make love to a woman if he plans to marry her." And he says he didn't give them anything but love and I. O. U.'s. To each bride he gave a promissory note for $500, payable as soon as he could collect his Swedish inheritance.

Peterson came to Chicago last fall. He had lived in New York for a number of years, and before that in Gothenberg, Sweden. In New York he had worked as an inspector for the Interborough Lines, but also, according to police, had got into trouble once by tricking a former district attorney out of $250. It was said he had been known as Herman and Robert Peterson as well as Bror Peterson.

Landing in Chicago broke and jobless, Peterson cast about for a means of keeping himself fed, sheltered and clothed—and hit on the idea of marriage. Early in October he set out to find a wife; before Thanksgiving he had accumulated four.

The first of the series of brides was Magdalena (sometimes called Madeline) Rush. She was introduced to Peterson on October 9. He told her about his Swedish inheritance, explaining that he would have to be married to make good his claim to it. They were married November 1.

The match did not turn out successfully, and Peterson was soon on the lookout for another wife. This time he chose Loretta La Rue, and 17 days after his previous matrimonial venture they called at the Cook County marriage license bureau.

For two weeks the newlyweds lived, apparently quite happily, in an apartment near Wrigley Field, where the Cubs stage their games with visiting baseball teams. But before the two weeks were over Peterson had acquired another bride. Only six days, in fact, after he and Loretta had made their nuptial vows, he was introduced to Mabel Pagnio, and seven hours after that meeting Mabel was on the way to Crown Point, Indiana, with him to become the third Mrs. Peterson. They made the trip in a taxicab.

The day before the third wedding, however, Peterson had met a girl named Lydia Fagas. And despite the attractiveness of Mabel, he couldn't forget what a fine girl Lydia had seemed to be—cheerful, "different," a girl with "the home spirit." So, two days after the return from Crown Point, he interrupted the third honeymoon to take Miss Fagas to the Cook County bureau for a marriage license.

Of course, this sort of thing couldn't go on indefinitely. The end came one day when a couple of police detectives took Peterson into custody. They arrested him, it is interesting to note, not on the complaint of one of the wives, but at the instance of Sam Gessler, a former Lincoln Park commissioner, who said he had advanced $190 to pay for the food and drink consumed at the banquet Peterson gave in Loretta La Rue, and had not been repaid.

Peterson was not at the honor of his marriage to apartment of his fourth wife when the detectives called, but Lydia, incensed by what the officers had to tell her about Peterson's doings said she would help them find him.

"He tells me that he works nights," she said, "but he's got another wife named Mabel whom he tells he works days. The very idea! A fat, 44-year-old fellow going on two honeymoons at once!"

Mabel Pagnio, wife No. 3, also had some harsh things to say about the wedding addict. "That old philanderer!" she said. "I thought if I married him I would be sitting on top of the world. I had been out of a job, and when he told me about his estate, it sounded big enough to reach from here to Europe. But he had to be married in 15 days or lose it all, he told me."

Mabel and Lydia expressed their indignation again when they visited their mutual husband in the police station where he was locked up. "Let's see if he can take it," jeered Lydia, and she stripped off her 10-cent wedding ring and tossed it at him. "I'm with you," said Mabel, and off came her ring. Peterson tossed the rings back. "Keep 'em, girls," he said. "Let's have no hard feelings." But the girls refused to be mollified.

Questioning of the four wives after Peterson's arrest elicited the information that they had advanced small amounts of money to keep him going until he could return to Sweden and collect his patrimony. One said she had paid the taxicab fare from Chicago to Crown Point. Another reported she had advanced the money for the fourth marriage license. So four charges of operating a confidence game were placed against Peterson, and one bigamy charge was filed, the bigamy case being instituted on behalf of the fourth wife. Bonds totaling $85,000 were set.

There may always be some doubt as to Peterson's motives—that is, as to the respective parts played by mercenary considerations and romance in influencing his actions. If he sought merely financial aid, it seems strange that he didn't pay his court to women who could supply it in ample measure. It is possible there may have been many well-to-do, though older women, who would have listened eagerly to his story of a castle in Sweden, welcomed his attentions, espoused him and placed at his disposal enough money to assure him of a quite luxurious winter. True mercenaries wouldn't balk at a double chin or a few wrinkles in such circumstances.

But Peterson chose young women, lissom and pretty—but not very affluent—for his matrimonal partners. There is evidence in that that the romantic side of his nature refused to succumb to his financial desires. Apparently he preferred a little money and romance to a good deal of money and no heart interest.

Looking back over his marriage spree, Peterson speaks with particular wistfulness of his fourth bride. "Lydia, the last one, was a pip," he says. "I was seeking perfection and I found it. I had meant to annul my other marriages and settle down with her. But, alas, she did not understand."

RUSSIA—the country WITHOUT a DOCTOR'S BILL

A COUNTRY without a doctor's bill! To the average American that sounds like Utopia, an ideal state never to be realized so long as human beings are human. Yet Soviet Russia, according to the testimony of two skilled and impartial observers, one English and one American, has practically reached that goal.

What is more, the general level of health in this vast country in which medicine has been socialized is raised far above the 1914 level and even approaches the standard of countries that did not have to struggle under Russia's handicap of backwardness, such as England and the United States.

The doctors in Russia are state officials. The only exceptions are a few survivors of the old regime who still engage in private practice. The latter would constitute considerably less than 10 per cent of all the medical treatment administered. The emphasis is upon the health and well-being of the individual, apart from the profit that may accrue to the doctor from the individual's health.

This is the opinion of Sir Arthur Newsholme, distinguished British public health leader, and John Adams Kingsbury, formerly Commissioner of Public Charities of New York City and now secretary and executive officer of the Milbank Memorial Fund, which is especially devoted to the field of public health. Together they have written "Red Medicine" which has just been published by Doubleday, Doran. The book is based on an extensive investigation which Newsholme and Kingsbury made in Russia on a tour which took them from one end of the country to the other.

Throughout the two authors have tried to set down what they observed and the facts and statistics they gathered objectively, quite apart from their own prejudices and opinions. Newsholme was particularly fitted to write such a book, as he has done thorough studies of the relation between private and state medicine in the leading countries of Europe, studies which have received wide attention. Here is a summary of the present status of the doctor in Soviet Russia:

"An essential difference between the practice of medicine in the U. S. S. R. and in capitalist countries is that every doctor is a State official, and in most instances is exclusively so. A few doctors, especially older doctors, still retain some private individual practice; but their number is diminishing, and practically all the younger doctors are exclusively officials of the State.

"Each State doctor is expected to work six or six and one-half hours each working day for the State. Every fifth day he has complete cessation from work. If he is a specialist, e. g., in Roentgen ray or radium work, he may have only a four-hour day. Like every worker, he has at least two weeks' holiday annually; and he may receive longer leave if he is a specialist or for special reasons. The triennial longer leave of the rural doctors has already been mentioned. (Doctors outside the cities are expected to take a three-months leave of absence every three years to do post-graduate work.)

"Medical salaries are paid by the Government, being graduated according to work and duration of service. In some instances an increase of 10 per cent in salary is given annually; or of 20 per cent after service in special institutions.

"EARNINGS may be increased by working for two or even more institutions daily. Only in the event of a calamity can a doctor be transferred to another district without his consent. Many doctors are still overworked; and although at the public clinics special precautions are enforced to prevent hasty consultations, this overwork must tend to lower the quality of medical care.

"In Russia before the Revolution, there were approximately 26,000 physicians. In 1931, we were told, the total number was about 76,000."

The majority of medical treatment is outside the home and the reason for this is in part the overcrowding that exists today in the cities. The patient is treated in dispensaries, clinics and hospitals and "a vast amount of provision" is made for the convalescent in rest homes and sanatoria of every type. Minor ills are usually treated at the factory or institution where the individual works.

The phase of health service and medical care that centers around the factory is one of the most important in the Russian program. Every effort is made to keep the worker fit to stay on the job. The idea of the need for health, in this connection, in order to build the new Russia, is constantly stressed in health propaganda.

Regular examination of workers in a factory unit sometimes shows incipient tuberculosis. The hours of these workers are shortened to six or six and a half hours a day, from the customary seven and a half or eight. If it is deemed advisable, they are put into what are called "night sanatoria." These are often the palaces of former nobles and the rich, well equipped and staffed with nurses and a resident doctor. The worker with incipient tuberculosis comes here after his work, takes a bath, rests for an hour, is examined by the doctor, has his dinner and then is free to enjoy a brief period of recreation or reading before retiring. He is advised that his recovery will be much more rapid if he goes outside the sanatorium only two nights a week. Again, one of the chief reasons for this type of treatment is the fact that apartments and houses are so overcrowded.

In the same way the working mother who is to have a child is surrounded with all sorts of precautions and special care. She is given a leave of absence from her job, at full pay, for two months before the child is to be born and for from six to eight weeks after the birth, also with pay. During the whole term of her pregnancy she is given special examinations by the doctor in charge of the unit at which she works, and customarily her hours of work are shortened.

When the child is two months old, the mother may place it in a day nursery, usually run in connection with the factory at which she works.

Third Labor Polyclinic at Kharkov.

The health and well-being of children is one of the major concerns of the Soviets say the authors of "Red Medicine." They stress the extreme care taken against infections and the thorough inspection of the home if the child is found to be verminous or malnourished. A general impression of the results of the Soviet method of child rearing is:

"THE training the children receive is a most valuable function of the centers. Each child is kept scrupulously clean. Infants are encouraged in appropriate exercises. Regular habits as to natural functions are inculcated. Instruction in the proper use of modern sanitary facilities is given as soon as the child is old enough to use them. The older children are treated on the principle that nothing must be done for them which they can do themselves. They wash themselves, help to lay tables, and put their toys away after playing. Each child has his own towel, glass and toothbrush. . . .

"The creeches, kindergartens, open air and other schools and summer camps have to a very great extent taken over from parents the care of their children. Such transfer of responsibility applies even more to older children and youths of both sexes, for whom forms of club life have become fairly general. This is a new feature in proletarian life.

"In other countries there are boarding schools for children of the middle and upper classes, and in some countries there are meager arrangements for very poor children to be boarded out during a part of the holidays in the country or at the seaside. The Russian arrangements of a similar kind are on a very large scale. These arrangements are highly beneficial; the quality of the provision made for the hygienic and medical care of infants bears comparison with any similar arrangements in Western countries, and in quantity it is vastly greater."

This separation of parent and child is not done by any arbitrary formula. It is merely considered to be in the best interests of the child. There are exceptions:

"A feature of the Babies' Hospital is the system of glass cubicles for isolation of children developing temperatures, and with provision in every case for nursing mothers. In the majority of cases seen by us in the Babies' Hospital the mother was with the baby. Discussing with us at some length the merits of this plan, the doctors insisted that the practice of having mothers stay with their babies hastened recovery of the infants and in many cases saved their lives."

An individual may choose his own doctor under the Soviet medical system. If he goes to a clinic, for example, and prefers a certain doctor, he may have to wait a time for that doctor, but the point is that he does have a right to choose. He may name the particular doctor whom he wants to perform an operation. Likewise, the workers in a factory may criticise the health service or they may criticise, to the chief of the medical service, an individual doctor. And the workers frequently exercise this privilege of criticism through the "wall newspapers" which are a feature of every factory—a space where frank criticisms of every phase of factory life may be written up by anyone in the factory.

Each factory, the authors record, is in process of becoming a health center. Besides the regular workers' kitchen at which ordinary meals are prepared, there is a special diet kitchen where special meals are prepared for workers who must have exceptional diets. There is little faking of illness to escape work, according to Newsholme and Kingsbury. But it does occur occasionally. The authors noted on one "wall newspaper" a notice that said: "Why does Comrade Aranova so often go on sick leave and will not work like the rest of us?" This was illustrated by a caricature of Comrade Aranova.

Some of the rest homes and sanatoria have retained the luxurious furnishings placed there by the former owners of the expropriated palaces. The most magnificent one visited by the two authors was Livadia, the former Crimean residence of the Czars. It is a magnificent palace set in the midst of a lovely garden high on a precipice over the Black Sea, "the paradise of workers."

They go to Livadia from various parts of Russia for visits of two weeks or longer. The palace and surrounding buildings have a capacity of somewhat more than 1500. The workers are described as "roaming about the gardens, playing games and singing, always singing to the accompaniment of the mandolin or guitar, or the balalaika, or reading, watching a motion picture, some of them resting on couches in the Czarina's bed-chamber, with its great arched plate-glass windows, framing the most beautiful picture imaginable of mountain, sea and cedars of Lebanon."

SINCE no bills are sent to private individuals, one living under capitalism may well wonder where the money comes from. It is taken out of the profits of the factories—that is, the value of the goods manufactured above what is paid to the workers. There are no private owners to pocket these profits and therefore they are turned to the use of the public good by the government. This is done, Newsholme and Kingsbury write, in part through a system of social insurance. Thus, all persons working in certain categories—and this includes the greater part of the workers in the whole country—are insured against sickness, permanent incapacity, maternity, unemployment, old age and burial. The workers do not contribute to this insurance from their wages. The whole cost is paid by the state.

A phase of the Soviet health program which particularly interested the two foreigners was the elaborate provision for sports. In Moscow alone there are 100 sports grounds. "One of our earliest visits in that city was to the new Dynamo Sport Club Stadium. Here all sports are provided for, but in football only a modified soccer is played. The open-air stadium has seating accommodation for 50,000 people, and 25,000 more can stand. All taking part in competitive sports are said to be medically examined. Special diplomas are awarded, and if a sportsman passes the tests in 22 varieties of sports he is entitled to

CALLING KING GEORGE INTO COURT

What Happened When Clarence Haddon, Who Claimed He Was the Duke of Clarence's Son, Tried to Blackmail His Sovereign.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

LONDON.

WHILE the British King may not be dragged into politics, any British subject may drag him into court. At any rate, any subject can make it necessary for the King to enter his appearance officially and submit evidence, either personally or through his private secretaries or other representatives. This was recently demonstrated in the trial of Clarence Guy Gordon Haddon, London engineer, charged with having attempted to blackmail His Britannic Majesty King George V.

As it turned out, Haddon pleaded "guilty under extreme provocation" to the charge and was let off with a suspended sentence by the Honorable Sir Ernest Bruce Charles, a Justice of Old Bailey. But prosecution of the case called for evidence to be presented by the King, so His Majesty had to send his private secretaries into court. They were Alexander Henry Lewis Hardinge and Frank H. Mitchell, who testified as to opening communications addressed to "His Majesty King George" and signed "Clarence G. Gordon Haddon."

The actual terms of the charge against Haddon were:

"Uttering, knowing the contents thereof, a letter demanding money from the King with menaces, and without reasonable or probable cause."

In the letter, or rather a series of letters, addressed to the head of the House of Windsor, Haddon claimed he was the illegitimate son of King George's dead brother, the Duke of Clarence. And as the price of silence concerning his birth, he demanded an annuity of $3000 and a lump sum sufficient to enable him to start a boarding house.

The claim of the would-be-nephew of King George, the most persistent and daring of all the present-day pretenders to the royal succession, was riddled by the prosecution. However, Justice Charles, in his review of the charge, expressed the opinion that Haddon's claim was not so much a case of calculated fraud as of mental obsession. In binding over the accused to keep the peace, instead of sending him to prison, the Old Bailey jurist imposed upon the pretender the following conditions: (1) To abstain in the future from making any statement, orally or in writing, that he is the son of the late Duke of Clarence, the eldest son of King Edward and Queen Alexandra, who died unmarried in 1892 at Sandringham, at the age of 28. (2) He shall not cause or encourage any other person to make a like statement.

Haddon accepted the conditions, promising to keep the peace for three years under two sureties the equivalent of $500 each.

The plea of guilty by the defendant came as a surprise to the Court, after which Justice Charles rendered his decision, but not before Sir Thomas Inskip, the Attorney-General, had completely refuted the London engineer's claim that he was the son of the late Duke of Clarence.

Whether Haddon ever had any doubts as to his parentage, these doubts must have been completely removed when the Attorney-General completed his presentation of the case for the Crown. From the very minute that the defendant was ushered into the world in a hill station of the British Army in India up to his appearance in the dock of the Old Bailey, the Crown representative traced in minutest detail the activities and career of the man who would claim kinship with the British Royal household. The engineer's life in India, South America, the United States—in New York City, Boston, and on the Pacific Coast—and in his own Britain, as well as in France as a member of the British Expeditionary Forces, was laid as bare as if he had been shadowed since birth.

As to Haddon's claim in regard to the date of his birth, the Attorney-General ferreted out a series of errors, proving that it was false in every particular. Tremblingly, and with face almost ashen, Haddon heard himself branded as an illegitimate child, but not that of the late Duke of Clarence. He was told—if he never knew before—that he was one of three children born to a Lieutenant Rogers, of the British Army, then on service in India, by a woman not his wife.

Haddon maintained that he was born in 1889 and that the Duke of Clarence had met his mother on a visit to India some months previously. It was shown, however, that the Duke's visit to India did not occur until two months after Haddon's birth.

It was in 1929 that Haddon, as was brought out by the Crown, first began to publicize the fact that he was a "love child" of the Duke of Clarence. At the time he was in New York City engaged in the distribution of painted silk handkerchiefs, and on the side pushing the sale of his book, "My Uncle, King George V.," published by a Manhattan firm.

In New York City he maintained an apartment at 698 West End avenue, while his handkerchief factory was located in a loft at 132 West Twenty-seventh street. A mysterious "Madame Jacqueline," who hinted rather strongly that she was the wife of Haddon, but without definitely saying so, was in charge of the manufacturing plant.

To the few of his restricted acquaintance Haddon was known as a quiet, gentlemanly chap, always well dressed, and in funds. He was rather vague about his income, but intimated that it had been coming to him regularly from mysterious sources in London. To those who looked upon him as a roving Englishman, he was wont to confide that he was the son of the Duke of Clarence, and that he was ever under the surveillance of Scotland Yard.

Mysteriously had he descended upon New York City, which he was to quit in the same fashion to settle in Boston for a short stay. In the New England metropolis, he was unaccompanied by "Madame Jacqueline," who, according to reports, had angered him by calling herself "Mrs. Haddon." In Boston he sought to enlist the aid of a Beacon Hill publisher in accepting a completely revised and revamped manuscript of "My Uncle, King George V.," in the belief that it would insure the publication of his work in Britain.

He also gave quite a little thought to reopening his handkerchief manufacturing business in Boston, even going so far as to enter into negotiations for a loft on Kingston street in that city.

But he left the Massachusetts city suddenly, and in a rage, complaining that from the moment of his arrival his every move had been dogged by members of the Secret Branch of Scotland Yard. He then went to California, remaining but a short time, after which he returned to New York City, sailing quietly from that port on the liner American Farmer, with several trunkfuls of his books, for England.

Outlining the story of Haddon's life, his attorney, Lloyd Jones, stressed the point that his client had been brought up by his mother in the belief he was the son of the Duke of Clarence. This strongly influenced his whole life, the lawyer said, and it bestowed upon him a notoriety that affected his fortunes adversely.

The Duke of Clarence, it will be recalled, was Prince Albert Victor, the eldest son of the Prince of Wales. Since that Prince of Wales ultimately became King Edward VII, Prince Albert Victor, had he lived, would then have been next in line for the throne.

THE Duke's death as a young man, however, left the present George V as second heir to the throne. With the Duke of Clarence's passing the title became extinct.

Haddon's counsel told the Court that life in America had been made unbearable for the defendant, since he was the victim of vicious gossip. Attorney Jones explained that when Haddon returned to England early in 1933, the man's health was undermined, and it was under the pressure of debts to physicians and other expenses that he wrote the letters which formed the basis of the present prosecution at the hands of the Crown. The letters, some of which are excerpted, follow:

"March 13, 1933.

"Your Majesty,

"I am writing these few lines unknown to the people who are backing my case, so as to clear my name before all people for what is going to happen in the next week or so, and also to show the Royal Family that I am not a rotter.

"My backers want me in the courts, which, even in my poor financial position, I cannot lower myself to do, but as I have promised to get myself into the Law Courts for money they have spent on me, and are still spending, in return for which I am to come before the eyes of the public.

"I will do so although it might be my end.

"What matters, as it has been hell on earth for me all my life through no fault of my own, but it will be in a clean way and it will save me from going down to the lowest level. It will show the world I have acted like a man, and my party will get all the publicity they require all the same, but it will be in a clean way.

"I do not want a great fortune in life, but only a comfortable living, which God knows I am entitled to have by my birthright.

"All I have aimed for is about £600 ($3000) a year private income, with enough ready money to start a boarding house so as to give me something to do. . . . "

"March 29, 1933.

"Your Majesty.

"By the enclosed letter (which was a demand made by a solicitor dunning Haddon for an overdue bill) it can be seen it has come at last, and I will be in the courts within the next few days. I will stand my punishment like a man, and that will be the end of it all—but not alone.

"I have done everything in my power to try and live a clean life, but this right I have been deprived of owing to the circumstances of my birth, being the 'illegitimate' (Haddon uses a more trenchantly-expressive term) son of your Majesty's brother, the late Duke of Clarence.

"I am ending up in gaol for medical attendance. The world will see the honorable and just treatment of our Royal Family.

"It would only have taken a year's income from my late father to have made me the happiest and most contented man in the British Empire.

"It would have meant so little to the Royal Family. The blessing of God would have been on their household for years, whereas now I will be a byword to the world, and so will the name of the Royal Family.

"God knows, it is bad enough to be born in any circumstances, but to be deprived of any means of a living just because it is royalty is intolerable, and, God only knows, I have had my suffering.

"I will make every effort to let the world see the Royal Family in their true colours before the end of it."

"May 8, 1933.

"Your Majesty:

"I am making my last appeal for justice to be done by me and given my right according to my birthright, being the son of your Majesty's late brother, the Duke of Clarence.

"If my case had been one of the ordinary kind, as enclosed newspaper cuttings show, there would be lots of people, including high Government officials, to come forward to help me. Being connected with the Royal Family I am made an outcast through no fault of my own.

"I get people to support me who

New Light on the Legend of the Glamorous Delphine Lalaurie

Documents Uncovered in New Orleans, Interpreted as Contradictory to the Belief That She Was Run Out of the City as a Torturer of Slaves.

NEW ORLEANS.

FOR almost 100 years the name of Delphine Lalaurie has been reviled in New Orleans. In history, legend and literature this wealthy, high-born woman of exalted social position has been portrayed as one of the most sinister, depraved figures this city ever knew—as a sadistic murderer who tortured and slaughtered black slaves in the attic of her imposing mansion. A part of the story is that the exposure of her inhuman cruelties aroused such fury against her that a mob wrecked her abode. The old Lalaurie mansion, at 1140 Royal street, is still known as the Haunted House.

But new light has just been shed on this celebrated case, and its effect is to indicate strongly that Madame Lalaurie was grievously maligned. CWA workers, translating and classifying ancient archives, up under the eaves of the New Orleans City Hall, have discovered documents which disprove part of the Lalaurie legend and create serious doubt that its main character was guilty of the "atrocious conduct" of which she was accused. Furthermore, the new evidence provides reason for thinking that Madame Lalaurie was the victim of a deliberate plot to ruin her reputation; that her chief accuser was a man who hated her because of a squabble over family property.

It was in 1834 that New Orleans was horrified by the revelations concerning Madame Lalaurie. A fascinating and fantastic place was the city of that day—a cosmopolitan hodgepodge, romantic, squalid, growing, hair-triggered. The Old World and the New rubbed elbows here. Predominantly French and Spanish, the city was receiving a steady influx of Americans. Sugar and cotton plantations were producing great wealth and the river was busy with traffic. Adventurers had come from all over Europe, and American frontier types contributed a picturesque element to the daily scene. Cream of society, salt of the earth, scum of the guttef, white, brown and black, swarmed behind the levee.

In stately houses and at the opera, sung by European stars, gathered ladies and gentlemen who spoke three languages. They wore frocks from Paris, diamonds from Amsterdam, laces from Brussels, suits tailored in London. A few blocks away, sailors, longshoremen, raftsmen, frontiersmen drank and gambled and caroused in dives from which dead men were dragged nightly. Saloons and gambling houses never closed. Courtesans of all colors minced along muddy streets.

The city seethed with gossip and scandal. Politics meant pistols; duels were of almost daily occurrence. Marie Leveau, the Voodoo Queen, ruled her invisible empire and waxed rich on blackmail.

In the uppermost stratum of this complex social stucture moved Delphine Lalaurie, one of its most brilliant figures. She was a daughter of Chevalier Louis Barthelmy de Macarty, whose father, a noble Scot, had fled to Louisiana as a political exile and had established a large plantation just below New Orleans. Through marriage the Macartys were connected with noble families of Spain and France. Delphine Macarty was a niece of Esteban Miro, a Spanish Governor of Louisiana. Macarty Square, in downtown New Orleans had been part of the plantation on which she was born.

As a young woman, much courted because of her beauty, wealth and position, Delphine married Don Ramon Lopez y Angullo de Candelaria, a high Spanish military officer in Louisiana. To them a daughter was born, who was known in her family by the pet name of Borquite.

After her husband's death, Delphine married Jean Blanque, the family banker, who had been agent of France in Louisiana. They had two daughters. Blanque died, and the widow married a third time, her last husband being Dr. Nicholas Louis Lalaurie, a member of the faculty of the Academy of Sciences at Paris. As a wedding gift she presented him with the house at 1140 Royal street, one of the city's most magnificent mansions at that time.

For about three years the Lalaurie mansion was a center of New Orleans social life, where the most important people of the city and the most distinguished visitors were entertained lavishly. But rumors began to circulate about town that Delphine Lalaurie was extremely cruel to her household slaves—that moans, the clanking of chains and the sound of terrible blows sometimes were heard in that stately mansion. A little slave girl died on the premises, and the story was told that she had jumped from the roof when her mistress pursued her with a whip. The authorities decided, after investigation, that the child had been killed by falling from a three-story stair rail, down which she was sliding. But the rumors persisted. And a neighbor named Montreuil made a complaint to officials about Madame Lalaurie's treatment of her slaves.

On April 10, 1834, occurred Delphine Lalaurie's tragic downfall. A fire broke out in her house that morning. Neighbors said Negroes were imprisoned in the attic. According to the legend, doors were broken down and several wretched slaves, loaded with chains, their bodies covered with scars, were liberated. Neighbor Montreuil told a Judge that from his house he could see into the Lalaurie house, and he had seen slaves manacled and suffering from terrible wounds.

That afternoon a mob collected in front of the Lalaurie mansion, and, according to the legend, broke in and virtually ruined the place. Also, according to the legend, Madame Lalaurie escaped in a carriage, boarded a ship for France and never returned. One report was that she spent the rest of her life slinking miserably from

The Woman Marine Mail Carrier

Mrs. Mona Galbraith of Mooringsport, Louisiana, Has the Only Job of Its Kind.

MOORINGSPORT, Louisiana.

THE unique distinction of being the only woman mail carrier in the United States who covers her route entirely by water belongs to Mrs. Mona Galbraith, 28 years old, who lives with her two children here in Mooringsport, on the banks of Caddo Lake.

On six days a week, Mrs. Galbraith loads a bulky mail bag into her cabin boat, tunes up the motor and sets off on a 40-mile voyage around the lake, threading her way among the duck blinds and oil derricks and placing the mail parcels for her "customers" in boxes nailed to trees or poles extending out over the water's edge. She has had the route four years now and has missed carrying the mail only one day. That was in December, 1932, when the lake froze over.

It was one of the few occasions in recent years when Caddo Lake had enough ice on it to stop a motor boat.

This mail route is of the so-called "star route" class; that is, one awarded by the Government on a contract. Mrs. Galbraith's husband bid it in several years ago, and when the couple were divorced she took over the responsibility of seeing that the mail got around. Now she is so much attached to the job that she is beginning to worry about expiration of the contract. The contract will run out pretty soon and she isn't sure she is going to be able to get it back. She wants to keep it, not only because it helps her to make a living for herself and her two children, she says, but also because she "loves the lake." Riding over a 40-mile route in a motor boat every day is her idea of "really living and enjoying life."

But her job involves more than merely riding over a lake. It involves dangers which most women would not consider compatible with enjoyment of life. During the duck hunting season the air is full of flying lead along that south bank, where the hunters' blinds are thick and where her route takes her in and out of coves and around sudden bends. On stormy days the waves roll up high enough to be a constant threat to any small craft. Moreover, the lake is subject to heavy fogs and is dotted with oil derricks of the great Caddo oil field, an oil field that is largely under water. On foggy days these derricks are as hard to see as the snags which also dot the shallow areas near the bank. Another menace, and the most serious menace of all, is traceable to the oil field, too. It is—of all things—the menace of fire on the lake.

Strange as it may seem, Caddo Lake, or at least large areas of it, might catch fire at any moment. These are the areas covered with oil that has escaped from wells and from an occasional break in one of the numerous pipe lines which lie under the water.

A STRAY spark might set up a conflagration that would sweep the lake of all boats operating on it. In Mrs. Galbraith's case, this hazard is offset to some extent by the fact that her course is mostly close to shore, but still it is a hazard that scarcely fits in with the idea of "real living." She points out that the oil-covered areas have their advantages, too.

"I shudder to think what would happen if a spark should set fire to that oil," she observes, "but I've noticed that the oil comes in very conveniently in a storm. When the lake is heavy and the waves are rolling up elsewhere, those oil-covered spots are always quiet and as smooth as glass. I would rather run the risk of fire than face some of the storms we have on Caddo Lake.

"I'll never forget that winter of 1932," she goes on. "It was the day before the freeze and the lake was terribly heavy. The waves almost washed me out of my small boat and the water froze all over it. The little hole in the cap of the gasoline tank which allows air to come through was completely covered with ice. My motor stopped suddenly because it wasn't getting any gasoline. When finally I found out what the trouble was and leaned over the back of my seat to punch a hole in the ice with a hairpin, a high wave dashed the boat against a snag and I went headlong into the cold water. I was mad and cold, but I managed to get the boat to shore and then had to walk three miles in my wet clothes before I found a house where I could dry out and get warm."

The duck hunters create the hazard that this mail carrier dislikes most.

"It's a wonder I haven't been shot long before this, in view of the way duck shot flies around here in hunting season. I have to cross areas where hunting blinds are thick. I used to cut off my motor when I came close to a blind, so as not to scare the ducks away. But the hunters didn't seem to appreciate it much. At least, they never gave me any ducks. They didn't even seem to notice the favor until I decided to go chugging on through instead of going to so much trouble. After a few days of that I was having more duck dinners than I could manage—and the hunters brought the ducks.

"There is plenty of adventure in the business of running this mail route," she adds. "Right over there I lost a propeller one day. I had to paddle several miles before I hailed a motor

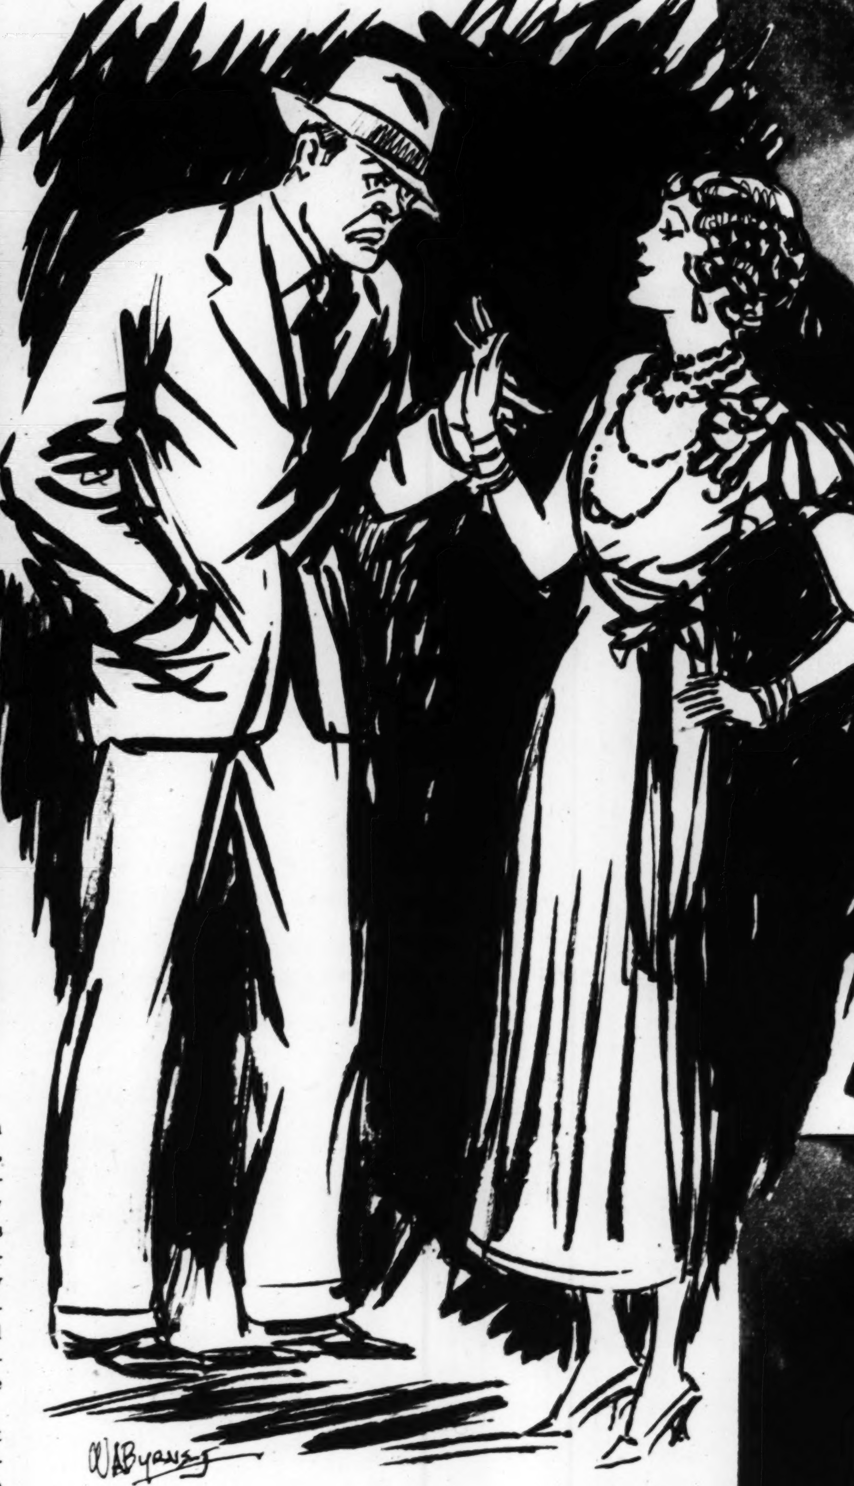
Another 'Broadway Butterfly' Meets a Violent End

The Name of Marion Smith Added to the List of Those Whose Lips Were Permanently Sealed Because They 'Knew Too Much.'

Margaret Anna Urbas.

Margie Pilaski, alias Marion Smith.



"You haven't got long to live, baby," a man's voice shouted.

By JACK ALEXANDER

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

TO THE list of light ladies whose carmined lips have been permanently sealed because they knew too much, add the name of Marion Smith. And to the list of nervous gentlemen in the world add the names of those she entered in her little black memorandum book now in the possession of District Attorney William C. Dodge of Manhattan.

Miss Smith (not, of course, her real name) was found in her apartment at 255 West Ninety-third street, one morning recently by an inquisitive ice man. Stumbling about in the thick silence of the apartment, the ice man came upon the body, clad in garish pajamas, on the living room floor. An insulated lamp cord was still knotted tight about the swollen neck. The mouth was half open, the eyes distended and the woman had been dead 48 hours. She had been garroted, a quaint underworld method of silencing a "singer," or squealer, or one who may suddenly decide to "sing," if not forestalled. Marion Smith had done some talking to District Attorney Samuel J. Foley, up in the Bronx, and had so scared two thugs that they pleaded guilty and took sentences in Sing Sing in connection with a murder the Smith woman knew something about, rather than face her in a courtroom.

Police at first were inclined to attribute Marion Smith's demise to vengeance by friends of the new arrivals at Sing Sing, but as the investigation widened it was found that Miss Smith knew a few things about many persons and the ripples of suspicion spread.

What names the memorandum book contains is only known to Mr. Dodge and his associates, but that numerous gentlemen in varied walks of life have been bothered lately is certain, for Miss Smith, a milky-skinned, half good-looking, nondescript lady, who might have been anywhere between 20 and 35, played the Broadway crowd. Since Broadway is the playground for people from more strata of life than a guinea pig has progeny, Marion Smith must have hooked many men from the so-called high, as well as the "mugg" levels of existence. And since ladies of this type have been known to make a permanent source of income out of their contacts with temporary "dates," many persons must have been driven to thinking how convenient it would be if she could be erased. The evidence is convincing that the idea appealed irresistibly to someone.

A third avenue of investigation pointed westward to Pennsylvania, Marion Smith's home State, where evidence seemed to show that she knew a great deal about a mob of hoodlums who specialized in the smelly profession of inducing young women to fly from their drab coal-field surroundings, to be sold for what they would bring in the larger centers of civilization. This is sometimes known as the "white slave" racket.

Still a fourth possibility was that of mere robbery. The authorities consider this the least likely, despite the fact that $350 was taken from the apartment. Such a sum, it is pointed out, might not be viewed with contempt even by a man originally bent solely on murder. Moreover, the relatively undisturbed condition of the apartment seemed to indicate that the murderer was someone with whom the woman had been conversing as an acquaintance.

THAT, in brief, is the outline of New York's latest "butterfly" murder. Where it will lead nobody knows. The late Dot King (d. 1923) and Louise Lawson (d. 1924) were early murder victims of this type, still mysteries, if anyone cares to thumb over the yellowing files. The late Vivian Gordon was garroted and tossed from an automobile in 1932, the day before she was to have appeared before Samuel Seabury and "tell all" about many men in high places. The boldness of this murder, queerly enough, since the woman was a tawdry extortioner, was one of the strongest stimuli to the wave of reform that put the present city administration in power. Vivian Gordon was a potential source of flaming information, and the public mind craved the "lowdown," which, in due course of time, it got from other lips. The late Anna Urbas, 1903-1929, was a somewhat different type. She was strangled, weighted and tossed in the Harlem River because word got around she had named the murderers of her sweetheart, the late Gene Moran, a bodyguard of the late Arnold Rothstein. Moran was a victim of a "torch" murder.

The theory of gang vengeance in the Marion Smith case dates back to the time "The Weasel" tried to make love, out of turn, to brunette Billie Curnow, Miss Smith's former roommate, now somewhere out of range of questioners. "The Weasel's" real name was Joe Mortillaro. He was a thug and more amorous than most, which is saying a lot.

The Weasel came from Westchester, but was no snob. He co-operated with common chiselers and mobsters, such as George de Perno of Brooklyn and Irving Leder, a Manhattan boy who fought in the prize ring under the name of John Dumaine until the horseshoe was found in his glove. With a few other congenial friends, this group picked up a good, if precarious, living violating various sections and subdivisions of the criminal code. Marion Smith and Billie Curnow got acquainted with them in a night club where the ladies hung out, and friendship, in the case of Billie and de Perno ripened into an even closer friendship. Miss Smith avoided too great intimacy, but knew whatever went on within the tight little mob. Miss Curnow had an apartment of her own now and the crowd shuttled back and forth between the women's places, tossing swell parties.

ONE night, according to police information, de Perno summoned the crowd to Miss Smith's apartment to lay plans for a stickup job. De Perno had left Miss Curnow suffering from a bona fide headache and had thoughtfully arranged for the pow-wow elsewhere, as befitted his role of considerate lover. When the clans had assembled and many floor layouts had been penciled and tossed away, de Perno wanted to know where The Weasel was. Someone said that he stayed in Westchester, sick in bed. The plans completed, the conference broke up.

Next day, de Perno learned from the lips of his love that The Weasel, supposedly ill, had pestered her for two hours to run away with him and give de Perno, who was, after all, only a Brooklyn boy, the gate. De Perno was informed that The Weasel had been no gentleman.

Whatever luck The Weasel had had heretofore deserted him now. Blissfully hopeful that Miss Curnow would be afraid to tell about his advances and that ultimately she might see the light and listen to his suave pleadings, The Weasel joined the boys next day. There were drinks and a ride—just a crowd of good fellows taking the air. Then abruptly, in the wilds of Van Cortlandt Park, Joe Mortillaro was riddled with bullets and dumped. That was on December 17, 1932. Although the "rides" were unconnected, it was recalled that the spot was less than half a mile from where the body of Vivian Gordon had been found a few months earlier.

The murder of The Weasel split up the clique. Along in February the crowd heard that Billie Curnow and Marion Smith had spilled everything to the Bronx District Attorney in whose jurisdiction the Mortillaro murder fell, since Van Cortlandt Park is in that borough. Immediately there was a grapevine hunt for the women, but they had been too fast. Miss Smith and Miss Curnow were safe in the Bronx County Jail, staying voluntarily as material witnesses. And the police clamped down on de Perno and Leder, charging them with the murder. Two others escaped the dragnet.

The material witnesses read their love story magazines behind bars the rest of the winter, and through the spring and summer and fall, and into the current winter, almost until 1934. Adjournments were granted to voluble lawyers and the prosecuting authorities themselves were willing to wait, in the hope of snaring the men who escaped. But de Perno and Leder, afraid of what the women might tell, asked for permission to enter pleas of guilty to lesser crimes than murder, and a bargain was arranged.

Vivian Gordon.

De Perno was permitted to plead guilty to second, instead of first, degree murder. County Judge James M. Barrett sentenced him to from 20 years to life. Leder was allowed to plead guilty to assault. He got five years.

Freed from the Bronx County Jail and paid $250 by the State, without even having had to testify, Billie Curnow wisely made an exit from New York. Marion Smith boldly went back to her old apartment, paid a month's rent in advance and traipsed once more among the familiar Broadway haunts. Many nocturnal visitors, some strange and extremely nervous, passed her threshold. Money rolled in fast and was spent as quickly. Tinsel dolls, the kind sold by cigarette girls in the hot spots, cluttered up the apartment. The Smith woman was "in the money." But she was also "on the spot," a neighboring tenant suggested one day.

"I told her that while she was away one night some awful tough muggs called," the neighbor related to police. "She laughed and said: 'Oh, I know what I'm doing, and I know how to take care of myself. The gentlemen who come here are all right.' "

The same inquisitive neighbor said that very night she heard a man's voice in the Smith apartment shouting: "You haven't got long to live, baby," and the woman laughing in reply.

Three mornings later the ice man came upon her as the rising sun crept across her distorted face.

On a table lay a package of toys tagged with a card bearing the name "John." Police later learned that this was a 7-year-old son. Marion Smith, born Margie Pilaski, had married John Crioshock, a Shenandoah, Pa., miner, and left him three years before.

"I saw her last October when she came out to visit the kid," Crioshock said when police summoned him to New York. "She looked all right then." The miner was sullen, but his eyes were slightly swollen. He appeared to be about 30 years old. He said nothing when informed of the lapse of the small insurance policies his estranged wife had kept up for him and the child.

Then events took another turn. In Pottsville, Pa., Lewis G. Buono, Chief of Schuylkill County Detectives, declared that Marion Smith's sister, Florence, had been murdered more than a month before in New Jersey. She also knew too much.

"FLORENCE used the name of Olga Gazinsky, wherever she picked that up," Buono said. "Back in October, 1930, we arrested the sisters in a roadhouse in Schuylkill County in a drive on a white slave ring operating in Easton and Reading, Pennsylvania, and in Jersey and New York. Both refused to talk, although we thought they knew something.

"When they got out of the workhouse, Margie went to New York and Florence to Atlantic City, where she became a night club hostess. On last November 1, Florence and a friend, Ethel Marshall, went to Camden, New Jersey, where they met "Cowboy" Wallace and John Zukorsky."

While they were drinking in a hotel, four men broke into the room and kidnaped Wallace and Zukorsky. Driving a few miles from town, the pair were stood up against a tree and mowed down with bullets. Wallace died, but Zukorsky was only left for dead. He crawled back to the road and a motorist took him to a hospital in Camden. Here Zukorsky pleaded with the police to find the "two good dames" and protect them.

The girls read of Zukorsky's survival later and started from Atlantic City to visit his bedside. On the way they, too, were kidnaped, murdered and buried in shallow graves near Downington. The fingerprints of Olga Gazinsky, dead in Downington, New Jersey, and of Marion Smith, dead in New York, tally perfectly with those taken in 1930 of Florence and Margie Pilaski, according to Buono.

One New York detective described Marion Smith as "a small-town girl who came to New York and met the wrong people." Behind this monstrous bromide lay a great deal of sociological truth. It has been pointed out that one would hardly expect a girl with the background of a mining town to find her New York thrills in the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

A Grand Duke Visits America and Finds a New Autocracy

Americans in Paris—Grand Duke Alexander Arrives in the United States—and Discovers Certain Industrialists More Ruthless Than the Czars—Lectures—a Disagreement With Henry Ford—All Told in This Installment of 'Always a Grand Duke.'

Grand Duke Alexander on his arrival in New York in 1931.

Grand Duke Alexander of Russia completed this last chapter of his memoir, "Always a Grand Duke," three weeks before he died at Mentone, France, on his beloved Riviera coast, after a long and painful illness which he bore with patient stoicism. While those closest to him feel that he had a realization of his approaching death, he never deviated from work or plans for the future, which included another visit to America and possible permanent residence here.

"He was not afraid of death," says his New York agent, who was very near to him. "In a measure, he welcomed it. Not that he was tired or disappointed. Far from it. He was curious . . . To a Russian priest who came to 'comfort' him on Christmas (1932) he said: 'Be careful. I may have an opportunity of checking up on your statements very soon.' It is ironical that his relatives should have ignored his wishes and given him a church burial. . . .

"On the night of February 25-26 (1933) a 'Big Ball' was given by former graduates of the St. Petersburg Corps of Pages. His wife, Grand Duchess Xenia, was to be the guest of honor. She left his bedside at 11 p. m. Only his daughter, Princess Yousoupoff, remained with him. He urged her to go. He could not understand why anyone should prefer the company of a sick man. At 3 a. m. he called her and complained of insufferable pains. A messenger was dispatched to the Pages' Ball to fetch his wife and the physician. When they arrived, he was dead. He had died while they danced. There had been no 'last words,' or 'parting blessings.' He always hated melodrama."

By ALEXANDER ROMANOFF
Former Grand Duke of Russia

NOTHING is so useful to an exile as his hard-earned ability to recite the Cinderella story in reverse. It fed the Duke of Orleans during his stay in America. It carried King Louis XVIII through his lean years in London. It landed many a Russian refugee of the 1920s behind the counter of a department store. The number of ways in which it can be exploited by an impoverished aristocrat is really astounding. According to my relatives, none is more degrading than lecturing on spiritualism—a somewhat debatable point of view, but one which prompted me to accept the long-standing offer of a New York lecture bureau in the summer of 1928. When in doubt, I always make a decision distasteful to my relatives.

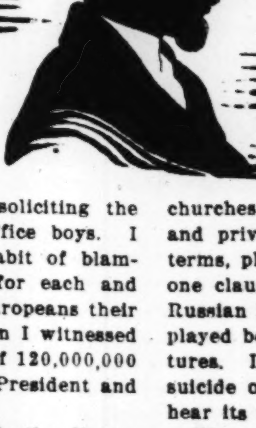
"You are crazier than a March hare," was their parting blessing, and the sound of that word "March" made me prick up my ears. It was in the month of March of the year of grace 1917 that, acting against the advice of every one of my brothers, cousins and nephews, I refused to sign the famous "waiver of all claims" stuck in the faces of the Romanoffs by the Provisional Government. Not that I wanted the throne for myself or my children. God forbid. I simply thought that a man does not cease to be his father's son just because a bunch of slackers threaten him with a firing squad. The fact that I turned out to be the only surviving Grand Duke without high ambitions or inspiring messages for the 160,000,000 Russians proved to my relatives that I was lacking in both brains and patriotism.

"Fiften years after!" I caught myself repeating this phrase over and over again aboard the Leviathan.

"You mean 'Twenty Years After,' "—my secretary knew Dumas by heart.

No, I meant 15; just 15 years had passed since I last visited the United States. When I left New York in the late summer of 1913, Wall Street was still borrowing money in London and "J. P. Morgan & Co." was still only the name of a banking firm, not the Taj-Mahal of the Western world. I was not afraid of changes. The more the merrier. I was afraid of myself. I doubted my ability to fit into the picture of the new America. Judging by the hard-drinking young women I used to meet around Paris and Biarritz, since the war the Americans had taken what they considered a step forward but what looked to me to be a step backward, right into the past of pre-war Europe. Midwestern accents in the Ritz bar, discussing Proust and Freud, made me think of Russia in the early 1900s. It was saddening to realize that the robust viciousness of the America I had known and admired had given place to the sickening self-consciousness of an hysterical idealism.

I learned a lot. I met America and it changed my former estimate of the empires. I used to reproach my relatives for their haughtiness, but I had never really known snobbishness until I tried to seat a resident of Brookline, Massachusetts, and a Fifth avenue millionaire at the same table. I used to be appalled by the unlimited power of the man on the throne, but even the most ruthless of all autocrats, my late father-in-law, Emperor Alexander III, seemed distinctly shy and full of scruples when compared with the dictators of Gary, Indiana. I used to blush at the thought of the barbaric treatment reserved for the national minorities in Imperial Russia, but that was before I read the advertisements in the New York newspapers soliciting the services of "Gentile" office boys. I used to say that the habit of blaming their governments for each and every ill had cost the Europeans their place in the sun, but then I witnessed the grewsome spectacle of 120,000,000 Americans booing their President and clamoring for a miracle.



I was not disappointed: the discovery of truth, any truth, is invariably fascinating. But I did become less bitter in my denunciations of Europe. The 3500 miles of the Atlantic that appeared to be a frightful lot of water in the days of my youth dwindled to the size of a narrowish pond, with the people on both sides closely resembling each other in petty virtues and dominant vices, in the abandon of their hysteria and the recklessness of their hatreds.

The church in Grand Rapids, my first lecture engagement, was packed. The minister said there were 850 people in the audience, but to me they looked like 850,000. Never in my life was I so frightened. When the minister said: "I have the great honor to present to you Grand Duke Alexander of Russia," my hands began to tremble and my throat was dry. I got up and was about to cross toward the center of the platform when I suddenly heard the opening bars of the Russian National Anthem and saw my audience rise to their feet. I stood aghast. For the first time in 11 years I was listening to that melody.

My secretary told me afterward that I went deathly pale. Personally I remember nothing. Sometimes I think I must have fallen asleep in my room in New York and dreamt that I was lecturing in the New Baptist Church in Grand Rapids. The local papers said that I talked "in a clear, melodious voice, never showing an inkling of emotion or bitterness." I doubt it.

I have delivered 66 lectures more since that day. In churches, universities, women's clubs and private houses. I never disputed terms, place or time, insisting on just one clause in my contracts: that the Russian National Anthem must not be played before, during or after my lectures. It is easy to live through the suicide of an empire. It is deadly to hear its voice 11 years later.

When I met Henry Ford in his Dearborn domain, the depression was still young and not all of the great reputations dead. He was still revered as America's major prophet, as a genius who had discovered the secret of perennial economic bliss.

My anticipation was keen. To me, as to most Europeans, he was a symbol, a legend, the coat of arms of the United States. I have always envied America her possession of Henry Ford. It seemed to me that the tag of nationality of the Man of Dearborn was helping the world at large to reach a clearer conception of the full meaning of the term "American." Perhaps because no other country has ever publicized its representative citizens to such an extent, a Frenchman, an Englishman or a Russian does not create in the mind of a foreigner an immediate association with one particular name. But an American. . . . This never fails: in 90 cases out of 100 it evokes the image of Henry Ford. A peasant in far-away Siberia may profess his ignorance of the identity of George Washington, but he will be certain to remember the name of that odd contraption which plows its way through the dust and mud of the country road. This being the case, it is only logical that the future of the Russian peasant should interest Henry Ford. He began our conversation by asking what I thought of the American "possibilities" in Russia. I answered that I considered them quite excellent, but that the American manufacturers had failed so far to compete successfully with the aggressive salesmanship of the Germans.

"But the money," said Ford; "have they got the money?"

"No," I admitted, "there is no money in present-day Russia, but there is and always will be a stupendous wealth of raw materials. I suppose you know it better than I do."

"I don't," he said, with almost childish stubbornness. "All I know is that they haven't got the money. The General Electric people sold them some stuff and I hear they are having a pretty tough time trying to collect."

I felt amused. There was I, a man outlawed by the Soviet Government, fighting the cause of Communistic Russia against Henry Ford.

"How are you going to surmount this crisis," I asked him next, "if you continue to neglect the potential largest market of the world? Don't you think there is a depression in America today partly because you have insisted on ignoring the existence of one-sixth of the earth's surface?"

"There is a depression in America today," said Ford, laying a somewhat sarcastic emphasis on the word "depression," "simply because our people have become too soft. Why, look at our farmers." . . .

He got up, crossed toward the window, as if to get a better view of the America that was lying outside, and began to talk at great length about the necessity to promote the "back-to-the-land" movement and to "industrialize" farming.

At first I thought something must have happened to my hearing or that I simply could not understand his English. After what I had just seen in the course of my tour through the Middle West, it seemed incredible that anyone, least of all a man with Ford's instinct for realities, should advocate the increase of farming as a panacea for the ills of the country. Ridiculous as was the notion of an impoverished European giving a lesson in economics to an American multi-millionaire, the attitude of my host made me forget the difference of our positions.

"YOU are all wrong!" I exclaimed with great feeling, and this brought an odd expression to Ford's ascetic face. He looked puzzled, as if a high school boy had interrupted the delivery of His Holiness' encyclical with a silly remark. Then he smiled, a smile of pity and sympathy.

"Well," he laughed, "I must admit that is the first time in the last 15 years that I have heard a man use the word 'wrong' in talking about me. So, I am wrong—am I?"

It is getting late. I am back in Monte Carlo. America is like a vague dream. The motor cars squatting in front of the Casino are switching on their lights. Some friends are awaiting me in the roulette hall, but I am tired of the past and I dread to come face to face with the ghosts of the Casino. They are nasty, second-rate ghosts. They talk in accents of impotent hatred and petty greed. They must have been politicians in one of their earlier incarnations. They should have been buried long ago.

I am going home. I have one, for the first time in 67 years. Not much of a home—just big enough for me and my future.

JOHN NOBLE, the 'LAST of the BOHEMIANS'

A Kansas Cowboy Whose Bar Painting Was Stoned by Carrie Nation, He Won Distinction for Painting the Sea 'As No One Else Ever Did.'

By KEITH KERMAN

Of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

A LIFE as full of vigorous color as his own paintings ended the other day with the death of John Noble. It took him from the cattle trails of the old Southwest to the art studios of Europe, from itinerant picture-maker for newspapers and barrooms to winner of coveted art prizes and member of the National Academy. And always it was lived—as cowboy, as hand-to-mouth Latin Quarter student, as Breton fisherman, as celebrity—with a robust individuality that distinguished him as a man as well as an artist. He was accounted one of the last of the real Bohemians.

There were contradictions about John Noble that helped to make him an unusual figure in his profession. Often called a poet and a visionary, he looked like a prize-fighter. Born about as far from salt water as it is possible to be in the United States, he achieved his greatest success with pictures of the sea. His speech was rough, abounding in faulty grammar, yet he was a most interesting and stimulating conversationalist and could quote Walt Whitman's poetry by the yard. He spent his most productive years abroad, but he was as American as baseball.

John Noble was born about 60 years ago on his father's ranch just outside Wichita, Kansas. It was then frontier country, and as a frontier boy John grew up, learning to ride horses, rope cows, handle firearms, and, when he was big enough, help with cattle drives on the Chisholm Trail. There wasn't time or opportunity for much schooling. But before he could read, the boy was drawing pictures, first copying illustrations he found in books, then trying to get on paper the likenesses of things he saw on the range. His mother was proud of his drawings, but his father didn't quite see how that sort of thing was going to help him as a ranch hand. Despite his disapproval of art as an occupation, John's father let him go to an art school in Cincinnati for several months.

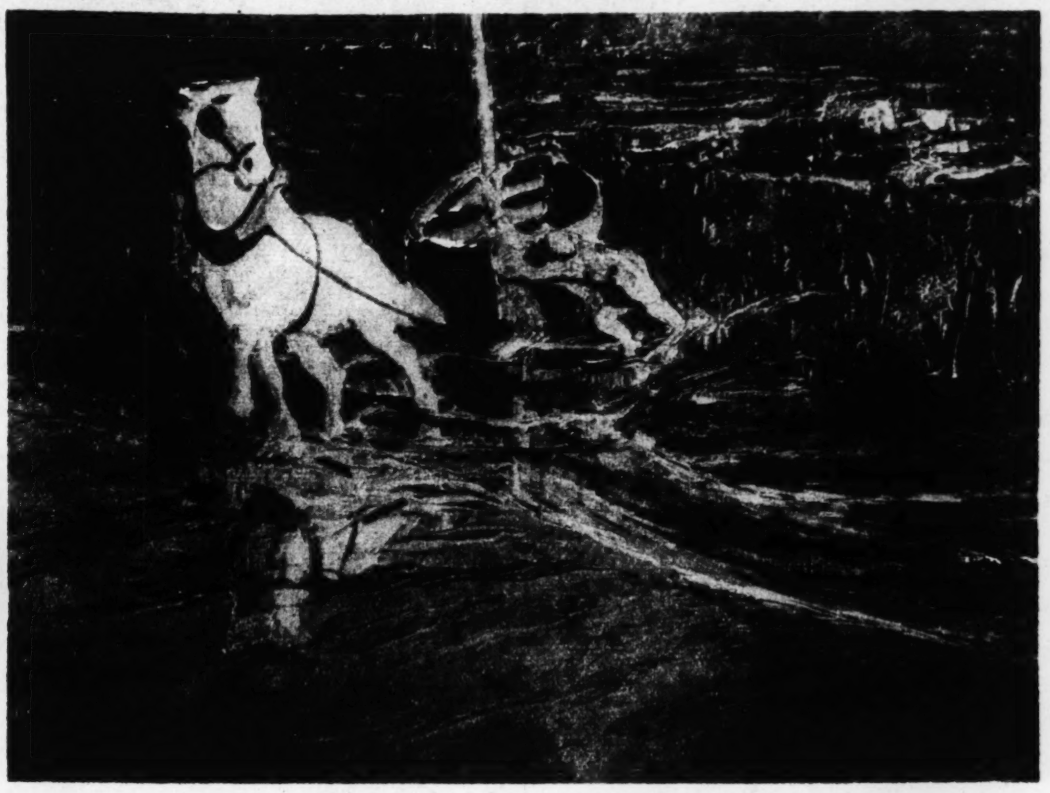
On his return to Wichita the youngster sold a picture he had painted at school—a large and quite frank portrayal of Cleopatra at the bath. The Carey Hotel in Wichita bought it and hung it above the bar. Patrons of the place admired the painting; that, they agreed, was art. But Carrie Nation, a connoisseur of morals rather than of esthetics, had another word for it when she called at the Carey bar one day while engaged in her favorite pursuit of saving humanity from the demon rum. She stepped outside and collected some stones, returned and pelted the canvas manfully; and by the time she had run out of missiles, "Cleopatra at the Bath" was ruined.

This was discouraging to the artist, but in the next few years he sold pictures to other saloons in the Southwest—big, florid canvases for which he sometimes got as high as $50. During this period Noble traveled about through the West a good deal, making sketches for newspapers. Many of them appeared in the Wichita Eagle as illustrations of the stories of Dave Leahy, an enterprising journalist widely known as "Dynamite Dave," who was highly skilled in ornamenting fact with fiction in his news articles. Noble acquired the nickname of "Wichita Bill."

Another friend of the artist in those days was Victor Murdock, who was to become a Congressman and political figure and is now editor-in-chief of the Eagle. He told Noble one day that he ought to go to Paris and study if he wanted to amount to anything as an artist. Noble decided the advice was good, scraped together what money he could and went.

Wichita Bill landed in France with $98 and lofty ambitions. He enrolled at Julien's Academy, where he was instructed by Jean Paul Laurens, and began to sling paint energetically. The year was 1897.

John Noble.



"The White Horse," a painting by John Noble.

AS A student in the Latin Quarter, Noble was conspicuous, for he clung to plainsman's attire. He wore the cowboy hat of the period, a low-crowned, broad-brimmed affair with a wind strap, and a necktie and vest made of rattlesnake skin. Some of his fellow students were inclined to be critical of his get-up, seemed to think he was a sort of wild man. So Noble reckoned it would be fun to show them a little wildness of the Western variety. He took the cartridges from the six-shooter he had brought from Kansas, reloaded them with bits of bacon rind, and sallied forth one night on a horse he had obtained from the abattoir. Into the Cafe de la Ruche, patronized by art students, he rode, raised a cowboy yell, and shot out all the lights. The students scampered out; Wichita Bill evidently was on a rampage and there was no telling when he would start scalping.

The exploit had several results. Noble was fined 40 francs. He was invited to join the Hole-in-the-Wall Club, a select group of men who dined together in a certain restaurant, the chair which Robert Louis Stevenson had occupied being reserved for the chap from Kansas.

The American learned to speak what he used to call "cab-driver French." He came to know many people of the poorer districts—the respectable poor and underworld characters as well.

One night an apache tried an old game on him. The apache presented himself at Noble's door and pointed a pistol at him. It was a ridiculously small pistol—at least, it seemed so to one who was used to Western .45s. Noble didn't see any need to be afraid of such a toy. So, against all precedent in apache experience, he disregarded the weapon and knocked its owner downstairs.

Noble did his share of cavorting as a Bohemian of the Latin Quarter. But, unlike many of his fellows, he worked hard, too. For a long time, however, it seemed that he worked to no purpose. He experimented with the various isms that appeared in the art world, and rejected them as unsuited to him. After studying at the Academy des Beaux Arts and in Brussels he was still groping. Then he went to Brittany and began to paint its fisher-folk—and to work as a fisherman. When he left Brittany some years later, he had "arrived."

The picture that signalized Noble's arrival was "The Benediction of the Sea," a portrayal of a traditional ceremony of the Breton peasants. Before the work was done the artist ran out of paint. A paint dealer let him have on credit enough material to finish it. When the painting was exhibited in Paris he was recognized as an artist of distinctive power, and people began to say that he painted the sea as no one else had ever done.

Before leaving Brittany Noble married Miss Amelia Peiche of Strasbourg, France. They were living in Picardy when the World War began. With troops moving into the district, they hastened to London and spent the war years there. During this period Noble met Sargent, Augustus John, H. G. Wells and other notables and his reputation as an artist grew.

In 1920 Noble returned to the United States and established a home in New York, where he resided with his wife and two sons for the rest of his life, although he spent much time at the art colony at Provincetown, Massachusetts, and made occasional trips to Kansas.

His first award in this country was the $1000 Salmagundi Club purchase in 1922. Later he won the W. A. Clarke prize at an exhibition in the Corcoran Gallery, Washington; the Atheneum prize at Hartford, Connecticut; the Carnegie prize at the National Academy of Design, and the Ranger Fund purchase prize. He was made a member of the National Academy of Design about five years ago. The State Capitol of Oklahoma, museums in Wichita, Atlanta, Dallas, New Orleans and Brooklyn, and the Corcoran and National galleries in Washington are some of the public institutions that have his paintings.

Noble did not paint from models or with the scene to be depicted before his eyes. A good deal of his work was done at night. His style did not conform to any school, but was in general impressionistic. His use of color was striking and original. The figure of a sturdy old white horse appears in a number of his seashore pictures. Such horses were used by Breton fishermen to pull their boats out of the water, and to Noble they became something of a symbol of patient, plodding work.

NOBLE, despite his eccentricities and the brilliance of much of his work, conceived himself as a creature a good deal like the old white horse he painted—a steady worker, a plodder.

Throughout his long residence abroad and in the East the Kansas artist never lost his love for the western plains; to the end of his days he wore a broad-brimmed Stetson. And it was in fulfillment of his wish that his body was taken back to Wichita for burial, to rest in the prairie country which lent him to the world.

wear a badge of distinction."

These sports grounds are in addition to the Great Park of Culture and Rest, previously described in the Sunday Magazine of the Post-Dispatch. Here there are all sorts of amusements from folk-dancing to tennis, with a special village for children that the authors describe as idyllic in its charm and appropriateness.

At the end of their tour, which covered more than 20,000 miles and included hundreds of interviews with nurses, doctors, medical directors, patients and peasants, the two experts concluded:

"We realized all the time that we were seeing the best that the U. S. S. R. had succeeded in developing. But when this best was seen repeated in many cities visited by us, and when it was everywhere frankly stated that their arrangements were not yet complete, that the dearth of doctors made more adequate provisions difficult for a few years; and when we were told openly of the great difficulties which were being experienced in extending the medical provisions of cities to the vast rural communities of Russia, and of the only partial success hitherto achieved in overcoming these difficulties, we were forced to the conclusion that we were not being victimized by a 'window-dressing' display; and that indeed a marvelous, reformed and extended medical service had been organized in Russia, the methods and procedures of which the rest of the world would do well to study."

AS TO the question whether medical service is better than that under the profit system, the authors say it is impossible to give an answer for Russia, since prior to the revolution there was only a very small portion of the populace who could secure anything approaching adequate medical attention. The doctors themselves were of the opinion that removal of the profit element from the relationship between doctor and patient had greatly increased the doctor's "power for good curative and preventive work." And this, the experts add, is the conclusion of the book, "Medicine and the State," which discusses medical care, private and state, in the other European countries.

New Light on Delphine Lalaurie

resort to resort in Europe, and another story says she was killed in France while hunting wild boar.

The New Orleans newspapers of the time dealt furiously with the affair, speaking of Madame Lalaurie's "horrible crimes," and "atrocious conduct," calling her a "monster," "this Lady Nero," "this new Lucretia Borgia."

In one respect, at least, the newspaper accounts were obviously in error. The Lalaurie mansion was not wrecked. It stands solidly today, and its doors, walls and window grills are unmarred. Some of the original furniture is still in the house, some in the Louisiana State Museum, and none of it shows any evidence of mob violence.

But even more damaging to the legend are documents brought to light by CWA workers. Records of the Council of Municipality No. 1, New Orleans, show that in 1848 and 1849, Delphine Lalaurie, instead of hiding in France, was in New Orleans, and was freeing a slave named Orestes, who was granted permission to remain in Louisiana after his emancipation. If she was a fugitive from justice, why, it is asked, was she in sufficiently good standing with the Mayor and Council of New Orleans for her emancipation petition to be granted? Other legal records of 1849 show her property rights in Louisiana were undisturbed—a strange thing for a person charged with a capital crime in that day and place.

Other records turned up by the CWA research throw some significant light on Montreuil's role as chief accuser of Madame Lalaurie. They show that a large part of the fortune left by Montreuil's father eventually fell into the hands of the widow of Montreuil's brother. She was born Monette Macarty, and was a kinswoman of Delphine Lalaurie. It is not difficult to believe that he detested the whole Macarty tribe, and that this feeling was not softened by observing the splendor and gaiety of the entertainments given at the house of his neighbor, Madame Lalaurie, nee Macarty. Such a situation might account for rumors detrimental to Madame Lalaurie, for the accusations after the fire, and even for newspaper accounts which were so vindictive as to arouse suspicion now that they were inspired by some personal enemy of the woman assailed.

boat and got dragged in. I couldn't afford to lose that propeller, so the next day I wore my bathing suit and dived where the propeller had sunk. I got it, too. The water happened to be only about 15 feet deep at that place."

Incidentally, it may be explained that Mrs. Galbraith is an expert swimmer and diver, as well as a crack tennis player and a good dancer. She has lived on the shores of the lake ever since she was 14, and swimming has been one of her principal diversions.

She says the feature that is most troublesome about carrying mail is the business of selling 3-cent stamps and delivering packages. Letters and newspapers she can put in the boxes and go on her way. But people have to sign for their packages. Sometimes she has to carry a parcel around for a week before she can catch anyone at the mail box to sign for it. Delivery of packages always slows up travel—delivering packages and selling stamps. When these errands don't have to be taken care of she can deliver the mail without stopping. She has developed her technique to such a point that she can merely slow down and chuck the mail in the box as she glides past. Of course, when the flag over a box is up, indicating a letter to be picked up, a complete stop is necessary. Sometimes she has to stop just to chat a minute with the people who come to their mail boxes and wait for her to come along, so they can visit with somebody.

"People out here on the lake don't get to see many other people," she explains, "so they are always glad to see me. Some people back on this lake shore don't get to town more than twice a year. They don't get much mail, either, and they hardly ever write to anybody. Some of my 'customers' use home-made envelopes and wrapping paper when they do scribble out a letter.

"OH YES, I have trouble with fog sometimes, but after 14 years on this lake it takes a pretty thick one to get me off my course.

"There is something about this lake that fascinates me. When I look across the water and see those oil derricks with the sun going down behind them I even want to paint. People think I am crazy for living in my old house on the waterfront here and spending a good part of my time in a boat, but it is all home to me and I like it. If I can have my children, my rambling old house, my motor boat and Caddo Lake, I am very well satisfied."

Calling King George Into Court

have only their own ends to gain.

"I have never had a chance in my life owing to my poor education.

"Your Majesty knows a man past the age of forty is not wanted in employment nowadays unless he has some great things behind him. I am at the end of my rope at last.

"I cannot and will not live on charity any longer from strangers. I have only two ways open for me to live. That is doing what is offered to me and see this matter through to the end, or take my life. This I will never do out of principle for the suffering I have been compelled to bear owing to my birth.

"There is no other way out of it for me as far as I can see except the Royal Family's mercy. I throw myself on the mercy of Your Majesty and the Royal Family for the right to live the rest of my days like an honourable citizen."

"May 9, 1933.

". . . At last the long expected writ arrived this morning, and I am sued by a doctor over £40 ($200).

"It will not be long before another doctor follows suit for £35 ($175) for my late operation.

"There is no other way open for me except as stated in my letter of yesterday's date unless there is something done for me by the Royal Family."

"JUNE, 1933.

"I have just been shown a letter sent to a lady who has borrowed money on my behalf to help me to live that she has been threatened with the Law Courts if same is not paid, and will be compelled to state the reasons, etc., which will bring me into the courts as well."

"July 11, 1933.

"Acting on the advice of several people kind enough to hear my story in the parks and halls, besides being forced to read copies of letters in parks and halls, I am sending them to each ruler and residents of all countries in the next few days."

"November 8, 1933.

"Within the next few days I am having made sandwich boards giving particulars of my case. This board I will personally carry about the streets of London in an attempt to secure justice."

The foregoing series of remarkable letters was first made public when Haddon was given a preliminary hearing in the Bow street police court, a few weeks previous to his commitment for trial at the Old Bailey.

While the Crown regarded the first two letters of Haddon as menacing, it was not certain that they came within the statutes concerning blackmail, but when the would-be-nephew of King George wrote his third letter, bearing the date of May 9, 1933, he blundered most grievously. The words, "Except as stated in my letter of yesterday's date," concern the alternative which he said he must take—not suicide, but the other alternative, namely to get money from his backers. It was this particular missive that resulted in Haddon's committal for trial.

Though Haddon had been writing letters to King George throughout a period from March to November, inclusive, he was not taken into custody until the middle of the latter month. When arrested by Chief Inspector Albert Foster, of Scotland Yard, Haddon is reported to have said:

"This is the only thing I wanted. I don't see why I should be hounded about for being the illegitimate son of the Duke of Clarence. I don't deny writing the letters."

When arraigned in the police court, Haddon observed:

"IT IS a serious charge that has been made against me. I have only tried to live as an honest man. It has been thrown up to me since I was a kid. In India I used to get it from all the white children; the only sympathy I got was from natives and Eurasians. I have had to leave jobs through it. I had to leave the Imperial Maritime Customs. When I got promotion it was thrown up against me."

During the preliminary hearing, the 45-year-old London engineer admitted that he had not only sent many letters to King George, but that he had also posted more than 250 communications to others, including Prime Minister MacDonald and members of both the Commons and House of Lords.

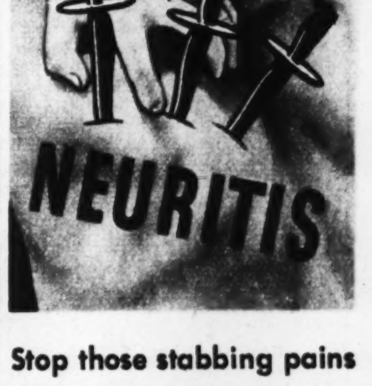
Chief Inspector Foster said when Haddon was arrested at his lodgings in Compton road, Islington, a search revealed many posters in readiness for the decoration of sandwichboards.

Featuring the trial at the Old Bailey was a transcript of the police court proceedings. Haddon's arrival at London's famous old temple of justice created quite a stir, for in his wake followed several women, each of whom he kissed before entering the dock. Haddon, who is a powerfully-built six-footer of charming manners, is said to be popular with women, yet he has never been involved in a scandal of any sort. Throughout his difficulties with the Crown his fiancee, Miss Helen Murray, a graduate of a London hospital, has been his loyal friend and defender. She is believed to be the unnamed woman who financed the cost of his defense.

After Haddon uttered the plea, "Guilty under extreme provocation," Justice Charles assumed the role of a friend and offered the accused some salutary advice as to his future conduct. The Old Bailey jurist counseled the defendant to abandon the belief—"this maggot preying on your mind," the court called it—that he was the illegitimate son of the Duke of Clarence.

THE Justice told Haddon he was going to be given a suspended sentence because, among other reasons, "the person against whom these intolerable threats were made as through the Attorney-General expressed a desire to be in no way vindictive."

"You are a man of enough honour to comply with the court's order. If you let that maggot remain in your brain working, there will be only one dismal end, I am sure. So do use your strength and put it aside and crush it," said Justice Charles, "unless you wish to end in a madhouse. The sooner you depart from that belief you have been nursing the better."



Stop those stabbing pains with "Ben-Gay"—it goes deeper...routs pains faster

"Ben-Gay," the original baume analgesique, penetrates right to the spot of the pain . . . it goes deeper — through skin, flesh, muscles, into the very joints themselves — it stays in longer. This almost immediate hyposensitizing (pain relieving) effect of "Ben-Gay" has never been equaled by its many imitators. It is infinitely more effective than they are. Keep a tube handy . . . use it promptly and generously. Don't suffer pain an hour longer. Every box of the original carries the red "Ben-Gay."

CLEO CLUCK—The belle of Hickory Hollow.

Hokus Pokus is determined to get in the good graces of Cleo Cluck and, thinking that he can awe her with his magic, he and Pat O'Possum have constructed a magic valentine to which they are putting the finishing touches as

THE PLAY BEGINS

HOKUS POKUS—Now then, I'll crouch down in this box and you nail the lid on it and take it over to Cleo's house. Tell her it was left at your place by mistake.

PAT O'POSSUM—All right, boss. But it sure sounds crazy to me. (He nails Hokus in the box and puts it on a sled and takes it over to Cleo, who leans out of a window in answer to his call.)

CLEO CLUCK—There must be some mistake. I'm not expecting any box like that.

CLEO CLUCK—(Impatiently.) Oh, all right. Bring it in. (So Pat takes the box in the house. Cleo asks him to open it for her and Pat tells her he will have to go home for his tools.)

CLEO CLUCK—I wish he had opened it with my hatchet—afraid he'd ruin the box—I don't care what happens to the box. All I want to know is what is inside of it. (No sooner has she said this than there is a loud explosion which blows the box to pieces and blows Cleo on top of the cupboard, and when the smoke clears away there stands the great Hokus.)

HOKUS POKUS—Ah! What did you think of that trick? There is only one person in all the world who can do it and here he stands asking you to be his valentine. (Cleo grabs a broom and Hokus rushes outside. Cleo follows, beating him with the broom.)

CLEO CLUCK—Now get away from here, and let this be a lesson to you not to send folks comic valentines.

YES HORACE, I'VE SPENT ALL DAY LOOKING FOR VALENTINES. COMICS... FOR MY NEIGHBORS. DO YOU KNOW WHERE THERE ARE ANY?
LET ME THINK... A FEW DAYS AGO I SAW SOME... IN THE OTHER END OF TOWN.
NONE OF THESE STORES OVER HERE HAVE ANY EITHER.
SUCH LUCK! WELL I'LL TRY TWO OR THREE MORE PLACES.
YES, COMIC VALENTINES.
I HAVE A FEW. FOUR... FIVE.. MAYBE SIX.
ORPHAN'S HOME
I.O.U.
WELL WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THEM?
OH SOME OF THEM ARE SORT OF TRUE, BUT DON'T YOU THINK THEY'RE ALL RATHER CHEAP?
CHEAP? DO YOU KNOW WHAT I PAID FOR THOSE BABIES?
YOU BOUGHT THEM? REALLY?
CERTAINLY! DID YOU THINK I GRABBED THEM OUT OF SOME WINDOW?
OH YOU KNOW VERY WELL THAT I NATURALLY THOUGHT YOU GOT THEM FROM THE NEIGHBORS HERE.
HELLO! IS THIS THE SERGEANT? LISTEN, THOSE PEOPLE DOWN-STAIRS I CALLED UP ABOUT TWICE TONIGHT ARE STILL ARGUING ABOUT DIZZY VAL-ENTINES! IT'S NOW 12:30!
OH VALERIAN WHY WASTE TIME ON UNDERLINGS? ASK TO TALK TO THE CHIEF OF POLICE HIMSELF.

A BULLY

YOU'RE A TERROR TO THOSE WHO FEAR YOU,
BUT EXTRA POLITE TO THE STRONG.
YOU'RE ALWAYS BAWLING ABOUT YOUR RIGHTS AND ALWAYS IN THE WRONG.

YOU'RE A HARD-BOILED GUY WHEN SHOUTING AT ANY UNFORTUNATE FELLOW.
YOU OFTEN SEE RED BUT A MIRROR
MAKES IT EASY FOR YOU TO SEE YELLOW.

A DEADBEAT

ALWAYS HEAD OVER HEELS IN DEBT,
YOUR MOTTO IN LIFE IS "I SHOULD FRET."
PAYING FOR NOTHING, BUYING MORE,
FIGHTING COLLECTORS AT EVERY DOOR.

A DOLLAR DOWN AND NOTHING A WEEK
IS WHAT CREDITORS GET WHO ARE TOO MEEK;
YOUR I.O.U'S ARE ALL N.G
AND YOUR CREDIT RATING C.O.D.

THE MECHANIC

Jack of all trades, master of none;
You wreck machinery and call it fun.
With borrowed tools, you don't bring back,
You hammer and drill, saw, and hack.

With grimy paws and silly air,
You pull things apart that need repair;
You call yourself a mechanical ace,
But you're just a dub with a greasy face.

BLOWHARD

Often praise rings in your ears.
While you describe a life
Overstuffed with golden deeds
And cool, heroic strife.

How readily you find belief;
The listener does not balk
At any dizzy tale you tell,
When to yourself you talk

"SILENCE UPSTAIRS!" YOU OFTEN BAWL
AND SCREAM ABOUT NOISE NEXTDOOR;
"AH, SNEEZING AGAIN!" YOU HOWL DOWNSTAIRS,
AS YOU POUND AND JUMP ON THE FLOOR.

"I WANT QUIET!" YOU LOUDLY YELL,
IF THE KIDDIES DARE TO PLAY;
NO WONDER THEY TOO CANNOT WAIT
'TILL THE BOGYMAN MOVES AWAY.

THE TIGHTWAD

Borrowing matches, begging cigars,
Using old transfers to ride on cars,
Wearing old hats, a threadbare tie,
And groaning about how the pennies fly

Nursing your nickels, hoarding each dime,
Willing to spend only your time;
You think you are bright, but only a dope
Makes "something for nothing," his daily hope.

ROGER SENDS A VALENTINE

THERE GOES ANOTHER BEASTLY RUN. I HOPE ROGER DOESN'T NOTICE
YOUR COAT'S ALL SNOW AND THERE'S AN AWFUL RUN IN YOUR STOCKING— I'M TERRIBLY SORRY, VI.
I'M NOT A BIT HURT, ROG— NEVER MIND THE STOCKING — LET'S HURRY, WE'LL STILL BE IN TIME
ANOTHER PAIR OF STOCKINGS RUINED— AND POOR ROG THOUGHT HE WAS TO BLAME— HE DIDN'T KNOW THE RUN HAPPENED FIRST
DARLING, I'VE WARNED YOU! CAKE-SOAP RUBBING SPOILS THE ELASTICITY. THEN RUNS WILL POP, YOU KNOW. BETTER STICK TO LUX
VALENTINE'S DAY
WHAT LOVELY STOCKINGS! "TO MY VALENTINE—FROM ROGER" HOW SWEET OF HIM!
WELL, NOTHING BUT LUX WILL EVER WASH THESE I PROMISE
AND WHEN THEY ELOPED
OH, YES, IT IS— I DON'T HAVE TO CARRY PILES OF STOCKINGS NOW— THEY LAST SO LONG WITHOUT RUNS, THANKS TO LUX
JUST ONE LITTLE BAG, HONEY— IT HARDLY LOOKS LARGE ENOUGH TO HOLD ALL YOUR STOCKINGS
LUX

Lux cuts down runs because it saves elasticity so stockings give under strain instead of breaking. Rubbing with cake soap and soaps containing harmful alkali weaken elasticity—the lifeless threads tend to break into runs. Lux has no harmful alkali. Anything safe in water is safe in Lux. Lux stockings every night— it takes only 2 minutes and doubles stocking wear.

NEXT TIME YOU MAKE GELATIN SMELL IT!

Fresh! Fading . . . Almost gone! Fruit flavors fade out quickly. That is why Royal Quick Setting Gelatin is rushed to grocers by fresh-food delivery. When you buy Royal, you can be sure of an abundance of fruit flavor.

● Pour on the hot water. Smell the rising vapor. With ordinary gelatin desserts, the vapor has an unpleasant odor.

With Royal, you get just the delicious fragrance of fruit. Royal tastes as good as it smells! SEVEN FLAVORS: Raspberry, Strawberry, Cherry, Lemon, Orange, Lime and Pineapple.

Also, Royal Chocolate and Vanilla Puddings, made with healthful arrowroot.
